

6-1-1984

UA12/2/2 1984 Talisman

none

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/dlsc_ua_records

Recommended Citation

none, "UA12/2/2 1984 Talisman" (1984). WKU Archives Records. Paper 408.
http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/dlsc_ua_records/408

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by TopSCHOLAR®. It has been accepted for inclusion in WKU Archives Records by an authorized administrator of TopSCHOLAR®. For more information, please contact connie.foster@wku.edu.

Western Kentucky University's
T · a · l · i · s · m · a · n
1984

The touch of Red

Contents

Student life	6
People	88
Academics	194
Organizations	226
Sports	306
Index	368

Copyright 1984 by the Office of University Publications
Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green, Ky. 42101

1984
T·a·l·i·s·m·a·n

Western Kentucky University Bowling Green, Ky. 42101 Vol. 61

Winner of the 1983 Pacemaker and Medalist awards

PRACTICING before the Louisville halftime show are bass drum players Terry Claypool, an Owensboro senior; Fenner Castner, a Louisville freshman; David Bueker, a Bowling Green junior, and Mike Bewley, a Smiths Grove freshman. Band members were wearing shorts to keep cool during the warm fall weather.

— Mike Coffey

FALL meant extra work for physical plant workers, such as Phillip Houchins. He was raking leaves on the south lawn of Downing University Center.

— T. J. Hamilton

ART students fire pottery in a low-heat kiln using a technique called Raku. The students were at art professor Bill Weaver's rental property.

— Ron Bell

the
TOUCH of RED

Everyone felt the touch. Western extended its sphere of influence from the students and faculty to the community, the nation and even the world. And in return Western was touched.

An unusual year of economic regrowth and troubling foreign policies set the backdrop for life on the Hill.

Budget revisions brought in by Gov. Martha Layne Collins threatened to put Kentucky higher education in the red.

Students often saw red as they struggled to adjust to college life. As much as they might have liked, they could not just retreat behind the classroom walls. They had to learn how to get in touch — with Western, the world, and ultimately, themselves.

AT Big Red's Roar, Livingston Taylor performs for a crowd of over 1,000. The event was a part of homecoming weekend. — Ray Thomas

DURING spring finals, Greg Helson, a Louisville junior, and Dana Riddle, a Glasgow freshman, talk in the amphitheater. They were taking a study break. — T. J. Hamilton

the TOUCH...

They were red in the face.

Students and faculty were running, along with the nation. Reflecting the trend towards personal health, they took to the streets. And whether they were running for Western or for themselves they did it with the dedication that embodied the Western spirit.

The fast pace was normal around the Hill. People were rushing to class, to plays, and to games.

The nation was rushing into an election year, and the excitement and debate that typifies those years touched the Hill.

There was little time to stop and reflect on all the changes that were occurring as everyone ran — towards the future.

WARM fall weather gives Mark Lowry, professor of geography and geology, a chance to exercise. He was at the Smith Stadium track.

— Ron Bell

PAPER CUPS litter the road during the Wendy's-Daily News 10K Classic. Nick Rose won the event for the third consecutive year.

— Mike Collins

SPRINKLERS cool Kitty Davidson, a Cadiz freshman, Beth Stubbs, a Fort Campbell freshman, and Camille Forrester, a Louisville junior.

— Tony Rivers

the touch of Student life

From Greek Week to involvement in community volunteer programs, students managed to find plenty to do to occupy their free time.

Homecoming, one of the most-attended events on campus, brought students and alumni together to enjoy a touch of victory.

Concerts by Alabama, Loverboy and Hank Williams Jr. and controversial lectures by G. Gordon Liddy and Timothy Leary provided diversified avenues of entertainment.

Students were exposed to the arts through plays, symphonies and "An Evening of Dance '84," the Dance Company's annual spring production.

Whether it was going to a party or just spending time alone, students were getting more than an education.

—Kevin Egan

Inside:

8 A senior spends some free time flying an ultralight. Jeff LeNeave flies his light aircraft over his hometown of Mayfield.

28 The Western Dance Company shows what it's like behind the scenes and in front of the spotlights.

84 Styles for the year ranged from prep to punk. Students model the latest leisure and formal wear.

WATER BURSTS from a balloon tossed to Cheryl Vest, a Monticello, Ark., freshman. Vest was in a watermelon social behind Central Hall.

BIKERS RACE around the Beech Bend track in The Great Bike Race. Gus Moore, a Murray freshman, won the 20-mile race.

—T. J. Hamilton

“It's different;
it's challenging; it's fun...”
Jeff LeNeave

Ultra-flight

Photos by Bobby Roe

The sound, as it gently took off, was a cross between the ragged hum of a chain saw and the purr of a big model airplane. It looked like a hang glider camouflaged in multi-shades of green as it moved slowly over the hills surrounding the Mayfield-Graves County Airport.

The contraption is an ultralight, a new type of light aircraft which is “exactly like a hang glider except you have a motor,” according to its owner, Jeff LeNeave, a Mayfield senior. By shifting his weight, the pilot maneuvers the craft, making slow and graceful turns.

LeNeave's ultralight, which he bought three years ago for $3,000, has a 34-foot wing span, a 15-horsepower motor and a maximum speed of 50 mph.

Although LeNeave, 22, has been an airplane pilot since he was 16, he was attracted to the ultralight because, “It's different; it's challenging; it's fun and it is somewhat more exciting than flying a regular plane.”

Ultralights are gathering a small number of enthusiasts locally. Early during the fall semester a six-week class was offered on how to fly an ultralight.

LeNeave learned to fly the ultralight “through trial and error in a couple of days.”

Mastering the technique wasn't too hard, he said, although he crashed on his first flight, incurring $60 worth of damage.

LaNeave tries to fly at least once a month at the airport near his home. His two biggest problems, aside from finding the time to enjoy his hobby, are the changing winds and the people who live near the airport.

“People, when you fly over their houses, get mad because of the noise,” LeNeave said, “but I figure since they live near an airport they really can't complain.”

He has never had a major accident in flying his ultralight, but his brother once ran out of gas while flying and had to make an emergency landing in a bean field.

“I have never had the engine quit on me,” LeNeave said, “at least not yet.”

Mary Meehan 7

WHILE FLYING above farmland near his hometown of Mayfield, Jeff LeNeave makes a graceful left turn at about 200 feet. The ultralight had a wingspan of 34 feet.

THE COLORS OF FALL blend with LeNeave's ultralight as he flies over a wooded area near his home.

WHILE LeNEAVE pumps fuel into his ultralight, his father, Dr. Doug LeNeave, repairs the fuel line. The aircraft had a five-gallon tank.

THE ULTRALIGHT'S engine warms up while LeNeave dons his parachute. The aircraft was at Mayfield-Graves County airport.

THE ROLLING landscape is a perfect place for a Sunday morning flight for LeNeave. He could reach a maximum air speed of 50 mph.

HOMECOMING

HOMECOMING QUEEN Julie Lippert, a Paducah junior, receives a platter from Lee Robertson, director of alumni affairs. Her escort, Bowling Green senior Maurice Popelier, looks on.

— Bobby Roe

Cultural affair

It was a day tailor-made for parades, football games and homecoming queens.

Anticipation showed on the faces of hundreds of students and alumni as they lined the parade route that stretched from First Baptist Church to Smith Stadium.

Musicians gave a marching display of their talents, as floats followed. Wagons covered with tissue paper, chicken wire and papier-mache reflected the theme of the parade, "Cultures from Around the World — The Magic of Other Lands."

The float sponsored by the Industrial Engineering and Technology Club and the Society of Mechanical Engineers, won the first-place Regent's Award. The float, featuring an animated Big Red striking a Morehead Eagle, had an inscription on the back that read, "Viva Mexico! Adios 'M' Eagles."

Big Red had roared the night before at a pep rally held in his name. The Western mascot, accompanied by his bodyguards and a lady friend, arrived in style, stepping out of a limousine.

Alpha Omicron Pi sorority and the Scumettes, alias The Dollar Club, performed before the 1000-plus fans.

Coach Jimmy Feix and the football team were there, with the freshman players singing the school fight song.

"You are the best football fans in the world," Feix told the crowd.

continued on page 12

WINCHESTER FRESHMAN quarterback DeWayne Mullins slips through a hole in the Morehead State defensive line. Western won the game by 31 points.

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

— Ray Thomas

WINNER OF THE first-place Regent's Award, the float sponsored by IET and the Society of Mechanical Engineers passes in front of Diddle Arena. The float featured Big Red striking a Morehead chicken.

BLOCKED BY A Morehead player, tailback Pat McKenzie, an Owensboro freshman, unsuccessfully tries to run the ball. Western defeated Morehead 38-7, the biggest win of the season.

HOMECOMING

— Bobby Roe

BIG RED entertains three-year-old Emily Iracane during the Western-Morehead football game. Holding Emily is her sister Cindy, a 1975 Western graduate.

Cultural cont.

Livingston Taylor was the featured performer for Big Red's Roar. He used his piano, guitar and banjo to entertain the crowd during his hour-long concert.

A fireworks display highlighted the evening. A constant flow of sparks that filled the black backdrop produced "oohs" and "aahs" from the crowd.

The fireworks continued Saturday as the Toppers defeated the Morehead Eagles, 38-7, in the game played before a crowd of 14,500 at Smith Stadium.

Freshman Keith Pasket made his presence known in the third quarter with an 80-yard touchdown run. Pasket took a hand-off from junior Danny Embree, as part of the reverse, and scampered all the way to the end zone.

No doubt a few flashbacks ran forefront in minds of the 1973 Western football team members who were there for the game. The Division II runner-up team was honored before the game with President Donald Zacharias shaking the hands of the 38 players and presenting each a red towel — Western's symbol of spirit.

For 13 young ladies, the game was second in their minds. The homecoming queen candidates tightly clutched the arms of their escorts as they stepped along the 50-yard line to await the results.

Julie Lippert, a Paducah junior, was crowned by the 1982 queen, Mary Beth DeCastro.

"I'm so excited I can't stop shaking," Lippert said as she wiped the tears from her eyes. "Lambda Chi and AGR did it all," she said, referring to the two fraternities who sponsored her.

With the rituals of homecoming over, people left for parties and celebrations. Homecoming was over, but not the memories.

Chad Carlton T

FIREWORKS BURST into a colorful finale over Smith Stadium at Big Red's Roar. The event took place the Friday night before homecoming.

BEFORE a crowd of over 1,000, singer Livingston Taylor entertains at Big Red's Roar. The one-hour concert included a blend of piano, guitar and banjo.

— Bobby Roe

— Ray Thom

A week for greeks

Strange bedfellows roamed the grounds of Lampkin Park. They weren't there for a slumber party or a mattress sale; they were participating in a new event in Greek Week — the bed race.

Greek Week co-chairman Jessica Rappaport, a Lexington junior, said, "Many of the traditional Greek Week events were getting really old. Nobody cared about them. Our goal for the 1984 Greek Week was to get greeks interested again."

Other new events were Greek Day, the Great Greek Street Mile and softball, which replaced track and field.

"We're not track and field stars," Rappaport said. "Everyone could play softball, even if they'd just come back from their spring formal."

Alpha Omicron Pi and Sigma Chi placed first in softball. Kappa Delta and Chi Omega placed second and third respectively in the sorority division, while Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Nu placed second and third among the fraternities.

Greek Day, which was held at Lampkin Park, consisted of four or five games in which there was no competition, Rappaport said.

"Everybody was mixed together. We didn't compete against each other," Rappaport said. "Nobody had any complaints."

After the events of Greek Day, the bed-decorating contest was held, followed by the bed race. Alpha Xi Delta and Lambda Chi won the decorating contest, and AOPi and the Pikes won the bed race. Sigma Kappa and AZD placed second and third respectively in the sorority division. In the fraternity division, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Chi placed second and third.

The Great Greek Street Mile was held on Saturday morning. Participants from sororities and fraternities ran from the physical plant to Kentucky Street and back to Downing University Center. Alpha Delta Pi and Kappa Alpha placed first in the race. KD and Chi O placed second and third in the sorority division and the Pikes and Alpha Gamma Rho placed second and third in the fraternity division.

— Rick Musachio

WITH THEIR trophy in the foreground, Chi Omega members hold a candlelight ceremony on the Van Meter stage. Five fraternities and six sororities participated in Spring Sing.

Aside from the bed race and Greek Day, there were several other changes in Greek Week 1984. Spring Sing was moved from Thursday night to Monday night so performers could participate in more events.

According to Spring Sing co-chairman Chuck Hickman, a Shelbyville junior, in the past, Spring Sing performers spent so much time practicing they missed much of Greek Week.

"Western's Spring Sing is so professional and it's a great event, but it's not the only event," Hickman said. "Moving it to Monday night was a good decision."

In the fraternity division, the

continued on page 16

CONCENTRATION shows on the face of David Manwaring, a Flint, Mich., freshman as he and his Sigma Nu teammates pull in tug-of-war. The Sigma Nus beat Sigma Alpha Epsilon, but lost to Pi Kappa Alpha.

— Rick Musachio

KAPPA DELTA members Beth Page, a Glasgow junior, and Wendy Combs, a Versailles junior, watch as the KDs tug against Alpha Delta Pi.

— Rick Musachio

— Rick Musachio

DURING intermission of Spring Sing, Alpha Omicron Pi members show their spirit. The AOPis placed third in the Greek Week event.

AS A part of the annual Spring Sing, Chi Omega members perform a rendition to the Broadway musical "Cats." The Chi Os tied with Kappa Delta for first place.

— Rick Musachio

Greeks cont.

Lambda Chi got first place, with KA and Delta Tau Delta placing second and third respectively. In the sorority division, KD and Chi O tied for first place and AOPi placed third.

Rappaport said she couldn't remember there being a tie before.

"I was really surprised at the tie," KD Spring Sing chairman Karen Neeley, a Wickliffe sophomore, said. "The shows were so different that I thought the judges would be able to choose one or the other."

For the first time, the pancake breakfast was held on Sunday morning on the Gilbert Hall lawn.

"Before most people didn't get to attend because it was held during the week," Rappaport said. "Because it was held on Sunday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., more greeks got to eat and it was neat because for once, something was held near the sororities."

Tug-of-war was held at Western's farm for the first time during Greek Week 1984. It had previously been held at the field beside Pearce-Ford Tower.

"It was a lot more fair because the pit had been dug out evenly," Rappaport said. "Both sides were equal."

The AGRs came back to claim the fraternity tug-of-war title after losing for the first time in eight years in 1983. Sigma Phi Epsilon and Kappa Sig forfeited, so the only fraternities the AGRs pulled were the KAs and the Pikes.

AGR member Jeff Riggs, an Elizabethtown freshman, said the AGRs were "out to carry on a tradition."

"We really got back into the grind and practiced a lot," Riggs said.

In Greek Feud, which was patterned after the television game show "Family Feud," the ADPis took first place in the sorority division and the Chi Os and the AZDs placed second and third respectively. In the fraternity division, the Lambda Chis placed first and the KAs and Delts placed second and third respectively.

The KDs placed first among sororities in the penny drive and the AOPis and Chi Os placed second and third respectively. In the fraternity division the Kappa Sigs placed first and the KAs and Sigma Nus placed second and third respectively.

In the annual banner contest, the KDs placed first and the AOPis and the ADPis placed second and third respectively among the sororities. In the fraternity division the Pikes took first place and the Kappa Sigs and the Lambda Chis placed second and third respectively.

DURING THE bed race, members of Pi Kappa Alpha rush to the finish line. The Pikes won first place in the event, which was held for the first time during Greek Week 1984.

The high point of Greek Week was the awards convocation. The KDs placed first overall in the sorority division and also won the spirit award. The AOPis and Chi Os placed second and third respectively.

The Pikes and the KAs tied for the first place among the fraternities and the AGRs placed third. No second place was given. The Pikes also won the spirit award.

During the convocation, Sigma Alpha Epsilon won the M. Reed Morgan award for outstanding fraternity and Phi Mu won the award for sorority excellence. The most improved fraternity was Sig Ep, and AZD won the award for the most improved sorority.

DELTA TAU DELTA members Billy Lester, a Gilbertville junior, and Lewis Egner, a Benton junior, clean up after the mustard-squirting contest. The event was part of Greek Day at Lampkin Park.

IN FRONT of Downing University Center, Robin Hall, a Nashville, Tenn., freshman, competes in the Greek Week penny drive. Kappa Delta and Kappa Sigma won the event.

A TABLE makes a good resting place for Keith Slaughter, a Bowling Green graduate student. He was partying at the J.C. Pavilion during the Greek Week mixer.

AOPi president Susan Albert, a Paducah sophomore, was named outstanding greek woman. The Randall Capps Award for the outstanding greek man went to SAE president Frank Miller, a Jamestown sophomore.

Miller was also recognized for outstanding service to the community and the university. AOPi member Angie Schieman, a Fort Mitchell junior, was the greek woman recognized for outstanding service.

Bart White, Sigma Chi adviser and Irene Erskine, ADPi adviser, were recognized as outstanding greek advisers.

Greek Week 1984, which was titled "I am unique, because I am greek," was a "tremendous success," according to Rappaport.

Kristen Reeder T.

BEFORE THE WESTERN-Tennessee Tech football game, Jackie Davis, a Louisville freshman, her brother Jim and her parents look at the 1965 campus map in the Helm Library. They stopped there on a tour of the campus.

PARENTS' WEEKEND provides an opportunity for Jackie to have her parents bring clothes and other things from home. After unloading the car the Davises registered in Jackie's dorm and went to see her room.

DURING THE FOOTBALL game against Tennessee Tech, the Davises watch as Western wins 17-0. It was the first game Bob and Judy Davis had attended since they graduated in 1963.

For the fifth consecutive year, Inter-Hall Council sponsored Parents' Weekend. Receptions, a football game, an outdoor concert and a sunrise service gave parents an opportunity to see their children in campus life, and for students to get

A visit from home

Photos by Rick Musacchio

The Louisville freshman paced back and forth in the lobby of her dorm, Bates-Runner, occasionally glancing out the window. Then she saw who she had been expecting.

Jackie Davis walked out to the front porch of the dorm to greet her parents, Bob and Judy Davis.

For them, Parents' Weekend was not only a chance to see their daughter, Jackie, but it was an opportunity to visit an old friend — Western.

The Davises graduated from Western in 1963. Before they had walked through the line, however, they were already husband and wife — they wed in 1961.

WHILE WALKING on campus, Jackie points out the different sights to her father and brother. Her father, a graduate of Western, told of the places that used to be.

It was the fifth year that Inter-Hall Council had sponsored the event, which this year included such activities as receptions in the residence halls, the football game with Tennessee Tech, an outdoor concert with Beau Haddock and Ed Dansereau, the gong show sponsored by Barnes-Campbell Hall and a sunrise service at the Outdoor Theater sponsored by Bemis Lawrence Hall.

When the Davises first arrived, they registered at a table in Jackie's dorm. Then they went to visit her room.

Typical of most college rooms, the light blue walls were covered with posters of rock stars. A yellow director's chair with Jackie's name on it sat in the corner of the room.

Her father looked at all the pictures and other knickknacks. "Where are the books Jackie?" he said jokingly. "I never see books."

After unloading Jackie's belongings from the car, Jackie, her parents and her brother, Jim, took a walk around the campus. Jackie pointed out the new, while her parents told her of what used to be.

As they walked by the library, her father explained that the gym, where he took his physical education classes, used to be there. As they continued their leisurely stroll, Jackie's parents pointed out the old hangouts and other buildings.

Near the stadium, Davis bought a red towel to help cheer on his alma mater. The temperature was a little warm for an October day as they watched Western defeat Tennessee Tech, which was the first game of Western's that the Davises had seen since they graduated.

Davis thought the weekend was a good opportunity for parents to visit their children at school. "I think it's good," he said. "We wouldn't come down otherwise."

Karen Whitaker

AFTER AN EVENTFUL weekend, Jackie hugs her mother goodbye. Her father was watching as they prepared to leave.

Staged attractions

C O N C E R T S

For the first time in several years, Western was treated to a variety of concerts. There was something for everyone: Livingston Taylor, The Producers, The Romantics, Alabama, Loverboy, and Hank Williams Jr.

Alabama was the first of Western's concerts. For the second consecutive year, Alabama — Randy Owen, Jeff Cook, Mark Herndon, and Teddy Gentry — performed in front of a crowd of over 10,000 in Diddle Arena.

"Alabama was so impressed with the atmosphere in Bowling Green last year that they wanted to come here again," Tom Allen, coordinator of the concert and University Center Board chairman, said.

"I came to last year's Alabama concert and it was fantastic," Jack Quire, a Jeffersonton senior, said. "Alabama has turned me on to country music and I consider this year's concert the highlight of my semester, except for graduation."

When Alabama took centerstage, the crowd was ready. Owen opened the show with "Love in the First Degree" and the crowd jumped to their feet and stayed there throughout the concert. Owen then grabbed the microphone and said to the crowd, "Thank you for making our lives more beautiful!"

Alabama sang new and old songs during their two-hour concert. They sang their old favorites, such as "Take Me Down," "Dixieband Delight," "The Closer You Get" and "Old Flame." During "Old Flame" the crowd held butane lighters to emphasize their appreciation for the song.

"'Old Flame' really got the audience involved," Lori Campbell, a Coldwater, Mich., senior, said. "I've never been to a concert where I've seen the group get the audience involved as Alabama did throughout the concert. They cared about the audience. I could tell it was not just another concert to them."

"QUEEN OF THE BROKEN HEARTS" is sung by Mike Reno, lead singer of Loverboy. The rock band performed Feb. 23 in Diddle Arena.

The crowd brought Alabama out for two encores. During the first encore, the audience response was just as strong as it was at the beginning of the concert. After the first encore, smoke erupted from the stage and many thought the concert was over, but once again, Alabama came back out to hold the audience in their hands. They sang a long version of "Taking Care of Business" and the whole crowd was on their feet with their hands overhead.

Herndon, Alabama's drummer,

— T. J. Hamilton

AS A PART OF HOMECOMING, Livingston Taylor performs at Smith Stadium. The concert was sponsored by University Center Board.

IN FRONT of a crowd of 6,340, Hank Williams Jr. plays his harmonica into the microphone. Williams performed in Diddle Arena April 6.

— Bobby Roe

said, "Thank you Bowling Green. We'll never forget you!"

Livingston Taylor continued Western's concert season with a performance at Big Red's Roar, part of the homecoming celebration. Although Taylor is often associated with his brother James, he has established a name in his own right with his comedian antics and folksy tunes. Taylor picked his banjo, strummed his guitar and pounded his piano in front of a crowd of more than 1,000 in Smith Stadium.

"The atmosphere before he came on was charged with electricity," Kim Logan, a Hendersonville sophomore, said. "But he was so mellow that the electricity took a definite plunge. But I really enjoyed his music."

On Nov. 15, The Producers, a progressive pop band out of Atlanta, appeared in the Downing University Center Theater. Although only 300 people attended the concert, it paved the way for bigger rock groups to book concerts: The Romantics and Loverboy. The band performed songs from its first two albums, "The Producers" and "You Make the Heat."

continued on page 22

— Camille Forrester

— Tony Krieger

C O N C E R T S

Dec. 6 was a first for Western — a big new-wave band, The Romantics, appeared in concert at the Garrett Conference Center Ballroom.

The band, which is based in Detroit, Mich., performed songs from their four albums, such as "Do Me Any Way You Wanna" and "Love Me to the Max."

During the 90-minute concert, the four Romantics, who sported black leather and greased hair, sang to a crowd of about 900 bopping new-wavers.

The success of The Producers and The Romantics enabled UCB to book an even bigger rock band: Loverboy.

"It's about time Western got a top-name rock-and-roll band," Campbell said. "It seems we only get country music stars, and although this concert was not Journey or John Cougar, it will do."

Loverboy began their Feb. 23 concert with "Not That Kind of Girl" as the Canadian band made their first appearance in Diddle Arena.

Mike Reno, lead singer; Paul Dean, lead guitar; Scott Smith, drums; Doug Johnson, keyboard; and Matt Frenette, bass, took control of the anxious audience as they dedicated their second song, "Standing in the Strike Zone," to "anyone wanting to rock-and-roll."

During this song, a laser show with green and blue lights was presented. A "zone" was placed on each band member and one was cast straight toward the audience. As Reno sang, he stood under the audience zone and placed his hands on the "edge" of the laser. Moving his hands he made the zone get smaller and bigger. The illusion made the audience scream even louder.

"The laser show was awesome," David Noble, an Owensboro junior, said. "Loverboy came out rocking, and it was a tenacious concert."

Paid attendance at the concert was 5,863, which was low compared to the 8,000 expected by UCB.

The crowd called Loverboy back for two encores as they sang their hits, "Working for the Weekend,"

IN FRONT of a crowd of more than 10,000, Alabama members Randy Owen, Jeff Cook, and Teddy Gentry clown around on stage. Alabama appeared in Diddle Arena for the second consecutive year.

"Turn Me Loose" and "Hot Girls in Love." They ended their concert with "Hot Tonight," and by the audience's reaction, they were.

In April, UCB brought Hank Williams Jr. to Bowling Green and 6,340 people attended the concert in Diddle Arena.

The crowd, many dressed in flannel shirts, boots, and cowboy hats, listened to Williams sing "All My Rowdy Friends are Coming Over Tonight," "Women I've Never Had," and a remake of his father's "Honky Tonkin."

At the end of the concert, Williams kicked over an electric fan and began beating it with a microphone stand, sending pieces of plastic grill across the stage.

Although many students enjoyed the concert, others were disappointed with Williams' behavior.

"I thought he changed a lot of songs so you couldn't recognize them," Anne Pope, a Richmond senior, said. She also said she didn't understand why Williams tore up the fan.

Jessie Rappaport T

— Mary Ann Lyons

T H E A T E R

A salesman who wouldn't admit to his own failures and a small orphan boy who wasn't afraid to ask for more gruel were the main characters in two of the brilliant productions presented by the communication and theater department and the music department last season.

Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" was a moving drama about a man named Willie Loman and his struggles — both with his profession and with his family.

As the first production of the season, the play was performed in October and featured David Schram as Willie Loman. Schram, a professional actor, had off-broadway, regional, Broadway, and network television experience.

A "SHEEP" girl from "Aesop's Fables" is portrayed by Colleen Judge, a Lorain, Ohio, freshman. The production was a twist of Aesop's Fables.

The other major production of the season was "Oliver," the musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' classic novel "Oliver Twist." It centered around an orphan boy and his life among Fagan's young pick pockets.

"Oliver" was the culmination of eight weeks of work and about $50,200. In addition to more than 30 Western students, there were 16 Bowling Green children chosen to be in the play.

"Most of the children already had some experience in acting," William Leonard, director of the play, said.

The lead role of "Oliver" was played by Bart Loving, an Elizabethtown freshman.

"Being a freshman makes achieving success more of a challenge," Loving said.

Other plays presented were Jack Hefner's "Vanities" and Anna

— Mary Ann Lyons

ACTORS Jamie Short, a Louisville freshman, and Geoffrey Dennes, also a Louisville freshman, sing a number during the play "Scrooge." Short played the Ghost of Christmas Present and Dennes played Ebenezer Scrooge.

Cora Mowatt's comedy "Fashion."

"Vanities" was the story of three girls who had been best friends throughout their lives. It focused on the different stages they went through and their losses and gains in life.

The play opened in a 1960s high school setting, continued throughout the girls' college days and ended six years later at a reunion held by one of the three girls.

According to director Leonard, "Vanities" was chosen as the second main stage production of the season to present "a variety of dramatic literature and a challenge to the students."

The language of "Vanities" involved some profanity, but Leonard said he was not worried about negative audience reactions. But a few changes were made by the cast in order to make the characters more real, he said.

"Since the audience was primarily college students, no one seemed offended by the language," Leonard said.

continued on page 24

T H E A T E R

The play seemed to hit home with many members of the audience and caused them to stop and think. Leonard said he felt that "Vanities" was an artistic success.

"I think the play reaches the high standards that Western's theater department has set," Leonard said. Arna Cora Mowatt's "Fashion" was a nineteenth century American comedy poking fun at Americans who foolishly attempted to live by the fashions of Europe.

As the scenery was changed, the audience was presented with a variety of entertainment, as was the custom during the nineteenth century.

The audience seemed to thoroughly enjoy the finale that included a flag-waving, patriotic speech given by one of the main characters, musically accompanied by the entire cast.

Closing out the theater season was the eleventh annual production of "An Evening of Dance '84." It was presented by the Western Kentucky University Dance Company and was topped off by a number including variations from Ballet Suites No. 1 and No. 2 by Dimitri Shostakovich.

In addition to the six major theater productions, the communication and theater department also presented seven shows for children: "Red Shoes," "Aesop's Fables," "Scream and Lock the Door," "Go Jump in the Lake," "Through the Looking Glass," "This Ark is Leaking," and "Snow White."

"Aesop's Fables," an updated version of Aesop's Fables, twisted the fables and gave them new morals. Instead of presenting animals pretending to be people, as in the original fable, this version featured people pretending to be animals. The costumes, which were not actual animal costumes, as in the traditional version, illustrated the twist to the stories.

The music, like the script and costumes, updated the fables. When the cast sang, the accompanying music wasn't gentle and flowing; it was a surprisingly upbeat, steady rock.

In late October, "This Ark is Leaking," a touring show sponsored by the Bowling Green-Warren County Arts Commission and the Children's Theatre, began playing at about 20 elementary schools in the Bowling Green-Warren County area.

This play, also a collection of stories based on Aesop's Fables, was written by Tom Fullers, a Western graduate, and directed by Scott Campbell, a London senior.

In a performance at L. C. Curry Elementary School, "The Unicorn and the Unicorn" seemed to be the favorite. It was a story about a unicorn who encountered a univac computer in the woods. The unicorn had a difficult time understanding the cold logic of the computer, which took a description of the unicorn and logically deduced that it was a rhinoceros.

The play also included more traditional fables, such as "The Frogs," "The Oak and the Reeds," "The Lion and the Three Councilors," and "The Fox who Lost her Tail."

The Children's Theatre's production of "Snow White" played in the Russell H. Miller Theatre Jan. 26-29. This production also had an unusual twist to it: the seven dwarfs were played by local children.

—Todd Harris

According to the director of the play, Neva Gielow, a Bowling Green graduate student, 23 children auditioned for the parts.

Gielow, who directed the play for graduate credit, said it was not the first time she headed a production with children in the major roles.

"Children are really easy to work with," she said. "To them it's all fun and games and they're very eager to please. I tried to keep up their enthusiasm by making practices relatively short and letting them take frequent breaks."

Because "Snow White" was a musical and was also choreographed Gielow felt the children got the chance to be exposed to a lot of culture.

"Snow White" was also unique in that the children's makeup was designed especially for them. "We made the dwarfs look more like elves, rather than the traditional old men," Gielow said. "We gave them rosey cheeks because they are children."

—Kay Salilee

L E C T U R E S

Watergate felon G. Gordon Liddy and drug advocate Dr. Timothy Leary highlighted the lecture series during the year. University Center Board brought Liddy to Diddle Arena on Nov. 16 to a crowd of about 2,200.

UCB spent $4,250 to bring Liddy to Western, causing some debate about the caliber of speakers invited. Many students felt the lecture should have been boycotted to show Liddy that they did not condone his involvement in the Watergate scandal.

Rex Hurt, UCB lecture committee chairman, said they invited Liddy to speak because he "was the largest available crowd-drawer we could pull in."

Liddy, whose background includes military service, law school, work for the FBI, and staff assistant to Richard M. Nixon, gives between 80 and 120 speeches annually.

Much of Liddy's speech was centered on the illusions people have about the United States.

"We live lives of illusion," Liddy said. "The world is a very bad neighborhood."

Liddy said that the United States is militarily inferior to the Soviet Union. "We are misled by the media to our quality."

Liddy believes that while in the past the U.S. has been viewed as being tough, today it is seen as easy prey. "Our people have many illusions about our government," he said. "Lots of our money is wasted on things we already have."

Another illusion, according to Liddy, is that "spying is a dirty business."

"We believe it is something we shouldn't be involved in," Liddy said. "Spying helps gain two things: finding out the capabilities of other nations, and their intentions."

Winning is of great importance to Liddy and he said he believes in doing whatever is necessary to win.

When Liddy was serving a prison term for his involvement in Watergate, he lived by a rule he learned from organized crime: "If you can't lose, you can't win. There is risk involved in everything." Liddy said he still lives by that rule.

Although many students may have boycotted the Liddy lecture, many others went and found it

continued on page 26

—Mike Healy

CONTROVERSIAL Watergate felon G. Gordon Liddy tells a crowd of about 2,200, "Americans are cutting their own throats in believing everything the government tells them." The Liddy lecture was sponsored by the University Center Board.

ACTORS are critiqued on their performance in "Go Jump in the Lake" by director Ken Tonks, a Nashville, Tenn., junior. The Children's Theatre produced the play in November.

LECTURES

interesting, even if they did not agree with all of Liddy's views.

"I thought it was interesting and informative," Lorri Burchett, a Hopkinsville junior, said. "I think more students should have come ... because when we graduate and get out into the real world, we'll have to know about things like this."

Dr. Timothy Leary drew a crowd of about 1000 to the Garrett Ballroom on March 21.

Once branded as the "most dangerous man alive," Leary rose to national prominence in the 1960s with his controversial drug experiments. He coined the phrase "Turn-on, tune-in, drop-out" which emphasized a statement of self-discovery and self-actualization.

"When I said 'drop out,' I didn't mean drop out of school," Leary said. "I meant drop out of conformity — think of yourself, try something new."

Leary's views tended to be unpredictable and frequently surprising.

"I believe that everyone who uses LSD should be trained," he said. "I still take LSD, but I'm totally against drug abuse. I do try to take every illegal drug every year, but do not put anything in your brain unless you know what you are doing or why you do it."

"I believe in truth and love of human beings," Leary said. "Have faith in yourselves!"

On Feb. 8, President Donald Zacharias presented a state of the university address in the Downing University Center Theater. Over 80 students attended his speech, in which they were given the opportunity to ask questions.

"Earthwalk," sponsored by

DURING a Monday afternoon rehearsal, Sherri Phelps, a Morgantown senior, sings with the Chamber Singers. Dr. Wayne Hobbs directed the group.

Kodak, was presented April 3 in the DUC theater. The presentation included a slide show of Phil and Dave Walker, who walked 5000 miles from Anchorage, Alaska, to the Mexican border of Southern California in 14 months.

The Dollmaker, a made-for-television movie starring Jane Fonda, was shown in the DUC theater

April 19, and was sponsored by the president's office, the English department and UCB. The movie, which was filmed in Kentucky, was also written by a Kentuckian, Harriet Simpson Arnow, who appeared after the sneak preview to answer questions.

Jessica Rappaport and Jennifer Hatfield

FINE ARTS

With a performance by the Alabama Shakespeare Festival Company, the Fine Arts Festival opened its 1983-84 season.

The company performed "The Comedy of Errors" in Van Meter Auditorium on Sept. 13. Before their performance, members of the company gave a workshop for theater students.

The play was about a man and his servant who go to a city where their long-lost twins live. The man, Antipholus, and his servant, Dromio, find that the townspeople already know them.

They were confused as to how the people knew them, and tried to understand what was going on. At the end of the play, both sets of twins were reunited.

In November another type of performance was sponsored by the Festival — a dance company. The Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble came to Western on Nov. 19.

The Ailey Ensemble was formed in 1974 in New York, as founder Alvin Ailey began the company for students. Dancers from all over the states and other countries travel about 12 weeks during the year.

Three dances were performed, all modern with ballet and jazz influences.

On Feb. 23, Marion Cawood, a soprano, performed as part of the festival. The concert was originally scheduled by soprano Elizabeth Volkman, but Volkman cancelled for personal reasons.

Cawood is an artist and vocal instructor at David Lipscomb College in Nashville, Tenn.

March 22 brought the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra to Van Meter. According to John Warren Oakes, chairman of the Fine Arts Festival Committee, the symphony was probably the most successful event of the year.

The orchestra was conducted by Louis Lane, the principal guest conductor of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. The program was Weber's Overture to "Oberon," Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C Major Op. 21 and Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," orchestrated by Maurice Ravel.

A New York-based touring company, The Acting Company, performed on April 8. Their production of "The Cradle Will Rock," was about an industry's fight against industrialization. The play was set in the 1930s in a steel town.

The final production for the season was given by Sylvia Kersenbaum, a pianist. Kersenbaum performed pieces by Chopin, Beethoven and Schubert in Van Meter on April 16.

Kersenbaum is an Argentine-born pianist who has studied in Rome and Vienna. She made her debut in Paris, London and Vienna in 1971. She recently made her New York debut at Hunter College.

All the performers were chosen by the Fine Arts Festival Committee that met in the fall. "The committee met and then I attended a meeting in Atlanta," said Oakes. "I came back with information about the different performers."

Melanie Mietz

BOWLING GREEN/Western Symphony director Gary Dilworth warms up the orchestra during a practice. They were rehearsing in the Capitol Arts Center.

BEFORE THE performance of the Bowling Green/Western Symphony, Joan Mack, a professor at Owensboro Brescia College, rehearses on her cello.

— T. J. Hamilton

THE GRACE of pointe is shown in the slippers of Debbie Smiley, a High Point, N.C., senior. She was dancing during a performance of "An Evening of Dance '84."

Pointe of view

Photos by T. J. Hamilton

One Western Dance Company member gently swung his arm around another member's shoulder, and squeezed him long enough to say "good show." At first glance, it might have looked like the end of a good movie. However, even though many of the dancers have had theater training, the personal exchange was not an act.

It was a reaction to one night's performance of "An Evening of Dance '84" which ran April 25th through the 29th. Beverly Veenker, the director of the show, said, "I don't know many people who are able to do something they love to do and call it work." Obviously, she is proud of the students in the Dance Company. As she looked around her office just two days before the show ended, she sounded like a mother who is pleasantly displeased at being needed when she said, "Nothing is sacred anymore." Her students have a special attachment to her, and sacred indeed.

But not everything was smooth. It rained on the first two opening nights and an unusual number of MIMICKING another performer's hands, Carol Iversen, a Warren Central High School junior, performs to "Jest in Time." Iversen was a member of the prep company.

Dance Company members had injuries. Dr. John Erskine, a physiotherapist, sat backstage for every performance to insure proper care of the injuries. Veenker called a dance therapist who said the moisture probably caused the injuries because muscles cannot adapt quickly to sudden changes in humidity. Some of the dancers were only half-kidding when they said after Thursday night's show, "Well I wonder who it's going to be tomorrow."

Monica Blackman, a Lockport, N.Y., freshman, said Veenker cares about the dancers rather than just making the show look great; if dancers are injured like Blackman was opening night, she doesn't want them dancing. Veenker said, "No performance is worth a career. If a dancer suffers an injury, then the whole dance company eventually suffers."

Laurie Stream, a St. Louis junior, was injured two weeks before the show, but hid it for a week. "Dr. Erskine," Stream said, "looked at my foot before I went on about a week before the show was to begin and said I shouldn't dance if I wanted to dance again." Although Stream choreographed "Grease" for Bowling Green High School, she was unable to perform at her own school for the '84 spring show.

continued on page 31

AFTER rehearsing "10th Street Tavern," Scott Campbell, a London senior, walks across stage. Campbell was going over his steps after the dress rehearsal.

DURING dress rehearsal for an "Evening of Dance '84," Kenny Anders, a Burkeville junior, and Heidi Swenk, a Burke, Va., freshman, perform to "Duetty." The dance company rehearsed a full year before the opening of the show.

AFTER rehearsal, Debbie Smiley rests on the stage while the men go over their problems with Beverly Veenker, the director of the show. "I don't know many people who are able to do something they like and call it work," Veenker said.

View cont.

Stream was not alone. Blackman said dancers fear injury more than anything, but Western has its own security blanket, almost like training wheels for the beginning dancer. Western offers a performing arts degree and a Dance Company member who is a performing arts major can experience the triple bonus, or the triple threat: dancing, singing, acting. It's even better for repertory members of the Dance Company because chances are even greater that they will gain teaching experience. Repertory members are eligible to teach the Youth Dance Program, a program designed to promote dance awareness among the youth of Bowling Green.

Or, they may teach their Dance Company members by choreographing their own number for approval by Veenker. Their proposals describe costume, lighting and dance procedures. Veenker tries to allow as many student-choreographed numbers as possible. In fact, Veenker only choreographed eight of the 15 numbers in "An Evening of Dance '84."

Gerry Mullins, a senior speech and theater major from Louisville, said "I'm a triple threat, not just a single threat, and when I go to an audition I'm going to be able to sing, dance, act, teach — whatever they want me to do."

THE MOVEMENT of dance is shown by Richard Kurber, a Louisville sophomore, and Gerry Mullins, a Louisville senior, during a rehearsal of "An Evening of Dance '84," a lack of the round wholeness

essential to egoless performances. And without resting or stopping, the Dance Company has tirelessly serviced the community with a full tank of dance and drama and song by performing at the elementary and secondary school levels. The company is service oriented in part because it is the only dance company in the Bowling Green area, but completely united because, according to Veenker, the Dance Company members have not only made personal and academic sacrifices, but financial ones as well.

Cathy Rose ▢

The Dance company is divided into two sections. The workshop section is composed primarily of freshmen and sophomores and the repertory section is composed primarily of juniors and seniors.

"Sometimes," Veenker said, "I ask myself, 'OK, could I take this person on a bus tour for six weeks and still feel good about dancing with him or her?' when I select which dancers will be in the repertory part of the company." For Veenker the proof of a quality dancer rests in the determining fact of whether or not one is a quality person — a person who can handle stress with a reasonable amount of understanding, who can pursue dance even when the body is so sore at night it can't go to sleep, and who can make the effort seem effortless. If not, then Veenker feels there is a lack of the round wholeness years of preparation and a combination of beauty and talent make

For two women,

Dreams come true

—Alan Warren

Every little girl's dream is to be Miss America, to be crowned and walk down the runway in front of a huge crowd.

But before the dream of Miss America can be a reality, there are many smaller pageants that are preliminary events to the grand finale. One preliminary scholarship pageant was Miss Western, held on April 11.

To the 16 girls competing in the pageant, Miss Western was no less important than Miss America. There were weeks of planning, preparation and the final dress rehearsal the night before the event.

"I entered a pageant when I was 16, and first won when I was 17," Angie Speck, an Elizabethtown junior, said. "Everything prepared me for this experience."

In addition to winning the title, Speck received a $400 scholarship and a trophy. The crown also entitled her to participate in the Miss Kentucky Pageant. For the talent portion, which counted 50 percent, Speck performed a piano piece, "William's Fantasy," by Jerry CROWNING the new Miss Western, Angela Speck, an Elizabethtown junior, is last year's queen, Debbie McBride, a Leitchfield senior. Sixteen contestants vied for the title.

Williams.

"It's a dream come true," she said. "But it's just the beginning of a dream."

First runner-up was Anne Moore, a Bowling Green junior. For the talent competition she performed a classical dance. Moore received a $300 scholarship and a trophy.

Kay Powell, a Philpot senior, received second runner-up and a $200 scholarship. She also received the Miss Participation award and a $100 scholarship.

Third runner-up was Tracey Hoffmeyer, a Louisville freshman. Dorothy Porter, a Lebanon senior, was fourth runner-up.

For the first time, Alpha Phi Omega, a service fraternity, sponsored the pageant. Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, a music fraternity, had sponsored the event in the past. Music for the event, which was held in Van Meter Auditorium, was provided by the University Jazz Ensemble.

One week later in the Garrett Ballroom, a smaller but equally important pageant took place. Six contestants competed for the title of Miss Black Western.

As in the Miss Western Pageant, members competed in talent, swimsuit and evening gown divisions. Three finalists were chosen and each had to answer a question asked by Sheila Barfield, a Mitchellville, Md., junior, and one of the emcees.

AFTER being crowned Miss Black Western, Lisa McGuire, a Russellville freshman, is congratulated by her cousin, Yolanda Cross. McGuire received a $150 scholarship with the title.

The finalists were Francetta Norwood, a St. Louis, Mo., freshman; Jacqueline Verge, a Murfreesboro, Tenn., sophomore, and Lisa McGuire, a Russellville freshman.

As the pageant came to a close, McGuire was named the new Miss Black Western. Earlier in the evening, McGuire had been named the divisional winner of both the swimsuit and talent competitions. For her talent segment, she sang "More, More, More" and accompanied herself on the piano.

"I'm happy that I could represent Western as a black woman and as an individual," she said. Along with the title, McGuire received a $150 scholarship.

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority sponsored the 13th annual event. The theme for the pageant was "Black Women Achieving More in '84."

With attendance at about 200, there was a decrease from previous years. Brents, a Louisville senior, said, "Everything went great; we just didn't publicize the event well enough."

Melanie Mietz

DURING the Miss Western competition, Angie Speck models her swimsuit. Speck won the title of Miss Western.

—Greg Lovett

DURING the Miss Black Western Pageant, Feleasha Page, a Bowling Green senior, sits while Phyllis Davis, an Indianapolis, Ind., sophomore, fixes her hair. Page was a contestant in the pageant.

—Greg Lovett

—T. J. Hamilton

AT ONE of the 30 booths, Katie Blackerby, a Bowling Green freshman, paints on Tommi Smith's face. Smith, a Campbellsville senior, was chairman for the two-day event.

AFTER BEING dropped in the dunking booth, Jessica Rappaport, a Lexington junior, comes out of the water dripping wet. The event was part of the weekend street fair.

— Kevin Egan

“We thought it was a tremendous success.”
— Tommi Smith ”

— Linda Sherwood

A red hot affair

Greeks ran for fun. Hank Williams Jr. sang. Vaudevillians performed. Big Red dueled with knights. Games were played.

And it was all in the spirit of having a Western Affair.

On the weekend of April 6th, Inter-Hall Council presented the first Western Affair — a street fair on the south lawn of Downing University Center.

“We thought it was a tremendous success for a first try,” Western Affair chairwoman Tommi Smith said.

Smith, a Campbellsville senior, said plans for the event began in November.

“In my hometown, we have an activity like this on July 4th,” she said. “I thought that maybe we could incorporate it into a campus event.”

Smith, a member of IHC, discussed the idea with some friends and then presented it to IHC for consideration.

“Everybody really liked the idea,” she said, “so plans began immediately.”

DURING the weekend activities, Ken Tonks, a Nashville, Tenn., junior; Bart Lovina, a Rineyville freshman, and Troy Lambert, a Louisville freshman perform a Vaudeville Act.

Smith said IHC wanted to make it a campus and civic event. She said a lot of civic organizations had wanted to find a way to get on campus and this seemed like a perfect way.

However, only two civic groups — the Corvette Club and Southern Kentucky Guild of Artisans and Craftsmen — set up booths.

She said that about 25 campus organizations were represented.

Smith estimated that about 750 people attended the event on Saturday. Bad weather forced the event inside on Sunday which resulted in a very low attendance.

She said IHC still met its three goals — getting students more involved, getting a better working relationship between Western and Bowling Green and raising money for scholarships.

Smith said the organizations were asked to donate their profits, after costs, to the scholarship of their choice.

Public relations chairwoman Neil Withers said IHC used several methods of advertising.

“We lived and breathed Western Affair,” Withers, a Cynthiana sophomore, said.

She said several different flyers were distributed, newspaper ads were taken out, and some banners were made. Bowling Green Junior College provided IHC with a 40-foot banner which also advertised the event.

Smith said some of the weekend's events had not actually been planned in conjunction with the Western Affair, but they fit together rather well. Greek Week occurred during that week and the Hank Williams Jr. concert was also performed Friday night.

Jill Lyttle, president of Potter Hall, said her dorm had come up with the idea of the Bahama Bash and were going to do it by themselves.

After joining with South and Keen halls, though, they decided to have the dance in conjunction with the Western Affair.

Lyttle, a Williamsburg junior, said the dance, which also included a limbo contest, lasted about four hours and attracted about 100 people.

“The music outside would have attracted more people that were just out walking around,” she said.

“Now that people have seen how much fun it was this year, I really think that we'll get a lot more attendance from the students and the Bowling Green community next year,” she said.

Linda Sherwood

— Kevin Egan

A four-year bond

Photos by T. J. Hamilton

Not all roommates stuck it out for four years, but the ones who did found different ways of getting along.

Kay Mouser, a Horse Cave senior, and Michelle McNeill, a Nashville, Tenn., senior, were two who did make it four years together in the same room — 721 Central Hall.

Mouser, an information systems major, said that as she and her roommate became closer friends they began doing more things together. They studied and sunbathed in the stadium, and "we always get sick at the same time."

But Rory Kennedy, a Louisville senior and broadcasting major, said time apart from a four-year roommate was essential. He said the bottom line was "you can either get along or you can't. It's cut and dry."

But by rooming together, Kennedy said he and Steffey often understood each other while others were in the dark. "Just on common sense things you think a lot alike. It's really weird."

"Yeah," Steffey said, "because sometimes it will be real off the wall stuff."

The common wavelength caused some problems. Kennedy said the biggest fight they had "was last semester over going out that Thursday night. All it was was communication."

Steffey remembered, "When we're talking, we can leave out a lot of things people generally say, because we know what we're talking about. That was the big problem that night. We left too much out."

"It was all over in 15 to 20 minutes, once we talked about it."

Because of their differences, one might think McNeill and Mouser would clash. Mouser, a perky 5-foot-nothing blonde, would hardly fit in with McNeill, whose graceful 5-foot 11-inch frame curled tightly beneath a quilt.

"In my opinion," Mouser said, "we have gotten along extremely well. We have never gotten into it over anything. Never."

"Right, never," McNeill agreed. "That's an accomplishment for me."

FOUR-YEAR roommates Vince Volkerding, a Louisville senior, and Kerry Metheny, a Greenville senior, study for a geography final. Both were geography majors and took several classes together.

"I think we haven't had to do a lot of giving and taking," Mouser said. "I don't think we let things get to us like other people may — little picky things."

McNeill said, "One reason people don't get along (in the dorm) is wearing each other's clothes. The most we ever share is a hair ribbon or a barrette."

"We have some things we don't agree on, but nothing major. I think Kay has opened my eyes up. I may not agree, but I'll have a broader view on it."

As McNeill spoke, she wrapped her legs neatly with the blanket. "This is one of our major differences. Kay is really hot natured, and I am cold natured. That's one thing she's had to adapt to."

Weather-related quirks weren't unique to girls. Kerry Metheny, a Greenville senior, said his roommate of four years, Vince Volkerding, gets more excited over snow than necessary.

LOUISVILLE seniors Rory Kennedy and Darryl Steffey spend a night playing poker in their room. The two had been living in the same Pearce-Ford Tower room for four years.

"Every winter when it snows, he acts like a two-year-old kid," Metheny said. "He woke me up one night to look at the snow."

"It was a good snow!" Volkerding, a Louisville senior, said. He and Metheny are both geography majors with an interest in weather. "I like interesting weather. It's boring without it."

"Anyone who's really interested in weather will tell you the same thing. They like snow, they like storms; it makes it interesting."

Volkerding moved in with Metheny two weeks into their freshman year, swapping roommates in order to keep the peace.

Volkerding said his first roommate "used to come in Sunday morning and pull the shades and say, 'Rise and Shine!' And he had his Marilyn Monroe stuff. I couldn't stand it."

Metheny had some quirks which Volkerding didn't like either. For instance, sometimes Metheny would dance to music in the room. He said

Volkerding "will come in and he calls it the Greenville jig."

"There's not anything wrong with it," Volkerding explained. "I just don't dance, that's all."

Mouser and McNeill felt their time together made them more comfortable in sharing opinions and feelings. They attended different churches, which gave them the chance to trade insights, McNeill said.

"If you're rooming with a non-Christian, and you sit down to do your quiet time or read the Bible, you might wonder what they're thinking."

Mouser noticed other girls griping about their roommates, but she said it was best for the relationship to avoid the gossip trap.

"Things like that always get back," McNeill agreed. "I think that in itself causes resentment."

"Yeah," Mouser agreed, "because once it's there you don't forget it. It just kind of builds."

Instead of building resentment, they feel they've built a friendship. They've moved into the same room with the same bright green carpet four years in a row. In May, they moved out for the last time.

"I think your friends in college will be your friends when you leave. I'm not a person who likes to say good-bye."

McNeill had thought ahead. "I'm scared," she said, "probably more so than Kay. This is security."

"When I move out, I don't feel I'll ever get a roommate that's the same. I think after I'm out a month it will really hit me, because I'll be who-knows-where and she'll be who-knows-where."

Kennedy and Steffey anticipated a possible future together. Kennedy hoped to go to flight school and Steffey wanted to take his industrial technology to Lockheed Aircraft Corp., to work on the Space Shuttle.

"Once again we might be teaming up," Kennedy said. "I'll fly it and he'll be operations manager."

Without thought for the future, Volkerding thought of his first weeks in 1414 Pearce-Ford Tower and he shook his head.

"It seems like your time goes by fast here sometimes," he said. "You don't go to class as much as in high school, but the time goes somewhere."

Mark Walden

The final touch

Photos by Bobby Roe

And thunder roared. As rain fell and some laughed and some cried, 2,484 candidates became college graduates at Western's 127th commencement.

May 6, 1984, may not always remain clear to all crowded in Diddle Arena, but the significance of the day may not ever be forgotten. The ceremony, lasting less than 90 minutes, marked the end of much hard work and the beginning of much more to come.

Margie Early, a history and government major from Shelbyville, and Karen McDonald, an English major from Louisville, said they spent much of the ceremony scanning the crowd looking for their families as their families searched the arena floor, looking for them.

But some graduates were easier to spot than others as, "We did it" and "What now?" were among some of the messages written on the sea of black hats.

Sherleen Sisney, commencement speaker, urged the candidates to be "leaders of their community."

Sisney, recipient of the 1984 Teacher of the Year Award and instructor at Ballard High School in Louisville, spoke of her accomplishment and how setting goals helped her to meet obstacles and overcome them. Using examples from her classroom, Sisney stressed that dedication and diligence were "keys to success."

A GRADUATING senior's family anxiously watches out the windows of Diddle Arena. The rainy weather kept many people from socializing outside after the 127th commencement ceremonies.

But she also had competition among the candidates for graduation in the Potter College of Arts and Humanities section. Midway through her speech, a mouse started across the feet of several unsuspecting graduates. At least one candidate said that that experience would probably be one of the more memorable parts of the day.

Following the commencement address, scholars with the highest grade-point averages of the colleges were recognized: in the College of Business Administration, Carol Marie Wax, a finance major from Bowling Green; in the Potter College of Arts and Humanities, Lynn Michelle Baete, a Spanish major from Fern Creek; in the Ogden College of Science and Technology, Jacqueline Kay Metcalfe, a computer science major from Calhoun, and in the College of Education, Tina Lois Wright, an elementary education major from Sharon Grove.

Delia Margaret Thompson, a history major from Bowling Green, received the Ogden Trustee Award which is given to top graduates earning a four-year degree.

"THE Kentucky education system is over-criticized and underrated," commencement speaker, Sherleen Sisney, said. Sisney was the 1984 National Teacher of the Year.

Faculty excellence awards were also presented to the following: Jerry Bowles, assistant professor of management and marketing, from the College of Business Administration; Dr. Leroy T. Metzger, professor of geology, from the Ogden College of Science and Technology, and Dr. Thomas Baldwin, professor of German, in the Potter College of Arts and Humanities.

Receiving the Alumni Award for distinguished contributions were Dr. Carroll Wells, professor of mathematics and computer science, for teaching; Dr. William Lane, professor of philosophy and religion, for research; and Evelyn Thurman, assistant professor for library services, for community service.

The ceremony was concluded as Ted Barr, a graduate in music from Russellville, sang the College Heights alma mater. On the final verse of the song, the crowd spontaneously joined in singing the last line of the course: "Hail, Hail, Hail."

And thunder roared.

Lori Medley T.

TWO graduating seniors make their way to Diddle Arena with the aid of an umbrella. Commencement day weather was less than ideal — it rained continuously.

AFTER having their degrees conferred, graduates Bruce Cobb, of Smithfield; Derek Tracy, of Bellevue; Tom Allen, of Sugar Grove, Ill., and Chris Wenzler, of Germantown, Tenn., sing the alma mater.

“It’s nice to have grades, but 15 years
from now,
who’ll know?
— Lynn Baete”

— Betty

What’s in a grade? Some close calls and lots of hard work helped two Western students maintain Unblemished records

Motivation and good study habits are the most important factors in keeping good grades throughout college, according to Western’s two 4.0 seniors.

Marleen Murphy, assistant to the registrar, said there are as many as three 4.0 students each semester, but seldom more than that.

Nathan Yoder, and Lynn Baete have both gotten A’s in every class they’ve taken at Western. Yoder will graduate next spring and Baete graduated in May. She was named scholar of Potter College and received a silver bowl at commencement.

For both, the classes required for their majors and minors were often difficult and neither was always sure they would be able to maintain a perfect average.

“I had some really close calls,” 22-year-old Baete said, “but everything always turned out okay.”

Yoder said there were also times when he thought he might get a B. “There were times when I had to choose classes that I thought ‘Am I going to go ahead and take the classes that I should or am I going to protect myself and take easy classes?’”

Yoder, a history major and an English minor, credits growing up as a Menonite in a small town in Maryland with his “deep appreciation for learning.”

“I had excellent teachers and my parents put a premium on learning, so I guess I picked up a lot along the way,” Yoder said.

Like most students, Yoder and Baete were afraid of going to college, although both had been good students all of their lives.

“I was really scared,” Baete, a Spanish major and English minor, said. “I had to learn how to study — I just didn’t have to study much in high school, but here it was so important.”

Yoder was also afraid to begin college. He had been out of school seven years when he finally got the chance to earn his degree.

“I was one of seven kids in my family, so I stayed home to help,” Yoder said, “but I always had clear goals and knew that I would eventually go to college.”

At 28, Yoder is older than the average college student and believes being older and being married helps him to keep his grades up. The recent birth of his first child has taken his mind away from his studies lately, however. “My son has taken top priority,” Yoder said. “It is more important to spend time with him now.”

“It’s nice to have the grades, but 15 years from now, who’ll know?” Baete said.

Baete said that grades were a personal goal for her.

“I started with a humanities semester my freshman year and got all A’s, so I gave myself a goal to get all A’s in college.” Baete actually finished her degree in December of ’83 and began working on her master’s in teaching English as a second language during the spring semester. She isn’t as worried about getting A’s now.

“Since graduate classes are so much harder, I’ll be happy with A’s and B’s,” Baete said.

Both Yoder and Baete said the most important thing for students in preparing for college is to develop good study habits. Baete said she never stayed up past midnight when studying for a test and tried to study more than a few days before the test. Yoder said he has pulled some all nighters but if he knows he has to do that he will do it a couple of nights before the test.

Yoder and Baete said they never made it a point to tell their professors about their averages, but agreed that the professors usually found out anyway.

“Telling the professors would have put a lot of pressure on them,” Yoder said. “Would they dare to fail you?”

Yoder and Baete also agreed that they were relieved to be finishing their degrees. Both plan to further their education.

Yoder wants to start graduate school on a part-time basis while his wife is still in college.

“I really need a break right now,” Yoder said. “I have teflon-brain; nothing will stick to it anymore.”

Later Yoder plans to go to seminary and get a masters of divinity degree and maybe a doctorate in medieval church history.

Yoder believes that everyone has his own special ability, but getting straight A’s may not be possible for some. He plans to let his son “make his own decisions and find his own niche. He may be a B or C student and that’s all right as long as he’s happy.”

“God has a place for each person and has given each abilities to learn and articulate, and maybe he has a different plan for each person.”

Tami Peerman

“I have teflonbrain; nothing will stick to it anymore.
— Nathan Yoder”

For ages:

freshman to senior

Photo illustration by Bobby Roe

What was the name of Isaac Newton's dog? Probably not many people could answer that, but for players of Trivial Pursuit, this was a question that was asked during the game.

In a world of Monopoly, backgammon and Scrabble, a new board game has entered into the scene. Instead of the luck of the dice, Trivial Pursuit requires the recollection of numerous trivia questions. The trivia fad also hit Western and its students.

"I think that's the thing now," Jim Johnson, a Lexington senior, said. "It gives you a wide range of knowledge and you get to learn trivia." Johnson got together a couple times a week with friends to play the game.

During a game of Trivial Pursuit, players must answer trivia questions on subjects such as history, science or entertainment. Although the game sounds easy enough, the trivia questions can be quite difficult.

Another fan of Trivial Pursuit was Jan Corbin, a Gallatin, Tenn., senior. Corbin received the game as a Christmas present after she played it with friends.

"When we first got it, we played two or three nights a week," Corbin said. As with many Trivial Pursuit fans, Corbin found herself playing the game "till late in the night."

The game was first introduced in the U.S. in 1982. But the board game doesn't come cheap to the buyer. The basic Trivial Pursuit game cost around $25 and extra card editions cost about $20.

Still popular with students was another type of game — role-playing. The most famous of the role-playing games is undoubtedly customers are Western students.

The basic game for D&D cost the player about $12. "This price rapidly escalates," Simmons said. "A buyer may drop $100 on the next step."

When D&D was first introduced, it was thought of as a cult game. But Simmons felt that D&D had settled into an actual, legitimate game. "It's less bizarre than it used to be," he said. "It has become more common, less strange."

Besides D&D, students enjoyed playing other games of this type. Kelly Woodrum, a Quality senior, played Champions, another role-playing game. The game cost about $15 and had several supplements available.

"Champions is basically a super-hero role-playing game," Woodrum said. "I'm a big comic fan and it's natural to try to play a hero."

Woodrum played the game with other students, usually at Asgard Hobbies and Games. Asgard held three regular campaigns on Wednesdays, Sundays and Saturday afternoons, where people would get together and play games.

Johnson also enjoyed role-playing games. "The big game used to be Acquire," he said. In that game players tried to acquire as many stocks as possible. "It's a very capitalistic game," he said.

What was the name of Isaac Newton's dog? Diamond.

Melanie Mietz 17

Are you trivial?

1. What's the official animal of Canada?
2. Who was the first host of the original Tonight Show?
3. What are Texans told to remember?
4. Who met Cyclops on this third voyage?
5. What's the hardest bone in the human body?

1. The beaver, 2. Steve Allen, 3. The Alamo, 4. Sinbad, 5. The jawbone

IN HIS East Hall room, Eric Miller, an Evansville, Ind., junior, plays video games on his computer. He received his Commodore 64 computer for his 21st birthday.

COMPUTER SCIENCE major Carl Sommer works on a program in his Pearce-Ford Tower room. Sommer, an Owensboro freshman, used his computer to work programs for class.

Dorm data base

Photos by Kevin Eans

He turned the computer switch to "on." The screen momentarily blinked and flashed "Ready." The floppy disk was inserted into the drive. The screen read the program name. More keys were pushed, and more lights blinked while the motor spun the disk searching for the hidden information for which the programmer wanted.

The computer flashed "syntax error." "Come on you ignorant computer," Eric Miller said under his breath as he continued his search.

Miller was just one of the many students living in a dorm who owned a personal computer.

Miller, an Evansville, Ind., junior, operated a Commodore 64 computer which he received for his 21st birthday. He used his computer to do work in his computer science 240 class.

He was able to write his programs for class in his room and then take the program to the Thompson Complex computer room for the final running and checking, he said.

Miller also played games on his computer. He inserted a disk that contained about 20 games including a Monopoly game for two people. "I've sat up many a night playing this with a friend, and no one has ever won," he said.

Miller said his computer keyboard cost approximately $200 and his disk drive, $260.

Miller said since he was majoring in mechanical engineering, he needed a computer to learn the skills.

Dan Smith, an Owensboro junior, shared a TRS-80 computer with his younger brother. Smith kept the computer in his Barnes-Campbell dorm room when his brother was not using it.

"I do help a lot of people with their programs, and I guess it takes a certain eye to see what is wrong with a program," Smith said.

Helping computer science 240 students was mainly what he did with his computer, Smith said.

He bought his present computer for $800 four years ago, and the equivalent computer would now

FLOPPY DISKS containing programs are spread across Sommer's desk. Several students used computers in their dorm rooms to work programs or play games.

cost $100, he said. "It is obsolete."

Computer science and math major Carl Sommer said he is one of approximately 20 Pearce-Ford Tower residents who operate computers in their rooms.

Sommer, an Owensboro freshman, said he, like Miller, used his Commodore for his computer science 240 class except with Sommer's modem he could use the telephone to gain access to the Thompson Complex computer, sending his programs to the center and saving a lot of time.

Sommer said he used the computer for word processing and games, but "at this stage I don't really have a lot to do on it."

Tony Martin, a Bloomfield senior, was also a computer owner. His system, located in his apartment, was a Zenith Z100 which contained eight-inch disk drives, a printer, a modem and other accessories.

Martin, a computer science major, said he decided computers would be his goal in the eighth grade and has had a computer since his junior year in high school.

His first computer was a kit which took 25 hours to assemble. His present system cost $5000, excluding the accessories.

Martin said he began writing programs for his father's dairy farm during high school. He now works for the university as a computer lab assistant and programmer. He used his computer for some of that work, he added.

Each student felt his computer was something special. Miller said, "It is a nice little friend to have around when you don't have anything to do, although you want to cuss them out sometimes."

Sommer said, "If I lost my computer, boy, I'd be devastated. It provides a lot of fun and is the floor arcade."

Computers will never be able to completely take over, according to Miller. "They don't think for you; they just do it quicker."

"Any type of big business needs computer operators and since autos are my first love, I'd like to work in the auto industry (as a computer operator)," Miller said.

Martin said, "I feel like a potter with clay. I can do whatever I want with my computer."

Smith said his computer is like a friend. "Sometimes it rewards you, but it is a pain in the butt when you have an error."

Kim Swift T

"It is a nice little friend to have around."
— Eric Miller "

An eyeful of answers

—Photo Illustration by Betty

Cheaters. No one wants to admit that they are one but many students have done it.

Some people try to get original ideas of ways to cheat while others use any method possible to obtain the answers.

Cheating occurs in every department, by undergraduates and by graduates alike. Cheating ranges from simple copying of answers from a test of another student to taping answers and playing the tape on a Walkman and listening to the answers through headphones.

"One time I was scared of failing a test, so I took a blue book I had already filled. During the test, I wrote a note to a friend. I turned the book in and got an 'A,'" one student said.

Cheat sheets, opened notebooks, and answers taped to the inside of clothes have caused many students to fall into the realm of the cheaters. "I kept my notebook opened one time when I was taking a test. The teacher never knew because it was in a large classroom," another student said.

"I glued cheat sheets to the back of my sunglasses and laid them on my desk. That was the only time I ever cheated," another student said.

Some students obtain old copies of tests from students who have had the same professor. Memorization then becomes the method of cheating that the student uses.

Cheating occurs on other assignments besides tests. Term papers, case analyses, lab reports, and even computer programs fall victim to cheaters.

"I got someone else's paper for a case analysis. I did a little research and changed the words a little bit. I just didn't have the time to do it myself," another student said.

Professors had different views of cheating and different ideas of handling the situation.

According to Sharon Dyrson, assistant to the dean of student affairs, cheating is less of a concern now than several years ago. The Office of Student Affairs gets about two calls a year from teachers who have caught students cheating.

"Faculty members have kept it within their own classroom," she said. "They'd hate to let it get out that they had students cheating."

The university handbook lists cheating and plagiarism as forms of misconduct which constitute grounds for disciplinary action.

Dyrson said most teachers prefer to handle the problem themselves when they find out that the committee usually suspends students who have cheated. But this isn't to say that teachers take the problem lightly.

"They're very concerned with why a student would do this," she said.

Aside from plagiarism, Dyrson said a relatively common form of cheating involves students signing teachers' initials to drop/add cards. Teachers are especially upset when the class is added, she said.

Dr. Douglas Humphrey, professor of physics and astronomy, and chairman of the Disciplinary Committee, said few cases reach his level each year.

"I would guess that the faculty and department heads work out the problem before it reaches my committee," he said.

A teacher can work to prevent the problem, Humphrey said. As an instructor, he monitors exams and scatters students out when they are taking tests.

"I sort of try to nip it in the bud," he said.

Dr. Ronald Nash, head of the philosophy and religion department, said the punishment handed out is up to each teacher's discretion.

"The more troubling kind of plagiarism is where students buy pre-written term papers off campus," he said.

Dr. Thomas Dunn, professor of sociology, anthropology and social work, said it's difficult to judge how much cheating goes on at Western.

"If you assume for every person you catch there are several you don't, then it could be a problem," he said. But, "If just one does, it's a problem and I am academically upset."

"There are a million reasons why a student would resort to that," Dr. Daniel Roenker, an associate professor of psychology, said.

Peer pressure, parental pressure, and fear of failing a course are just a few of the possibilities.

Most teachers concur that cheating is a problem which can be partially controlled in class. The more subtle forms of cheating, such as pre-written papers and plagiarism as homework, require more diligent measures.

Many students were asked but not everyone could honestly say they had never cheated. One student said, "Sure cheating is a problem, but I think it will always be."

Gary Briggs and Susan Harmon

BOWLING GREEN police lead marchers up State Street. They were recognizing the death of Martin Luther King Jr.

AN ACCIDENT in front of South Hall the last week of school caused a delay in some students' departure. Lt. Joe Gentry, a campus policeman, talks to students whose cars were hit.

— Rick N

— Br

A THE YEAR delicate balance

Nationally and locally, it was a year filled with advancement, changes and losses.

America and the rest of the world was stunned in September after Korean jumbo jetliner 007 was shot down over the North Pacific by the Soviet Union.

The jet, enroute to Seoul, South Korea, allegedly flew into Soviet airspace and was shot down, killing 269 people, including U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Georgia, and 60 other Americans.

More tragedy struck in late October when early-morning terrorists in Lebanon rammed a truck loaded with 2,000 pounds of explosives into a four-story building where up to 300 American Marines and Navy personnel were stationed, killing about 230.

The men, part of a multinational peacekeeping force, consisting of French, Italian and American troops, had been in Lebanon for several months.

Reagan later withdrew the troops, and the mission was labeled a "failure." "We don't seek hostilities (in Lebanon)," Reagan said before the withdrawal. "Our mission remains what it was: to help stabilize the situation in Beirut until all the foreign forces can be withdrawn and until the government of Lebanon can take over the authority of its own territory."

Kentucky made national headlines in November by electing Martha Layne Collins as its first woman governor. Collins, who defied Republican Jim Bunning, later ran into trouble trying to get a

ALICE RECEPTION for Dave Roberts, the football coach, the Board of Regents gave him a red jacket. Everyone got a check because the jacket was too small.

$324 million tax package through the General Assembly and later withdrew it, leaving Kentucky's education in the hands of the legislature.

Collins was also chosen to help chair the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Locally, the year was laced with several losses through resignations, including that of Dr. James Davis, vice president for academic affairs.

"Each year I have evaluated whether I wanted to continue as academic vice president," Davis said at a press conference. "But I also have been very interested in leaving the administration while it was still fun."

At the same time, head football coach Jimmy Feix resigned, ending an era of 25 years.

"In the best interest of the program, I thought it was the appropriate thing to do," he said.

Feix's 16 years is the longest tenure for any Western head football coach.

Also in September, Dr. Charles Hausmann, director of choir activity, resigned to become the director of music ministries at the Methodist Cathedral in Houston. Hausmann had served as choir director for four years.

David Whitaker, the head of the journalism department and director of university publications, announced his resignation as department head in October. He had held the position since the department was formed in 1970. Whitaker felt the journalism department had grown too much for him to be both department head and publications director.

"Nobody should try to perform both of those jobs," Whitaker said. "When I took the additional duties of department head, we were much, much smaller."

Associated Student Government faced challenges by having to produce its own discount cards because the original deal fell through with a company in St. Mary's, Mo. ASG also tried to get a definitive grade scale passed, but it failed to be voted out of the Academic Requirements and Regulations Committee of the Academic Council.

A. J. Thurman retired after 14 years as financial aid director. Lee Watkins, assistant financial aid director, filled Thurman's position and later was named as the new director.

Students were hit with some bad news during that month when Ed Carter, finance director for the Council on Higher Education, announced that tuition was expected to increase during the next two years.

When students returned in January from semester break, many found that broken water pipes caused by the subzero temperatures left water damage to personal items, and university insurance wouldn't cover the damage.

A new football coach was chosen in January. The university surprised many by selecting Dave Roberts, who had been backfield coach at Vanderbilt.

Western made a big advancement in February when the Board of Regents cleared a joint proposal from ASG and Inter-Hall Council to have coed housing.

The board gave the Student Affairs Office the responsibility to implement a plan for coed housing.

In the same meeting, the regents decided to sell the bookstore and the laundry to the College Heights Foundation.

In February, Dr. Robert Nelson resigned as the dean of the College of Business Administration. "I want to finish out my career teaching and researching in my field," Nelson said.

continued on page 50

"It was a year of change and advancement,"

— Mary Ann Lyons

Balance cont.

He had been the dean for seven years.

About two weeks later, Dr. James Flynn, head of the English department, and Dr. Frank Steele, director of freshman English, resigned. Both planned to return to full-time teaching.

Flynn said that when he was hired, he planned to be department head for only five years.

Steele, who had been director for 14 years, said he had become tired of

A TILE FLOOR is replaced in Central Hall by Powell Gray, a contractor. During Christmas break a water pipe froze and burst, ruining the floor.

— Greg Lovett

"administrative detail" and wanted to get back to teaching and writing.

April brought the Southern Association of College and Schools' reaccreditation team to evaluate Western. The university won't find out if it has been reaccredited until December.

Also, Interfraternity Council followed in the footsteps of other universities and voted for a dry rush, banning liquor from parties during the third week of rush.

But at the same time, 79 percent of students participating in an ASG poll said they favored having a campus pub where beer could be sold. In that same poll, 77.9 percent favored selling beer at indoor concerts and 77.9 percent favored selling beer at outdoor concerts.

The university was hit with its final resignation of the year when

IN HIS resignation announcement, Dr. James Davis, vice president for academic affairs, says, "... I have been very interested in leaving the administration while it was still fun." Davis held the position for eight years.

Dr. Faye Robinson, associate vice-president for academic affairs, requested to return to full-time teaching. "It's very difficult to stay fresh and excited about an administration position," she said. "I don't see a lot of new things coming next year that I can get into."

Robinson had been vice president for academic affairs for six years and was assistant professor of counselor education before that.

Steve Paul

EDITOR'S NOTE: Some information for these stories was gathered from issues of the College Heights Herald.

Repeat performance

The sound of firetruck sirens was a recurring nightmare for Maria Binegar — the Owensboro freshman had four paintings destroyed in a fire at the Ivan Wilson Fine Arts Center three days earlier on March 23.

Binegar, along with about 250 other students, watched on March 27 as firefighters battled another blaze at the center, which was also believed to be arson.

At the end of the school year, no arrests had been made in connection with the fires. University police were still investigating.

The first fire was set at about 11:30 p.m. March 23. Capt. Jim Wingfield of the Bowling Green Fire Department said the fire was started in several locations.

Fire was coming out of the roof when firefighters arrived. The flames burned the skylights on the fourth floor, and windows were broken from the heat.

Owen Lawson, physical plant director, said the fire caused about $25,000 in damage with extensive smoke damage on the third floor and water damage on all floors. The biggest loss was in student and faculty artwork.

— Gary Hartman

After the fire, students and teachers rummaged through the charred debris in the painting studio. Bobby Blair, a Bowling Green freshman, lost five paintings in the fire. He had planned to take his paintings home the week before. Bobby Newsom, a Nashville junior, had 12 oil paintings destroyed.

Kelly Felty, a Morgantown senior, also sifted through the remains, hoping to find her work unharmed. "I could tell when the building was burning that the window where the firemen's ladder went through was where my work station was," she said. "I thought everything was gone."

Felty lost eight paintings and about $500 in art supplies.

While the university was still assessing the damage from the first fire, arsonists struck again March 27.

This time fires were apparently set between 11:30 p.m. to 12 a.m. in the instrument storage room on the third floor, two on bulletin boards on that floor and another on a first floor bulletin board.

Paper and cardboard were used to set the fires, fire inspector Richard Storey, said.

Although fire inspectors found similarities in both fires, they believed the same person or persons may not have set both fires.

The heaviest damage in the sec-

AFTER the fires in the fine arts center, Alvin Hogue, a physical plant worker, scrapes out glass in the fourth floor studio. Two fires, set on March 23 and 27, were suspected to be arson.

ond fire was in room 330, which contained about 10 cellos and six double basses that were destroyed. Dr. Wayne Hobbs, head of the music department, said the department instruments were insured, but students' instruments weren't.

The hallways in front of the room were heavily damaged by smoke and water, and sections of the carpet were destroyed.

Classes were cancelled for a day. The second fire hit the students the hardest.

Although many students stood in the amphitheater stands and watched the firefighters, some people got upset at the spectators.

"I think they're here just to see action," Mark Eblen, a Lexington sophomore, said.

In May, John Robert Lefert, an 18-year-old freshman music major from Madison, Ind., was charged with first-degree arson and first-degree criminal mischief for the March 27 fire. In July Leffert was acquitted after Warren Circuit Court Judge Gordon Johnson ruled that the state had failed to produce enough evidence to continue the case.

Steve Paul

— Greg Lovett

— T. J. Hamilton

AS FIREMEN knock out a window of the fine arts center, Fred Smith, a Corbin freshman, comforts Sherri Phelps, a Morgantown senior. They watched as firemen put out the second fire started in the building.

Weatherbeater

— T. J. Hamilton

If you don't like Kentucky's weather, the adage says, stick around — it will change. And it did.

It was a year of extremes.

The fall semester began with some of the hottest temperatures on record and ended with a cold snap that dipped the thermometer well below zero.

At the start of classes in late August, students could be seen roaming the campus in shorts and sandals, grasping cold drinks. As temperatures hovered near 100 degrees, most hurried from building to building to escape the gripping heat. Even the hardest outdoor lover preferred the comforts of air conditioning.

But some students weren't so fortunate.

Residents of Bates-Runner, West, McLean, South, East, Potter and North halls suffered through the heat without the benefit of a single air conditioner. Large pedestal fans on each floor brought some relief, however.

AS THE temperature hits the 100-degree mark, Glenn Hickman, a Bardstown sophomore, takes a break from football practice. Hickman was a receiver for the team.

Cindy Spencer, dorm director of Potter Hall, said some of the dorm's 95 residents slept in the lobby during the hot spell. They were awakened by the desk clerk each morning at 6 a.m., before office workers arrived. Spencer estimated the inside temperatures of the dorm to be in the 90s for several days.

Mary Jane Watts, dorm director of South Hall, said most students had their own fans in addition to the large fans on each wing. A few of the residents beat the heat by moving to air conditioned dorms when spaces became available, she said.

The heat also brought out some tension among hall residents. Ann Lowndes, an Estill Springs, Tenn. junior, said, "We all used the big fans in the hall and some people would fight over them. Someone would take the fan and move it in front of their door." Lowndes was a resident assistant in South Hall.

Many dorm residents also spent late hours in the Downing University Center, which expanded operating hours to accommodate students looking for relief.

"We tried to spend most of the day outside of the dorms," said Meany, a Louisville freshman, who spent some of the time at his girlfriend's air-conditioned dorm.

Meany lived in North Hall. Like other residents, he kept the doors open and fans in the rooms. "We slept with the fans on us," he said.

Many of East Hall's 200 residents slept in hallways where circulation was best, according to dorm director Jeff Munroe. The temperature in the building reached "near degrees," he said.

Theresa Kaelin, a Louisville senior who lived in Potter Hall, said many students took frequent showers to compensate for the lack of air conditioning.

Another group victimized by summer's searing temperature was the football team. Coach Jim Feix said one full day of practice had to be suspended and other sessions were shortened. Players stripped off shoes pads and helmets to keep cool. Water breaks were also increased, he said.

Feix said the team's athletic trainers monitored the heat and humidity closely, alerting the coaching staff when activity was in the "danger zone." Fortunately, no players suffered heat exhaustion or other illnesses, Feix said.

Other outdoor activities were also affected. The heat slowed the soccer team's practices. And activity in the outdoor physical education classes was also cut down, especially in classes such as track.

When the cool breezes of September arrived, no one mourned the passing of summer. At least everyone could breathe freely and the outdoors was the place to be again.

And the next few months were nicely tolerable.

By early December, however, there was an unseasonable chill stirring. Many students leaving for Christmas break sported heavy coats, mittens and wool hats.

In the early morning hours of Christmas Day, sub-zero temperatures and an eight-hour power outage caused $250,000 in damage to several campus buildings.

Owen Lawson, physical plant director, said the power outage caused heating units and water pipes to freeze and burst in seven campus buildings. These were Pearce-Ford Tower, Central, McCormack, Poland and Keen halls, Diddle Arena and the Kentucky Building. Water damaged floors, ceilings and carpeting in the buildings. Several other campus buildings received minor damage, he said.

Chris Lovorn, dorm director of Pearce-Ford Tower, said there was water standing on floors one through 19. Floor tiles had to be replaced in some rooms and four rooms had to be repainted, but loss of personal property was minimal, Lovorn said.

"After all the work, sweat and tears, the building didn't suffer as much damage as it first appeared," he said.

The cold weather also made driving around campus a problem for motorists. Paul Bunch, director of public safety, said, "Most of the problems occurred with parking; snow and ice will amplify the problems of entering and exiting spaces."

The extreme change in temperatures from early to late fall also damaged many plants and shrubs on campus, Lawson said. Some areas suffered a "100-percent kill of the grass," he said. Many of the plants had to be replaced and grass was re-seeded, but budget cuts prevented some necessary lawn work, he said.

Nature's freakish outburst on Christmas Day was unusual, Lawson said. "It's never happened since I've been around here. And I've been here most of the time for the last 28 years."

"The weather has not been good to us this year," he said.

Whether it was extreme heat or chilling cold, Kentucky's weather did change, but students found a way to cope with the weather extremes.

Susan Stinson Harmon

"The weather has not been good to us this year."
— Owen Lawson "

Hand in hand

MICHAEL RIFFEY

LANDLORD

As more and more students moved off campus, they looked for apartments in Bowling Green.

As in the past, freshman were not allowed to live off campus. But after their first year at Western, many decided dorm life was not for them and began the sometimes tedious task of apartment hunting.

Students often searched the papers only to be disappointed to find a long waiting list for the apartments. And depending on the type of apartment a student wanted, the apartment search could be easier or more difficult.

Mike Riffey is one landlord who rented apartments to many Western students.

Riffey rented a large number of apartments on Rockcreek Drive, Glen Lily Road and Cove Drive in Bowling Green, with the biggest majority being on Rockcreek Drive.

"Having Western here definitely makes a difference," Riffey said. "It brings new people in all the time." One way Riffey noticed a difference was with money, and how much revenue the students bring in.

The apartments Riffey rented averaged $210 to $225 for a one-bedroom and $275 for a two-bedroom apartment. He found that students turned out to be some of the better renters.

"Students are no worse than your average renter," he said. The main problem Riffey found with the students was loud stereos. Parties were generally not a problem because he didn't allow parties in his apartments.

"We don't allow parties in the apartments because there is such a large mixture of people," he said. "The only gripe I hear is the stereos."

He also found that college students are a lot better at paying their rent. "I would just as soon rent to a college student," he said.

Riffey feels that the university is important to the success of his apartment rentals. In the summer when the students are gone, he noticed a big difference.

"We don't have enough apartments when school starts, but in summer we have many empty ones," Riffey said.

"It would hurt without the students," he said. "We depend on the university, in fact."

Melanie Mietz

IRV WHITE

SPORTSCASTER

Sports in Kentucky are big. And sports in Bowling Green are even bigger. "I think of Western as being big in basketball," Irv White, sportscaster at WBKO television, said. White feels that basketball is the biggest sport in the state.

White has been with WBKO since 1979, and has seen a lot happen with Western's sports program.

"I think the university is big in the community," White said. Although athletics are prominent, he does not feel that it is the only way the university influences Bowling Green. "The school is a focal point, both athletically and academically." He feels that Western brings a prominence to the community.

"And of course basketball and football generate revenue," he said, stressing that the university is also a financial resource to the community.

Out of all the Western sports he covers, White feels that basketball is probably his favorite, although he said he enjoys all of them.

"Basketball gets more coverage, only because the season is longer," he said. "We try to cover all of Western's sports equally."

While athletics are big all over the state, Bowling Green is lucky to have a university right here. "In some places you may have to go 70 miles to cover a game," White said.

"I enjoy doing sports, especially Western athletics," White said. The main reason White enjoys Western's program is because of the people.

"The people at Western are kind and cooperative. They make it enjoyable," he said.

Melanie Mietz

— John Houser

BOB GOFORTH

MANAGER

In November a grocery store opened in the nearly-deserted Bowling Green Mall. Schnucks Super Saver came to Bowling Green hoping to get in on a share of the food dollars.

"The community itself was the main factor in deciding to come to Bowling Green, but we also knew of the positive effects that Western could have on our business," store manager Paul Goforth said.

Schnucks, headquartered in Bridgeton, Mo., offered name-brand and generic products at a considerable savings over most other Bowling Green grocery stores.

To attract students, Schnucks placed advertisements in the College Heights Herald and distributed coupons in the residence halls.

Students tend to buy mostly convenience-type foods — beer, snacks, frozen foods, peanut butter and lunch meats, Goforth said. About 10 percent of the total sales could be attributed to student purchases.

"The slowest weeks we've had have been the weeks school was out. Christmas break and Easter weekend were very slow for us," he said. "Students are a definite asset as far as customers are concerned."

With about 25 percent of its employees being students, Schnucks also provided an opportunity for employment.

After only six months of being in Bowling Green, Goforth said he was happy with the response to the new style of grocery buying.

Roger D. Cunningham

— John Houser

COMMUNITY

— Bob Skoger

DAN DAVIS

RESTAURATEUR

Dan Davis isn't what you would call a gambling man in the ordinary sense. But nine years ago, staked with a business degree from the University of Tennessee and a hunch about the potential of franchise restaurants, he moved to Bowling Green and opened a Wendy's along with partner Dave Mason. He's parlayed that one restaurant into eight, and is still rolling the dice — although they appear to be loaded.

Today Davis is president of Mid-South Management Group, the parent company for six Wendy's restaurants, two Rafferty's restaurants, and an air charter service.

Along with the success has come a highly visible role in the community, and specifically at Western.

Davis has no qualms about explaining his close relationship with the university. "It's good business," Davis said.

Three years ago Wendy's started a basketball tournament and a 10-kilometer road race at Western, and both events have grown into premier events in the nation. Davis takes pride in the events and the attention they've garnered for Western, and for Wendy's.

"Sports are a high profile event, so we felt that that was the best way for us to show our support," Davis said. "Plus Dave (Mason) and I are big sports nuts, so it seemed logical. Dave is a runner and I'm a basketball fan, so that accounts for the Classics (the name of both the road race and the tournament)."

A big reason for Davis' success in Bowling Green is Western, and the effect it has on the community.

"Western has the largest impact on the economic community of anything in Bowling Green, including General Motors," Davis said. "I don't think a lot of people and businesses here in town realize that."

"The University affects the local economy in two areas: what is directly generated by the students through transactions with the students, and the ripple effect or underlying effect of the students. The other money they pour into the economy around town allows the people who live here to have more money to spend."

And for Davis that higher standard of living translates into more business for his company. As a result of his unique relationship with Western, Davis is a little more appreciative of the university and its students than some residents, and he has a theory: "People in Bowling Green take Western for granted. They know that it's here, and nothing is ever going to take it away."

Not if Dan Davis has anything to say about it.

John Tayman

COMMUNITY

HERBERT J. SMITH

BANKER

As a Bowling Green native and a former Western student, Herbert J. Smith has seen extensive changes in the university.

As acting Ogden College regent for 23 years, Smith has attended over 40 commencements, and watched five of his children graduate.

Smith has been involved with Western in his professional role as president of American National Bank.

American National Bank has had several loan and scholarship programs in cooperation with the Office of Student Financial Aid. The bank has also been the source of local banking for some students.

"The number of student accounts is marginal," Smith said. "Most students go home on weekends and take care of banking matters at home and then operate out of their pockets."

"We have a good many foreign students who have us get money for them through international wire services. These accounts have always been good accounts," he said.

Smith said the bank didn't have many problems with student accounts. "At the end of the school year and at Christmas break we have a few returned checks, but not that many."

Smith, a former president of the Alumni Association, boasts that 95 percent of the bank employees are Western graduates.

The bank encourages their employees to take night classes by paying their tuition. Employees also serve as guest lecturers to banking classes.

The bank has been a very close friend of the university's. They published "Red Towel Territory," a history of athletics at Western, and have contributed regularly to the Student Development Foundation.

"We've had a very close relationship with Western — it's students and its employees. We hope to continue that relationship for a long, long time," Smith said.

Roger D. Cunningham

— John Houser

GARY CLEEK

MANAGER

Keeping the AMC Green-wood 6 Theatre in business is one thing Western students are good at doing.

According to Gary Cleek, general manager, WKU students are close to 50 percent of their regular business and 90 percent of the midnight shows audience.

"The late shows are primarily geared toward Western students. During the summer we get rid of the shows," Cleek said.

"Western students carry us from September to December and January to May. If Western weren't here, AMC wouldn't be here," he said. "If we put it in perspective, there probably wouldn't be a Bowling Green without Western."

Students not only kept the theater in business; they ran it. Eighteen of the 23 employees were Western students.

"It is our policy to hire WKU students because they are usually conscientious of their work, and the hours are more flexible," Cleek said. "And they're not in school from a set time of 8 o'clock to 3 o'clock. I also think they put the money they make to good use."

"I have nothing but good things to say about Western students," Cleek said.

Tonya Berkley

— Kevin East

COMMUNITY

—Bobby Rice

BILL MARRERO

MANAGER

Being the store manager of Castner Knott in Greenwood Mall, Bill Marrero has seen a major influence on his business by Western Kentucky University.

"With that amount of people coming into the area, they have to affect it in some way," Marrero said.

"The faculty and the staff do most of the business," he said. "For most part, the students' business only affects the sales indirectly."

With 60 percent of the Castner Knott employees being either Western students or former students, Marrero considers Western a major contributor to the community.

"Seventy-five percent of the people in management are Western graduates," Marrero said.

However, even with the large amount of students who shop at the mall on Scottsville Road, only about five percent of the sales come from Western students.

"We target a lot of our merchandise to the junior and young adult department. But most of the customers who purchase clothes are Western students who are from Bowling Green or high school students."

According to Marrero, most students do not buy their clothes here because "they are wardrobe at home."

The university had a major influence in deciding the location of Castner Knott and the Greenwood Mall. When General Motors moved to Bowling Green from St. Louis, that was the deciding factor in building Greenwood Mall.

"But Bowling Green would not have even been considered," Marrero said, "if it wasn't for Western."

Gary Briggs

—T. J. Hamilton

GEORGE HANELINE

BUSINESSMAN

When it comes to liquor, not much has changed since George Haneline attended Western in the 40s.

"Drinking is pretty much the same as it was when I was in school," Haneline, owner of Red Barn Liquors and Sportsman Liquors, said. "Sure kids still do drink on weekends, but I really don't think they drink much during the week. If they do, they usually end up dropping out."

Much of Haneline's business success depends on the drinking habits of students.

"Economy-wise, students are a large factor in my business," Haneline said. "Anytime you dump 12,000 people in one area, you're bound to be affected by them."

"Aside from students, Western also has many other drawing points," Haneline said. "Good basketball and good football are tremendous drawing cards to all businesses — especially liquor, hotel/motel and food businesses."

Haneline, who graduated from Western's College of Commerce in 1950, was taught that "any business is only as good as the person who owns it" and makes that his business philosophy.

"I also stress to my employees, many of whom are students, to be nice, courteous, and help the customer with whatever they need, like carrying out their bags," Haneline said.

"After all, we have to sell our salesmanship. There are 23 other stores you can go to to buy the same thing — liquor. That's why we put so much emphasis on being courteous. Students really do notice things like that."

Kristen Reeder

—Rick Mancini

CHARLES HARDCASTLE

MAYOR

Being the mayor of a college town, Charles Hardcastle found Bowling Green and Western Kentucky University working together "hand in hand."

"Western affects Bowling Green a tremendous amount. It is the most influential thing in this community," Hardcastle said. "It provides a certain quality of life unique to other communities."

"Although Western is not the only drawing card for Bowling Green, it is the major one," Hardcastle said. "It's impossible to ignore Western's influence."

Western allows Bowling

Green to offer things that other towns, the same size as Bowling Green, cannot offer, according to Hardcastle.

Western has attracted many businesses to the Bowling Green community. At one time the school was against industrialization but in time the university "saw the same opportunity of industrialization as the town saw," Hardcastle said.

Of all the industries that have been attracted to the Bowling Green area, fast food restaurants seem to be the most abundant. Each night thousands of students and citizens enjoy meals ranging from hamburgers to Chinese food, Hardcastle said.

For the most part, the attraction to Bowling Green by the businesses comes from two factors. First, it is a "one-day's drive from a metropolitan area," and secondly because of the influence of the school.

The quality of life in Bowling Green has been greatly influenced by the university, the mayor said.

Bowling Green citizens support many events that Western presents to the public, Hardcastle said. Theater productions, orchestras and art exhibitions provide the Bowling Green people with various cultural events while fraternities and sororities volunteer their time to work in many community organizations.

"The rational people are the backbone of the school and they appreciate the students and the school," Hardcastle said.

Hardcastle, along with President Donald Zacharias, worked to get the university involved in the community and the community involved in the university.

"College students are the most resourceful people. Bright and energetic people are what make the leaders of the community," Hardcastle said, "and the college students will be the future leaders of our community." Gary Briggs

A special fan

Photos by Jon Allen

“To me everybody is good.
— Roger Bivin ”

A baseball cap bearing the words “Good luck Roger, number 1” barely peaks over the top of a stack of old Talismans.

Under the cap, 23-year-old Roger Bivin flips through the sports section of a 1975 yearbook. He points to a basketball player and says “I know him. He’s my friend!”

Roger might be Western’s number-one fan. In 1969 his family moved to Bowling Green for his father to accept a position as university attorney. Since then he has attended almost every Hilltopper ball game.

“We’ve always taken the kids to games — ever since they could crawl,” Roger’s mother, Alice Bivin, said. “When they were younger, they’d usually fall asleep, but as Roger got older, he really got interested in athletics.”

Working in Diddle Arena makes it easy for Roger to get to know the athletes. For two years he has worked there as a janitor, Monday through Friday, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

“I like my job,” Roger said. “I mop the floors and sweep and take care of lots of things.”

After Roger graduated from Warren Central High School, where he was named most valuable football manager, he attended the Eastern Kentucky Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center in Thelma.

“I went there to get an education and I got a janitorial diploma,” Roger said. “I’m proud of anything I get — diplomas and medals.”

Roger attended EKRC for about a year and a half and worked 1,267 hours while he was there.

Roger said he made many new friends at EKRC, but likes his friends at Western more because “they are so much more nice and polite and have so much talent.”

“I missed watching the Lady Toppers and I missed talking to them because they are always friendly, kind, polite, and sweet talkin’,” Roger said.

Although Roger is glad for the experience he got and the diploma he received, he was more than happy to leave the center. “It was like a jailhouse down there,” he said. “It didn’t have too many good-lookin’ chicks there.”

And Roger definitely knows a pretty girl when he sees one, according to his supervisor at Diddle, Jody Barrow.

“He talks to every pretty girl he sees,” Barrow said. “One minute he’s working and the next thing he’s talking to a pretty girl. No — he’s not bashful at all.”

“Girls may be the only thing he knows better than athletics,” Barrow said.

But there is another thing Roger knows very well — the Special Olympics. They’re his “main love,” according to his mother.

In 1983 Roger bowled in the Special Olympics and got a bronze medal. “You could say I wanted to win that match very bad — and I didn’t,” Roger said.

“I wasn’t too happy when I lost. I had too much confidence — I thought I had the boy beat. I had him down by 10 and that boy came back to beat me. Whadya think about that?”

AWAY FROM the crowds of a basketball game, Roger Bivin, Diddle Arena, enjoys a quiet moment. “There’s nothing I’d rather do than the Hilltoppers,” Roger said.

What hurt Roger more in the final round was opponent did not shake his hands like the Lady Toppers. Roger said. “They always shake hands.”

Some women who work at the bookstore gave Roger a hard time. “I knew I was down from 100 to 100 because the boy beat me because he wouldn’t shake hands,” Roger said.

“That’s my favorite hat it looks like Rod Carew’s. I know, Rod Carew who plays for the California Angels — only more stars on it than mine.”

Dana Cunningham, a Green freshman and a former member of the women’s basketball team, helped Roger prepare for the Special Olympics.

“I tried to teach him a little about bowling,” Dana said, “but he didn’t work. He still bowls with his legs, but he’s been about 130 every time. When I met him he was bowling 20 or 30.”

Dana’s coaching paid off. Roger — he won a blue medal in the 1984 Special Olympics.

continued on

WHILE WORKING in Diddle Arena, Roger stops to admire the Hilltopper case. When Roger isn’t working, he often is found listening to Hank Jr., his favorite singer.

NEVER too busy for a friend, Roger takes a minute to chat with Robin Woodward, a Franklin junior. “I like to be friendly to people,” Roger said.

AS HE cleans the parking lot, Roger talks to Lady Topper Diane Depp, an Owensboro senior. Roger said he admired the Lady Toppers’ good sportsmanship.

WHEN HE isn't working in Diddle, Roger often spends time there watching the Hilltopper games. Roger has attended almost every home basketball game since his family moved to Bowling Green in 1969.

WORKING IN Diddle Arena gives Roger a chance to talk to Hilltopper team member Ken Hatcher, a Campbellsville junior. "The Hilltoppers are the greatest and friendliest people in the world," Roger said.

SWEEPING the Diddle Arena parking lot is part of Roger's job as a janitor. After high school graduation, Roger attended the

A special fan

"I was really careful not to get too confident this year," Roger said. "I really wanted to win, but I wasn't going to count on it until we were finished."

Dana said she's really "just his buddy — not really a coach." She went to watch him bowl just to cheer him on.

When Roger isn't bowling, he can be found listening to his favorite singer, Hank Williams Jr.

"I like that boy cause he's bad," Roger said. "He's so bad I don't know what to do with that boy. He's hot stuff."

After the Hank Williams Jr. concert in Diddle Arena on April 6, many people said that Williams had been drinking too much before he performed, which upset Roger.

"To me everybody is good," Roger said. "God did make everybody good, even though they're different. I know drinking is not nice and people say Hank was so drunk he couldn't stand up, but my boy Hank wouldn't do that."

"People shouldn't talk bad about Hank Williams Jr. He's just a person like you and me. I got so mad when people were talking bad about Hank that I dropped a basketball on my foot."

Just as Roger looks after Hank Williams Jr., the Hilltoppers look after Roger.

"All the athletes know him and stick up for him," Barrow said. "I don't think anybody would be daring enough to be mean to Roger, cause the ball players would come after them."

Dana said Roger often gives people little presents and when the Lady Toppers lost, he would send them cards to cheer them up.

Roger often phoned the Lady Toppers to wish them luck and "just to chat," Dana said. "He's just a real sweet little guy."

"Roger loves to talk on the phone," Mrs. Bivin said. "He likes to call several of his old friends in Lexington, where we moved from. That kind of got out of hand, so now Roger pays his own phone bills, which cut down on the phone calls a little."

"He's met a lot of people in his 23 years, and I'm sure he's been friendly to all of them. There's only one Roger," Barrow said.

"I guess I'm a lucky guy because I like to be friendly to people," the voice behind the stack of Talismans said. "Now can I look at the 1971? I think I know someone in it."

Kristen Reeder

PUSHING a cart down a ramp in Diddle Arena, Roger goes about the things he has to do at work. "I like my job," Roger said. "I mop the floors and sweep and take care of lots of things."

Table for five

DIVIDING a $209 telephone bill becomes a task for Lee Ann Miller, from Hardinsburg; Amy Taylor, a Wickliffe sophomore, and Sarah Fallin, a Lewisport senior. Liz Fourqurean, a Cadiz senior, was talking to a friend on the phone.

BEFORE GOING out for the evening, Taylor and Fallin get ready in the "pumping room." The girls used the room for putting on makeup and curling their hair.

Photos by Greg Lovett

Amy Taylor runs out of the bedroom and into the kitchen while Lee Ann Miller follows closely behind turning off the bedroom lights.

Light bills, like gas and electric, are considerably cheaper after they are equally divided between five roommates. Five roommates can make $270 rent only $54 apiece.

Like most college students, these five roommates — Taylor, a Wickliffe sophomore; Miller, from Hardinsburg; Sarah Fallin, a Lewisport senior; Liz Fourqurean, a Cadiz senior, and Crystal White, also a Cadiz senior, tried to cut their own living expenses. They decided the best way to save money was to rent a house together.

"The bills are considerably less," Fourqurean said.

A $209 telephone bill was one of the biggest expenses that the roommates had. "I think my bill is going to be about $100," Fourqurean said.

To keep the food bill low, each girl bought and cooked her own food. However, they did small things like bread, but milk.

"I don't know how I did it when I moved into the house. If we lived together, I would be Fallin said.

The house consisted of a room containing an unmade sofa and chair. Paintings hung on the walls. In the kitchen, it was filled with plates and that had been used, but washed. A bulletin board with letters, photographs, newspaper clippings and an interest to each of the roommates hung beside the telephone.

Unmatching bedspreads decorated the twin bed and bunk beds. Each roommate had a shelf by her bed with collected items ranging from seashells to pictures of dates.

There were five alarm clocks that were set to go off at different times. Every morning the alarm clocks started ringing at 6:30 and continued to ring at different intervals throughout the morning.

With only one bathroom, the roommates had to stand in line to use it for the shower.

"We can all get ready within an hour-and-a-half," Taylor said.

The "pumping room," as the girls called it, was the room where they applied their makeup and fixed their hair. Faces were crammed into the makeup mirrors and hands etched in different directions reaching for eyeliners, combs and hairspray. The small room was really large enough for all of the girls to be in at once, but somehow they managed to get ready each morning.

Bottles of makeup, perfume, curling irons, and rollers cluttered the "pumping room" while albums of Dan Collins, Dan Fogelberg, and Genesis were arranged in a neat row in the stereo cabinet.

"We have every kind of makeup and tunes you could want. Merle Norman and Record Bar have nothing on us," Fallin said.

One advantage to living in a house with five girls was always having someone to go out with or someone around just for talking.

"It's fun. These girls are my best friends," Miller said. "I think we've done a great job of living together in one house."

However, the girls did have their share of problems.

"The worst time is when one person is trying to study and everybody else is drunk," Fallin said.

According to all of the roommates, the best place to study was in "the bedroom or in the bathroom."

Trying to sleep was also a problem at times. Every night around midnight, the roommates would get their second wind.

"We have to go to bed half-an-hour before we want to go to sleep, because we sit around and talk,"

Fourqurean said. "It's like being at summer camp."

Talking was not the only problem that kept the girls from sleeping at night.

"You should hear Fallin snore," Miller said. "The house could be on fire and she would never wake up."

Ear plugs and pillows drown the noise of talking and snoring and provide a restful night of sleep.

Occasionally, the roommates had problems getting along with each other.

"Whenever we get mad at each other, we simply tell each other. That's the only way we can live together," Fourqurean said.

Privacy is a word that almost is unheard of at their house.

"We really don't have anything to be private about," Taylor said. "We share everything."

"We've had our bad times but..." Fallin said.

"But think," Miller said. "Only 54 bucks a month."

Gary Briggs

SLEEP sometimes is interrupted at night when the roommates sit around and talk. "It's like being at summer camp," Fourqurean said.

“It’s pretty interesting to see who comes in at 5:30 a.m.”
Jane Huebschman”

In the still of night

Photos by Rick Musacchio

A sense of humor, energy and motivation were essential to those who worked the graveyard shift, went to class and still hoped to get enough sleep so they could stay awake through it all. Students found ways to keep a job lively in the dead of the night.

“You have to know what you have to do and buckle down and do it,” Jane Huebschman, an Oxford, Ohio, sophomore, said. Huebschman was a night clerk at Central Hall. She worked from midnight to 6 a.m. about every fourth night.

She said she saw a lot of old movies, and she quoted the schedule for the music videos that come on every night. A tape recorder and a pillow kept her company when the people trickling in through the night didn’t.

The last hour was the hardest one to stay awake, she said, and those 8 a.m. classes were hard to catch. A good sense of humor helped, Huebschman said.

Huebschman began working as a night clerk in the fall semester. Her responsibilities included ensuring that women didn’t take men up to their rooms, answering the phone and being available in case of an emergency. “It’s pretty interesting to see who comes in at 5:30 a.m.,” she said. Many times people came in after an upsetting night with their boyfriends, and since Huebschman was the only person awake, they told her about their problems. “Sometimes I feel like a bartender,” she said.

But much of the night she spent alone. Huebschman’s days were very busy, and she appreciated the time she had to herself, she said. Sometimes friends visited during the night to act out scenes from movies, call toll-free numbers advertised on TV or talk for awhile.

Ron Menard also had people to keep him company on what he referred to as the “ultimate in graveyard shifts.” Menard, a Rindge, N.H., sophomore, worked from 1 a.m. to 9 a.m. on weekends at Cue Time. He kept track of the time on the pool tables, served sandwiches and drinks, maintained the video games and cleaned up at the 24-hour entertainment center.

Menard enjoyed working and the chance to socialize. He said he met “some of the nicest, warmest people” since he began working in mid-March.

“The ideal person to work there would have to be energetic, warm, personal and have the ability to work closely with other people,” he said.

Sometimes the job was boring, but soft drinks kept him awake, and customers supplied conversation. Menard said he never encountered any trouble at work. “There’s enough people in there to keep busy, not enough to cause any problems.”

WORKING as a night clerk gives Jane Huebschman a chance to catch up on gossip with Libby De la Cruz, a sophomore.

Menard said he could have interfered with his classes. Occasionally he worked day morning, and missed classes that day.

Jeff Jenkins, a Bowdoin junior, had the same problem. Jenkins worked from 11 a.m. in the finishing department at the Lord Corporation, a company that glues rubber to metal motor parts. He said he missed classes because he was tired, but he didn’t miss them often.

As a pre-med major, Jenkins had a lot of pressure to make good grades, but his job controlled his grade-point average. He worked 12 hours during spring semester. He said he planned to work part time to pay for his education, but he said he didn’t know if he would work in the fall.

Jenkins began looking for a job at the beginning of the semester and couldn’t find such a well-paying one. “I guess I’m too much into my studies,” he said.

Working at night was tough, though it would be hard to say so, he said, but he didn’t have any trouble. He said he enjoyed it. “It’s just like a day job,” he said.

Ang

NIGHT clerking allows Roger Mason, an Owensboro freshman, and his friend, Steve Terrell, an Owensboro sophomore, time to study. Mason was working as a night clerk in Barnes Campbell while Steve Scott, an Elizabethtown freshman, made a phone call.

WHILE late-nighters say goodbye, Huebschman tries to stay awake by studying. The Oxford, Ohio, sophomore worked from midnight to 6 a.m. about every fourth night.

“I usually try to fix a home-cooked meal for dinner.”

— Joe Bentley ”

No food for thought

An essay by Lori Medley

Mothers everywhere unite! Ask your college child, "Where's the beef?"

Look high and low, and you probably won't find much "mother-approved food" in those milk crates which decorate dorm rooms.

Your mission will be difficult, but not impossible. Push the green vegetables; demand fair time for lean meat and announce an all-out war on junk food.

The health of your children depends on your success. They've turned into fast food junkies.

If mothers only knew what college students REALLY eat for four years, they'd probably think we're all dying of malnutrition.

... But we survive. With the help of such delicacies as lunchmeat, chips and of course, soft drinks, and not to forget Twinkies, our bodies turn this "unreal food" into energy.

ROOMMATES John Bowling, a Shelbyville sophomore, and Larry Breuning, a Paris freshman, shop for groceries at Schnucks. Breuning was tossing a can into their cart.

We've learned to adapt this type of nutrition as if it were ambrosia and nectar for the gods.

Pam Seiber, an Earlington senior, asks the universal question, "Who has time to cook?"

In an environment of round-the-clock studying, partying or goofing off, students find little opportunity to perfect culinary talents.

"I always ate out when I lived in the dorm, but now since I have an apartment, my roommate and I cook a lot. We eat out rarely, but it goes in a cycle," Lee Manley, a Louisville junior, said.

For the weekend suitcases, it's a matter of bringing back enough home cooked food from mom to last until Friday. Leftovers from weekend feasts fill cabinets and eventually stomachs.

Food Services, along with over 100 restaurants in Bowling Green, also offer the students a chance to let someone else do the cooking.

"I usually eat out at least six times between Monday and Friday.

It's easy, and I don't have to do the dishes," Sandra Watson, a Peytonsburg freshman, admits. "It usually runs me around $30, but it's worth it."

Joe Bentley, a Gamaliel junior, said that he is forced to eat out at least once a day because of his schedule. "I'm not home for lunch so I eat fast food, but I usually try to fix a home-cooked meal for dinner."

Eating is also a social affair, and this is especially evident in a college community. "I hate to eat by myself," Jill Lyttle, a Williamsburg senior, said, "so I rarely eat in my dorm. Eating out gives me a chance to get away from campus for a while."

It's hard to pass by your roommate's bowl of popcorn and your neighbor's invitation for pizza with the gang.

So mothers, join the forces. Save us from the clutches of junk food. We may not survive four years of this heaven. T

“I usually eat out at least six times between Monday and Friday.”

— Sandra Watson ”

FISH AND CHIPS make a meal for Steve Musen, a Versailles junior, and Joseph Dalton, a Whitfield junior. The two caught the striped fish in Barren River.

—Greg Lovett

DURING a brief 70 degree weather break in mid April, Anna Duvall, a Leitchfield senior, and Marilyn Birge, a Huntingburg, Ind., junior, lie out in the sun. They were at "Bemis Beach" in front of Bemis Lawrence Hall.

AN URALUX tanning bed makes getting some sun easy for Denise Freepartner, a Harrodsburg freshman. A 10-minute visit was equivalent to two hours in the sun.

Makeshift beaches

Photos by Bobby Roe

The temperatures were in the 80s and the heat hung in the air like curtains. All over campus little Zuma beaches appeared — like veritable padstools. Students migrated to these makeshift beaches in search of the perfect tan. The search was one that involved many hours, many dollars, and many students.

Renee Claypool lay amidst the expense of bodies that littered the grassy field bordered by Rhodes Hall and Gilbert Hall. The Lebanon sophomore reclined on a ray corduroy husband and turned her oiled face toward the sun. "I like laying out in the sun," Claypool said. "It's relaxing and I love to keep up my tan."

Claypool generally spent two to three hours a day, twice weekly, sunbathing whenever the weather allowed. She sometimes laid out alone, but more often joined several friends who were also trying to achieve that elusive glow.

Natural tanning was just one of the methods employed by students seeking a bronzed body. Artificial tans could be had by using a personal sunlamp or by visiting one of the many tanning salons that appeared in Bowling Green — but not without debate over the safety of the instruments.

"They scare me," Amy Jones, a Louisville sophomore, said. "I've seen people that have used sunlamps and they've gotten mad. They seem to work too badly."

"I think the sun gives you a better color, anyway," added Claypool.

Conclusive evidence supporting the danger of artificial tanning has yet to be found — primarily due to the inefficiency of the industry.

Prolonged exposure to the sun predisposes an individual to skin cancer," Health Services Clinical Administrator Lucy Ritter said. "But most students don't care about the possibility of cancer in the future; they simply want to get a tan."

That desire to get a tan prompted many students to Novus Tan, a salon that opened in Bowling Green during the spring. Seventy percent of its customers were students who were willing to plunk down $6.50 per session. The session ranged from 10 minutes to half an hour depending on the individual skin type.

Novus uses the latest in tanning equipment — tanning beds. As opposed to the older, more popular tanning booths, the beds mark an improvement in user comfort. The booths required the customer to stand in a closet-sized box and rotate to ensure even coverage from four banks of lights — sort of a human rotisserie. The beds allow the customer to lie on a plexiglass bed that houses 11 banks of ultraviolet bulbs. Another set of lights are housed in a covering piece that is lowered over the customer to form a device not too unlike a coffin. Visitors can listen to a personal headset and even nap while the greenish light plays over their bodies to give them the equivalent of two hours tanning per session. The machines turn off automatically (via a timer) and release the entombed customer.

While the beds are considered safer than sunlamps or even the similar booths, some reports indicated there is danger involved. Prolonged use will cause drying and wrinkling of the skin, and exposure to ultraviolet light without adequate eye protection can cause photokeratitis, an inflammation of the cornea that can lead to permanent eye damage. Still, its supporters abound.

"As far as I'm concerned they are less dangerous than the sun," Novus owner Brian Gregory said. "The medical people will tell you that this is bad for you, but I don't believe a word of it."

Denise Freepartner, a Harrodsburg freshman, agrees. "I think they are safe. I've talked to my friends about it and we've never heard of anyone being burned by the beds. I did know someone who went in one of those booths for about five minutes and came out fried, but I don't think it can happen with these."

The convenience of artificial tanning appeals to time-conscious students.

"With all my classes and everything I just don't have time to lay out," Anne Juregen, a Glencoe, Mo., freshman, said. "I'm trying to maintain my spring break tan and I just can't devote three hours a day to it."

"Novus is great," Freepartner said. "You can come in at 9 p.m. or at 6 a.m. and boost your tan."

But for some the convenience doesn't justify the cost.

"They are just too expensive," Melissa Marsch, a Fort Lewis sophomore, said. "I'd probably go if I had the money, but I don't so I'm just going to keep laying out."

"My friends wanted to go with me but they couldn't afford it," Freepartner said. "I went originally because of a free coupon that ran in the Herald, but then I got hooked."

With powerful connotations such as wealth and vitality associated with tanning, many students were willing to sacrifice their time, pocketbooks, and skin to the acquisition of one. Though warned by the experts, students did not consider any possibility of skin cancer 20 years from now while seeking the perfect tan today. As Claypool joked, "If I have to die, I'd rather die with a tan." John Tazman

"If I have to die, I'd rather die with a tan."
— Renee Claypool

Free time well spent

Photos by Kevin Ems

In the lobby of Gilbert Hall a small crowd formed a circle around Barb Koehler as she painted a personalized mug for a girl in Alpha Omicron Pi. A few people watching in the crowd placed orders and left as a new crowd slowly formed. Within a couple of hours Koehler had 50 orders for personalized mugs and tumblers.

Koehler, an Edgewood freshman, said this scene was not unusual. Like many other students, Koehler pursued a hobby she enjoys, and was paid for creating things people could use. "I considered it a compliment that people paid me to paint a mug," she said. "I enjoyed doing it. It could be a full-time job if I let it."

Koehler worked with David Wolff, a Fort Mitchell freshman, the "person who supervised the money and materials." They both wanted to make money for college living expenses. Koehler said, "I am not making a great deal of profit now because I just started, and I've purchased a lot of materials, but I do have a lot of orders."

Koehler at one point had so many orders to fill that she had to stop taking them. She said she budgeted her time so that she spent about four hours a week painting mugs and tumblers. She also worked as a resident assistant in Schneider Hall. "I keep busy, but painting mugs doesn't seem like a job because I like to do it so much."

Koehler started selling mugs after Christmas break when she realized there was a potential student market willing to buy her work. "Students complimented me on the Christmas presents I made so I thought I could sell them."

Although Koehler lived in Schneider, she often painted in Gilbert Hall to make contact with a large percent of her customers — grieks.

For grieks, Koehler usually made a member a sample mug or tumbler to take to chapter meetings so members could place orders there.

Sherie Duvall sat in her room with her legs crossed with a cigarette in one hand and a paint brush in the other. No crowd formed around her, pressing her for orders. Only a clay replica of Sateious Crumb, a character from Return of the Jedi for which a friend once offered $150, kept her company.

Duvall, a Belton senior, had several jobs making crafts. She had been employed at a jewelry shop, a glass company, two photography shops and a fabric warehouse in Chicago. She got many of her supplies at discount rates from her past employers. "Because my supplies were inexpensive, I was able to enjoy a sizable profit," Duvall said.

"Whatever somebody wants I make," she said. Duvall was even commissioned to paint a picture of the Rochester Dam in Rochester.

"I could see making things for people all the time if I was a housewife, but I'm not. I am a student and sometimes I have to say 'no,'" she said.

Duvall said once a student wanted to purchase something she had made but was unwilling to pay the price. "Later the girl realized that she couldn't do it herself as cheap and as fast as I could."

Duvall also made jackets for pets, personalized cakes and mugs. She also made quilts "especially for babies," and macrame plant hangers. She didn't go out and buy pottery in the store whenever someone wanted a painted bowl, but she made her own on a potter's wheel.

Duvall started making crafts at a young age. "My mother and grandmother taught me how to crochet and weave. They showed me many different types of art." She said both of her parents paint, and that her family enjoys several forms of art, such as music and dance. Duvall had nine years of formal classical ballet training.

Duvall said that it's never too late to learn how to appreciate what people create.

"I like to create original things," she said. "I use whatever tools I can to make the things people want."

Unlike Duvall, Debbie Sheets looked for a crowd. She sold Avon in the dorms. "I wanted to give it a try," she said. "I like Avon and wanted to buy some Avon for myself, but it turned out that I ended up selling it."

Sheets worked about five hours a week talking to people about Avon. "I don't solicit people to buy, but I leave books down in the lobbies of dorms to let people know I sell Avon, and if they want it they know where they can come to get Avon products."

As a resident assistant in Bate Runner Hall and a junior with a double major in geography and sociology, Sheets felt the extra money was important. "Even if it's a little bit I feel good knowing I have that much extra to help me out on gas for my car, or an extra movie." The neat thing about selling Avon, Sheets said, was that she could set her own hours.

"It's not like working in the cafeteria, or some other kind of structured work. It's something I can do in my spare time because I like talking to people and making money."

Cathy Boer

IN HER ROOM. Sherie Duvall, a Belton senior, holds a clay figure she made of Sateious Crumb, a character from Return of the Jedi. She had many other jobs making crafts.

WHILE WORKING as a desk clerk in Schneider Hall, Barb Koehler, an Edgewood freshman, paints on a cup for a friend. She personalized the cups in her spare time to earn extra money.

PAINTING on tumblers is a money-making hobby to Koehler. At one point, she had so many orders she had to stop taking them.

People who keep the good times rollin'

Photos by Bobby Roe

Each year, thousands of people travel to Nashville to see and hear the Grand Ole Opry, Opryland, and country music.

But while these tourists are enjoying themselves at Opryland, over 2,000 young people are working hard, performing in a show, serving a meal, or operating a ride, to help visitors have an exciting day at the park.

Opryland is the location of summer work for several students from Western.

"I thought it would be neat to help other people have fun," Donna Sloan, a Greenbrier, Tenn., junior, said.

"People really enjoy riding the rides and seeing the shows. I wanted to be around them while they are having their fun," Sloan, a three-year employee who worked on the Rock-n-Roller Coaster, said.

As a little girl, Nancy Day would go to Opryland with her family to spend the day.

"Even when I was young, I always wanted to work there," Day, a Nashville, Tenn., senior said.

"I started when I was 16 and I figured I would keep working there until I started college," Day said.

"After I went to college, I decided to remain working there because it was a good summer job," she said.

Day, a seven-year employee, was an operations supervisor in charge of rides such as Wabash Cannonball, Tennessee Waltz, and The Barnstormer.

Working with people her own age and being their supervisor can sometimes cause a few problems.

"It's hard to separate myself from my friends," she said. "I sometimes wanted to be their friend when I knew I have to be the supervisor."

ADJUSTING the microphone O'Brien McKinley, an Elizabethton, works as a stage technician. He is up the show, "For Me and My Gal."

The biggest pressure Day felt from her position was "that everyone's job satisfaction and performance does depend on me."

Most employees' job satisfaction derives from the people they work with on their crew.

"I really like the people I work with," Vivian Parker, a Goingsville, Tenn., senior who is in charge of the Kiddie Rides, said. "That is why I keep coming back each year."

At each location, there is a person called a lead who is in charge of the daily operation of the ride and the crew.

"The people that work on the rides are really close to each other," Sloan said. "We hang out together after work to go home and do stuff that is fun."

WHILE GUESTS BOARD the Skyride, Randy Bowman, a Nashville, Tenn., junior, holds the car door open. Bowman worked at Opryland for summer employment.

WATCHING the coaster leave the station, Lynne Dickerson, a Madison, Tenn., senior, works at the Rock-n-Roller Coaster. Dickerson worked at Opryland for three years.

most people, Opryland was a good place to work," Ann said.

needed a job and it sounded like a good place to work," Ann said.

and her twin sister, Jan, seniors from Gallatin, Tenn., did for jobs after they graduated from high school.

"I really enjoy working with the people that work with me," Ann said.

Corbin sisters started five years ago as area hostesses but since moved to being ride operators. Jan is the lead of the Cannonball rollercoaster, Ann works on the new mini-Delta Demon.

With the fun times of an Opryland employee, each and hostess faces his or her share of bad times.

It's not fun when you have to stand outside in a storm," Parker said. "I don't like having to stand in the rain and getting all of your clothes soaking wet."

Rude guests are also a problem that every employee encounters.

"When you have a guest that is real upset, you just have to sit there and listen to him scream and just keep smiling," Day said.

"People get really upset when their children do not meet the safety restrictions that are set for a ride. That is probably one of the biggest complaints," she said.

Guests who are upset and screaming do not bother Sloan.

"You see enough people having fun that most of the time you forget about the people who are being rude," Sloan said.

Along with the job experience, lasting friendships, and good and bad times, each person had an unforgettable experience to tell.

One of the most unusual experiences happened one afternoon when Day was called to answer an emergency call at the Wabash Cannonball.

When she arrived at the location of the ride, she found a man waiting there to talk to her.

The guest had just finished the roller coaster and had dropped a small item when the coaster went upside down. During the ride, he had somehow lost his glass eye.

"There I was talking to a man with a hole in his face where his eye was supposed to be," Day said.

"What was really worse was trying to find his glass eye in the bushes. I was more scared of finding the eye than I was when I was talking to the man," she said.

"I never did find that eye. I guess it's still there in the bushes," Day said.

"There are so many funny incidents that have happened to me," Parker said. "I can't even remember them all."

Gary Briggs

Educational harvest

Photos by T. J. Hamilton

Working on the family farm before going to school is an everyday occurrence for Jeff Shrull.

Shrull, a Franklin senior, works on the family farm and also takes classes.

"I've wanted to be a farmer from the beginning," he said. "My dad's always been around farming. Even when we lived in a town, we farmed land outside of town."

Shrull, a general agriculture major, said it's hard to work on the farm and go to school at the same time.

"As far as my studies are concerned, I'm putting emphasis on the things I need on the farm," Shrull said. "I take the classes to get the information I need and want rather than for a degree."

Shrull said farming isn't as time consuming as it was in the past, "but when you cut your days in half by going to school, you feel you don't know where to start sometimes."

continued on page 78

THROUGH A barn window, Jeff Shrull, a Franklin senior, looks out at the woods on the family farm. Shrull commuted to Western for classes.

AFTER ground hog hunting earlier in the afternoon, Shrull cleans his rifle in his bedroom. Above his bed was a model airplane which he built.

BEFORE a day of work on the farm, Shrull shoots some baskets at home. "I've wanted to be a farmer from the beginning," he said.

WHILE in his anatomy and physiology of domestic animals class, Shrull talks to Buster Estes, a Franklin senior. Shrull felt that classes were more important to help on the farm, rather than a degree.

IN ONE of his barn holding pens, Shrull feeds his piglets. The piglets were fed twice a day, and the older pigs were fed once a day to save feed.

Harvest cont.

Shrull farms 40 acres by himself and also has his own pigs. He receives half of the proceeds from his father's nine acres of tobacco.

Shrull uses registered Hampshire boars to breed his Yorkshire/Landrace sows. "Most of them have floppy ears, but every once in a while there's one born whose ears stand straight up."

Shrull and his father, Landell Douglas, breed their pigs so that they have newborns arriving periodically. By doing this they are able to have a steady income. They sell their pigs to livestock markets in Franklin.

"Besides our swine production, we have a beef production along with small grains. We raise soybeans, corn and wheat," Shrull said. "We put the wheat in the ground in the fall and plant the soybeans as a no-till crop after combining. The corn and the tobacco are planted in separate places."

Shrull and his father also do specialty work for other farmers in the spring and fall.

"We have the farmers work their plant beds until the ground is just as fine as they want it for seeding. Then we go in with our specially equipped tractor and gas (sterilize) the ground and lay down plastic to cover it," Shrull said.

He and his father can lay more than three dozen plant beds a day and usually do about 200 a season.

"Sometimes riding a tractor can get boring," Shrull said, "but it gives me a lot of time to think. One of the best things about riding a tractor is that you can listen to the radio and sing at the top of your lungs and no one can hear you."

Shrull, the oldest of four children, graduated from Franklin-Simpson High School in 1980.

In high school, Shrull served as treasurer and then as vice president of Future Farmers of America. He also won the swine impromptu speech competition for the area and went on to place third in the state competition.

"I haven't been involved in competition or any of the work at the farm (Western's) while I'm at Western because I'm not on campus, but I'm still a member of FFA," Shrull said.

As a freshman, Shrull had to get a special permit from Western to commute to school while living and working at home. He only drives to campus on Mondays, Wednesdays and every other Friday.

When Shrull graduates, he's not sure where he'll live. "I'm reaching the point where I want to be out on my own, as far as a place to live is concerned," Shrull said.

"I have a friend who has a trailer and is looking for a place to put it. Maybe he'll move it out here and we'll live in it over at the other farms. It would give him a place to live."

ACTING as a weight, Shrull bales discs while laying plant beds for farmer. The Shrulls prepared tobacco starter plant beds to make extra money.

Aside from farming, Shrull has other interests — he has a girlfriend.

"I don't have a steady girlfriend now," he said. "I had one about two years right out of school and I think that hurt a little."

Shrull's father said, "Aren't enough girls in agriculture is very picky. He seems the ones that are out of state — they're not close enough to bother him."

The younger Shrull said, "I when I get ready for a wife, I want to have one that did something different from farming for a few years, so we'd something to talk about."

When Shrull does get a girlfriend, he hopes she shares his religious ideas.

But for now Shrull is satisfied with his life at home with his father, his stepmother Rita, and his month-old brother, Derek.

The best thing about living at home, Shrull said, "is the good home cooking after coming from a day's work. You can get that living on campus."

Grace Moore and Kristen Rei

AFTER TRYING to herd cows, if loose, Shrull walks across a corn field and his father tried all day to round up the cows and eventually had to hire someone to get the cows together.

A PROFESSIONAL cowboy completes his performance in the bull riding event. He received 63 out of 80 points for his effort.

PEEKING over a wall, Charles Talley, the 4-year-old son of Teresa Talley of Bowling Green, watches the cowboys during the Preston Fowlkes Rodeo. The rodeo, sponsored by the agriculture department, was held at the Agriculture Expo Center.

—T. J. Hamilton

R

ODEO!

Cowboys in their multi-colored chaps and cowboy hats paced the red earth floor.

Horses pranced with nervousness as the crowd gathered. People from all around Bowling Green attended.

Everyone waited with anticipation. They bought concessions from the agriculture department. They sang to the country music that rang from the arena speakers.

The children ran around the arena in frenzied excitement hoping to catch a glimpse of the clowns or talk to the cowboys.

Rodeo announcer Jerry Todd introduced the first act. Chief Stormfeathers, dressed in a full Indian headdress, was seated on a pinto horse as he recited "How Great Thou Art" in Indian sign language.

They all waited for the rodeo to begin.

The agriculture department sponsored the rodeo March 15, 16 and 17 in hopes of raising funds for agriculture scholarships and the department's farm. Dr. Luther Hughes, department head, said,

However, attendance was not as high as anticipated. During the rodeo's first night only 600 tickets were sold and Hughes said he had expected a sell-out Friday and Saturday nights.

Although all expectations were not fulfilled, attendance did increase to 1300 Friday night and 1600 Saturday night in Western Exposition Center that holds 23 people.

Hughes said he was disappointed that very few Western students attended the rodeo. "We don't know if rodeo is something students like," he said.

Agriculture professor David Coffey added that if the rodeo had been advertised in the Herald more students may have attended.

"We wanted something fun oriented, and we thought rodeo would draw a good crowd," Butch Berry, rodeo announcer, said.

Berry, of Preston Fowlkes Rodeo, said there were six competitive events with 266 cowboys and cowgirls competing throughout the weekend.

—Bobby Rice

The first competition of the evening was the bareback riding contest. The agriculture department did almost everything except compete in the rodeo.

Hughes said 60 agriculture students volunteered to work at the rodeo, 30 of whom worked every night. Every agriculture faculty member and two department secretaries worked as well.

Students ran the concession stands that were set up all over the arena and sold hotdogs, nachos and soft drinks to hungry rodeo goers.

Jimmy Coyer, a Wickliffe freshman, and Rusty Cartee, a Greenwood, Ind. junior, operated the large spotlights.

Cartee was the production crew chairman who ran other shows on campus.

Coyer, though, had never man-

—Bobby Rice

A CONCESSION stand makes a good vantage point for Ruthi Steff, a Bowling Green senior. Steff, an agriculture major, was one of 5000 people who attended the four shows.

RODEO CLOWN Bobby Leggett challenges the bull to charge him. He was trying to distract the bull until the rider was clear from the arena.

—Bobby Rice

ned the spotlight before but said he enjoyed it.

The agriculture department also sold the rodeo crew the feed for their animals.

Overall, the students and faculty in the agriculture department said they were pleased with the event.

"Rarely do you see a rodeo in Bowling Green," David Hull, an Irvington senior, said. Hull, who worked at one of the concession stands, said he liked to see the children at the rodeo. "Nowadays their toys are video games, and it is good to see that they still like cowboys."

For a lot of students, it was their first rodeo, and they hoped the rodeo would become an annual event.

During the rodeo, the major attractions included the steer wrestling, calf roping, women's barrel racing, and bull riding.

Concession stands worker Albert Fuqua, a Bowling Green junior, said calf roping was his favorite event because it took the most skill.

In between the events the rodeo clowns entertained the crowd with skits and different antics.

Jose Villegas, a Miranda, Venezuela, senior, said he liked the bull riding event best because "it shows if you are tough enough."

Sarah Cavin, Brentwood, Tenn., junior, said it was her first rodeo and she came to "see what they actually do at a rodeo."

It was something new for Bowling Green and for Western students. The action and the fun of the rodeo let the audience pretend for a few minutes that they were all cowboys or cowgirls. Kim Swift

COMMUNITY VOLUNTEERS

Helping hands

Between classes, studying, working, eating, and sleeping, most students have little time for themselves. Yet several managed to find time—and gave it to others. Len Cundiff, a Greenville junior, is one student who did volunteer work. She was involved with the Big Brothers and Big Sisters program since her sophomore year. She grew fond of her little sister, Erin Davis.

"I had seen the Big Brothers and Big Sisters program advertisement on TV and had wanted to get involved in the program. Finally I looked up the number in the phone book and gave them a call," Cundiff said.

The program office paired the two and a friendship formed right away.

Cundiff took her horseback riding at a friend's farm, to a playground for a picnic and to the Greenwood Mall.

"I love spending time with her. I'm still getting to know her now, but as soon as we become better friends and her mom gives me her key, I'd like to take her home with me to meet my family," Cundiff said. "I know they will think she's as special as I do."

Another student who volunteered his time as a Big Brother was Chuck Riley, a Greenville senior. Riley was working toward his teacher certification with a major of concentration in social sciences.

He got involved in the program freshman year. He watched his brother, Billy Roman, grow into a very shy and quiet 9-year-old. Billy was a typical, aggressive 9-year-old.

"I take Billy home with me about three weeks and he loves spending time with my family," Riley said. "I guess after four years they are like a second family to him."

Riley took Billy roller skating, hunting, fishing, to movies and ballgames. "I'd take him anywhere in a minute if I could afford it."

Riley said if anyone felt like they might want to join an organization that does volunteer work with children, they should do it.

"There is really no satisfaction like knowing you've been able to help someone less fortunate than yourself who might not have had the opportunity to feel as loved and cared about as you have," Riley said. "It's a real rewarding experience; you just can't get any better."

Ken Flaherty, a Louisville junior, spent about 15 hours per week doing volunteer work.

As a member of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and Sigma Phi Epsilon, Flaherty did volunteer work within a group. But he also devoted time to volunteer for the American Cancer Society and Special Olympics on his own.

Flaherty traveled to neighboring counties to speak to grade school children about smoking.

"I'm a representative for the American Cancer Society because I don't think young kids need to be informed by someone they can relate to," Flaherty said. "Kids need to be informed by someone they can relate to."

The Special Olympics provided a special satisfaction for Flaherty.

"The kids (in the olympics) are kind of trapped—they get out to do this kind of stuff once a year," Flaherty said. "Those kids appreciate it more than you could ever know."

"When the Special Olympics are over you see the smile on the kids' faces and they hug you. It's a very self-satisfactory feeling."

Tracy Baugh, a Beaver Dam graduate student, has volunteered an hour of her time every week for the past three years by visiting the residents of the Colonial Nursing Facility.

The first time Baugh went it wasn't planned. She just happened to be with her dorm director who was making a visit.

"Once I went I had to keep going," Baugh said. "I've gotten really attached to the people there. They're like a bunch of grandparents to me."

Baugh, a member of the Baptist Student Union, said she usually went with other BSU members to the nursing home.

"The residents liked for us to sing," Baugh said. "They gather in the lobby and request songs."

Besides singing, Baugh said they played bingo with the residents and "listened to a lot of neat stories."

Rodney Young, a Louisville graduate student, volunteered at the Barren River Comprehensive Care Center for class credit, but did not get paid for it.

Young, who was working on his master's in clinical psychology, said although he was not required to volunteer, he did it to gain experience with clients who wouldn't be at Western's clinic.

"Course credit is last on my list of importance," Young said. "My confidence in working with clients is at the top of my list."

Volunteering at the clinic gave Young a chance for practical experience.

"My skills weren't really tested until I got into a real situation," Young said. "Now I know I will be able to perform."

Davis Allison, a Bowling Green junior, volunteered about five hours a week at The Medical Center at Bowling Green.

"I'm going into radiology and I felt it could give me a boost into school and the field."

Allison began volunteering because a teacher suggested he try it.

Kristen Reeder and Kay Sallee

DRESS PANTS, a button-down shirt and a polo jacket put Jon Norris, a Portland, Tenn., sophomore, in the preppy scene. Although many people thought the prep look was on its way out, it was still seen on campus.

STUDENTS dressed up when they went out on the town and began dressing up more on campus. Norris wore a blazer with gray flannel pants; Debbie McBride, a Leitchfield senior, wore a belted blue dress; and Lisa Higdon, an Owensboro junior, wore a white silk blouse and black skirt.

Stylish touch

Style. It's hard to explain, yet everyone wants it. The American Heritage Dictionary defines style as "a quality of imagination and individuality expressed in one's actions and tastes." Fashionably speaking, style isn't exactly what you wear, it's how you wear it. Calvin Kleins won't make you any more stylish than Levi 501s unless you feel better in them. It's just a matter of individual taste.

And individuals' tastes are what made up Western's style. It was a year of fashion contrasts and the look ran from preppy to an updated new-wave look.

Theresa Allen, manager of Imagination at Greenwood Mall, said, "The preppy trend is on its way out." Although that seemed to be the general consensus of many Bowling Green retailers, the prep style wasn't extinct on campus.

Preppy women still wore madras skirts, cotton sweaters and espadrilles or Tretorns—all in past green and navy. And preppy men still wore Ralph Lauren polo chinos, argyle socks, and navy blue blazers.

"Guys look nice in prep," Suzanne Deputy, a Bowling Green freshman, said. "It's made for a guy—nice and conservative."

An updated designer look was Deputy's style. "Designer clothes show more femininity," Deputy said.

Jamie Hawks, assistant manager of My Friend's Place in Greenwood Mall, said they sold a lot of updated styles and fashions by new designers.

"Some of our fashions are expensive, but college girls are willing to spend money on quality clothes that will last," Hawks said.

The updated look is very versatile, according to Hawks. "Buying separates allows a girl to mix and

continued on page 8

A SHAPELESS belted dress, oversized earrings, and belt make up the vogue look worn by Francetta Norwood, a Highland freshman. Updated styles have become more common on campus.

Stylish cont.

match, rather than being stuck with a suit and having nothing to wear with it."

Closely related to the updated look was the fun look. The brightly-colored look included short pants, also known as crop pants, miniskirts and a lot of accessories.

"This was a diverse year," Allen said. "We had short tight skirts to long full skirts, but the bottom line was to keep it fun and accessorize. If you're not accessorized, you're not dressed."

Accessories for the updated woman included wide sash belts, big earrings, and heavy wooden necklaces. Preppy women accessorized with add-a-bead necklaces—the more the better—pearls, and strip belts with

THE MOVIE "FLASHDANCE" a new look of off-the-shoulder fashions worn by Tammy Elam, a Hopkinsville sophomore, Steve Smith, an Evansville junior, and Todd Burris, a Vian freshman, proved. A striped balloon skirt with bobby socks made a fun look for Deputy, while Burris wore the preppy look of a tennis sweater and khaki walking shorts.

Gary Patterson, manager of Chess King at the Greenwood Mall, said his store sold a lot of the fashions for men. "It's a new style—not super punk, but

DURING the spring semester, many students took advantage of the warm weather and soaked up the sun. The mallot was popular in swimwear, as worn by Allyson Rowles, a Nashville, Tenn., sophomore, and Tammy Elam, a Hopkinsville sophomore.

—Bobby Roe

NO SINGLE STYLE dominated the fashion scene, as Suzanne Deputy, a Bowling Green freshman, and Todd Burris, a Vienna, Va., sophomore, prove. A striped balloon skirt with bobby socks made a fun look for Deputy, while Burris wore the preppy look of a tennis sweater and khaki walking shorts.

where the trend is going."

Sleeveless shirts, studded belts and ties, and parachute pants were some of Chess King's best-selling items.

Tony Rehman, an Evansville, Ind., junior, and a salesman at The Junction in Greenwood Mall, said, "New-wave was definitely what was in."

"College students dressed up more than they did in the past," Clarissa Lewis, fashion show coordinator at Barbara's World in the Greenwood Mall, said. "They are more concerned with the image they project."

Preppy, updated, fun, and dressed-up weren't the only looks on campus. If the only whales one cared to see were beached or if students thought that the miniskirt went out with Twiggy, they weren't fashion outcasts. There was no set way to dress. Individual tastes ruled and they were worn with style.

Kristen Reeder

—Alan Warren

the touch of People

They came from various backgrounds in August and made Western their temporary home—all 12,666 of them.

They were the heart of the university and each brought with them unique experiences.

A senior became one of the first women to guard the gold vault of Fort Knox.

A junior left his touch on Western by painting a mural on the 23rd floor of Pearce-Ford Tower.

And a sophomore became a familiar face on campus after appearing in a television commercial.

Although some students' lives were more impressive than others, everyone carried with them a touch of red.

—Mike Healy

Inside:

98 A senior baton twirler performs one last time during her college career. Cindy Fischer looks at her four years as a WKU majorette.

114 A graduate student is recognized for writing the script for a movie. Karen Richardson tells her story.

186 Freshman Clemette Haskins talks about her basketball career and her choice to follow in her father's footsteps.

AT THE Southeastern Louisiana game, an enthusiastic fan supports the Toppers. Western lost the game 27-7.

DURING warm weather, Becky Crosier-Sharp, a Bowling Green sophomore, studies outside. She was near Thompson Complex.

—Chris Sharp

Senior

c · l · a · s · s

USING a felt marker, Terri Zhe, a Sleepy Hollow, Ill., senior, traces letters on her final project. The project was for a home economics and family living basic design class.

INDA SUE BATSON, advertising
Newburgh, Ind.
DAVID BAULCH, mgmt./banking
Nashville, Tenn.
MO BAUMGARDNER, elem. ed.
Upton
JOHN BEACH, coord. art
Bowling Green
LORI BEATY, government
Hendersonville, Tenn.

MELISSA BEDINGER, coord. art
Hendersonville, Tenn.
DEBRA BELL, int. design
Evansville, Ind.
BARBARA BENDIS, psychology
Versailles
TIMOTHY BENNINGFIELD, ag. ed.
Elkhorn
MICHAEL BENTHALL, int. design
Glenaboro

ERIC BERMEL, mass comm.
Florissant, Mo.
LANN BESHEAR, info. systems
Springfield, Tenn.
TRACY BILLINGSLEY, mass comm.
Glasgow
JODY BINGHAM, marketing
Chamberburg, Pa.
ROBERT BIVENS, bio./geology
Elizabethtown

PERSONALITY

Freedom of speech

I have a dream that this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed. We hold these truths to be self evident — that all men are created equal," Martin Luther King Jr. said in 1963 at a civil rights speech in Washington, D.C.

Today, 20 years later, Darryl Van Leer, a Madisonville senior, gives the same message as he impersonates the famous Nobel Peace Prize winner.

"The Miss Black Western Pageant needed a performer for the 1981 spring pageant," Van Leer said. "I was a member of the Afro-American Players here at Western and I decided to impersonate Martin Luther King."

"It took me about a week and a half to memorize the 10-page speech," he said. "I had never seen King speak but there was a video tape in the library of part of the speech that I watched to become familiar with his gestures. I also have a King album that I learned his speech patterns and pauses from."

"I HAVE a dream . . ." Darryl Van Leer, a Madisonville senior, says as he impersonates Martin Luther King. Van Leer dreamed of attending a performing arts school after graduation.

"I've performed at local churches, for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and for the Riasok Lodge in Elizabethtown," he said. "I have also performed at the last two Miss Black Western Pageants."

Van Leer performs another King speech, "Early Days," and has also added the character of Fredrick Douglas, who speaks on American prejudice and anti-slavery.

"This speech was harder to memorize and to perform," he said. "There were a lot of long words that were hard to pronounce and also I had to develop a new speech pattern and new movements."

"I'm going to New York at Christmas for a few days, just to check things out," he said. "I hope this time next year I will be somewhere in a performing arts school."

Jessica Rappaport

DENA BLACK, math
Bowling Green
GREGORY BLACK, biology
Bedford
WILLIAM BLAND, civil eng. tech.
Campbellsville
LEEANNE BLANTON, phys. ed.
Rome, Ga.
KAREN BLOOMFIELD, tex. and cloth
Hendersonville, Tenn.

LOUIS BLOSS, journalism
Bowling Green
MOLLY BOGDAN, public relations
Bowling Green
PATRICIA BOGUSKIE, accounting
Franklin, Tenn.
SUE BOLIN, health care admin.
Hopkinsville
SUZANNE BOLING, math
Philpot

SUSAN BOONE, tex. and cloth
Letchfield
SUWIT BOORANAPHONSATHIT, computer sci.
Birmingham, Ala.
MARY BOWLING, nursing
Louisville
JOAN BOWMAN, community health/health care admin.
Shepherdsville
JEFF BOYLES, broadcasting
Russellville

Steamed up

STEAM RISES into the air as Jim DeSpain, a Louisville senior, walks by. The steam was coming from a drain near McCormack parking lot.

DAVID BRADY, civil engin. tech.
Bowling Green
MARIE BRANAN, elec. engin. tech.
Nashville, Tenn.
RA BRANSTETTER, govt./history
Glasgow
CHAEI BRANTLEY, indust. tech.
Clay
LYVONNE BRAY, recreation
Roundhill

MARY BRAY, dent. hygiene
Lafayette
CATHY BRENTS, bdcast. engin.
Louisville
BREWER, accounting/info. systems
Glasgow
BBY BRIGHT, speech/hist./gov't
Bradfordville
DENISE BRINER, chemistry
Bowling Green

MIKE BRINER, recreation
Bowling Green
JOHN BRITT, nursing
Franklin
JILL BRODER, psych./socio.
Monsey, N.Y.
ANNY BRODERICK, broadcasting
Louisville

MARISELA BROMBIN, elem. ed.
Caracas, Venezuela
TOMAS BROMBIN, adv./bus.
Bowling Green
KAMILLE BROOKBANK, bdcast./socio.
Lexington
JENNIFER BROOKS, nursing
Bowling Green
JOEL BROUGHTON, ag. bus.
Scottsville

CYNTHIA BROWN, elem. ed.
Scottsville
DAVID BROWN, banking
Bowling Green
NANCY BROWN, phys. ed.
Bowling Green
TOMIA BROWN, speech path.
Bowling Green
GARY J. BROWNING, history
Lebanon

ROBERT R. BRUCE JR., elec. engin. tech.
Louisville
TAMMY BRUMFIELD, marketing
Irvington
JAMES D. BRYANT, phys. ed.
Bowling Green
SHARON BUMGARNER, finance
Bowling Green
PERRY BURNS, communication
Bowling Green

STEVE BURNS, computer sci.
Louisville
TONY BURRIS, civil engin. tech.
Somerset
KAREN BURYSEK, community health
Portland, Tenn.
CYNTHIA L. CALEBS, agriculture
Battletown
DOROTHY CANADA, tex. and cloth.
Radcliff

LUISA CARABALLO, info. systems
Bowling Green
EDWARD L. CARNES, computer sci.
Leitchfield
DANA CARPENTER, nursing
Utica
DANTE CARPENTER, agriculture
Russell Springs
MICHAEL CARR, nursing
Rineyville

TERRI L. CARRIER, home ec. ed.
Bowling Green
GINNY CARROLL, indust. tech.
Louisville
SANDRA CARROLL, government
Sweeden
BARRY CARTER, geology
Bowling Green
CAROLYN L. CARTER, phys. ed./rec.
Bowling Green

JANA CASTLE, social sci.
Albany
JENNIFER CATLETT, bus. mgt.
Bardonia
ROBERT CAUDILL, bio./psych.
Jeffersontown
WANDA CHANDLER, special ed.
Bowling Green
DENA CHAPMAN, government
Tompkinsville

PATRICIA CHAPPELL, English
Greenville
MARSHA CHEATHAM, bus. ed.
Columbia
SAMUEL CHILDERS, indust. tech.
Louisville
JULIA CHILDS, med. records tech.
Newburgh, Ind.
KAREN CIRULLI, hotel/motel mgmt.
Painted Post, N.Y.

CONNIE CLARK, history
Albany
JAMES CLARK, music
Somerset
KAREN CLARK, nursing
Franklin
MELINDA CLARK, nursing
Jefferson
SANDRA CLARK, dent. hygiene
Owensboro

CONNIE COBB, library sci.
Horse Cave
TERESA COCKRELL, agriculture
Caneville
BILL COFFEY, elem. ed.
Holtsville
KYLE COLE, biology
Alvaton
MICHAEL COLLINS, journalism
Ermine

MICHAEL P. COLLINS, photojournalism
Lexington
AMY COMPTON, biochemistry
Franklin
MELISSA CONLEY, biology
Bowling Green
THAD F. CONNALLY III, phy. therapy
Bowling Green
JOHN CORNELIUS, public relations
Louisville

MELINDA CORNELL, social work
Central City
RAUL CORREA, agriculture
Bowling Green
LISA COSSEY, history
Bowling Green
LEISA COTTON, phy. ed.
Franklin
MARK COWHERD, broadcasting
Shelbyville

TAMMY COX, marketing
Evansville, Ind.
MATTHEW CRABTREE, management
Bowling Green
ARDIS R. CRITTENDEN, marketing
Bowling Green
BEVERLY CUMMINGS, elem. ed.
Bowling Green
KEVIN CUNDIFF, comp. sci./math
Bowling Green

ROGER D. CUNNINGHAM, public relations
Cadia
PHILIP CUPPY, mach. engr. tech.
Bowling Green
DANNY CURRY, English
Bowling Green
HORACE CURRY, info. systems
Lexington
ASIAH DAHALAN, accounting
Pahang, Malaysia

Under cover

DURING a brief rain, Kendra Jones, left, a Lexington senior, gets ready to cross the street in front of the student center with her two sons, Cameron, left, and Ryan. With them is Dana Edwards, a junior also from Lexington.

— Todd Bunn

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Performance with a twist

Memories, pictures and trophies are all senior Cindy Fischer has to show now for more than 16 years of practice and thousands of miles of travel. The Bridgeton, Mo., commercial art major has been a twirler for the Big Red Marching Band for the past five years and was also a twirler in grade school and high school bands.

Beginning at the age of six with a broomstick for a baton, Fischer went on to take private lessons and began competing in contests by the time she was seven years old.

"Mom kept me practicing," Fischer said. "And dad paid the bills for lessons and other expenses."

The expenses included several batons and a lot of traveling. Over the years, Fischer has used a total of 15 batons, although she admitted she "always had a special one or two."

Fischer has accumulated over 850 trophies and 300 medals, most of which are stored at her parent's home.

One of the most special awards she received was the "Miss Majorette of Missouri" award for marching, modeling and solo performance. She held that title three times, at the ages of 11, 13 and 17. She also has been the Missouri State Twirling Champion and was the first runner-up in the Miss Majorette of America National Contest in 1979.

CINDY Fischer, a Bridgeton, Mo., senior, gives her final twirling performance at the WKU-Virginia Commonwealth basketball game. Fischer was a twirler in the Big Red Band for five years.

The 22-year-old Fischer now teaches young twirlers and judges twirling contests.

"I want to keep teaching forever," Fischer said. "I enjoy teaching because the girls get so excited about performing in public."

"Twirling taught me to be competitive, to share and to be happy for others, but it taught me to lose too," Fischer said. "Once you're a champion, you're going to lose some and you can either fight or walk away — fighting is more my style."

Tami Peerman T

— Greg Lewis

KENNETH DANIEL, mech. engin. tech.
Hartford
DAVID DAVIS, mkt./speech
Trenton
DONALD DAVIS, accounting
Russellville
ROBERT DAVIS, psychology
Louisville
SUSAN DAY, marketing
Cromwell

DON De ARMOND, hist./gov't./comp. sci.
Bowling Green
JOHN DeBORD, broadcasting
Bowling Green
JOHN DECKER JR., phys. ed.
White House, Tenn.
SHEILA DeJARNETTE, music ed.
Leitchfield
ELIZABETH DeLAP, music
Nashville, Tenn.

DIANNA DENNIS, health care admin./community health
Big City
DIANNE DEPP, comp. bus.
Owensboro
MONA DEVER, public relations
La Grange
MONICA DIAS, journ./gov't.
Paducah
JULIA DICKEN, speech path.
Albany

LYNNE DICKERSON, tex. and cloth.
Madison, Tenn.
DAVID DILLEY, criminology
Greenville
MARGARET DONALDSON, nursing
Bowling Green
RONALD DONALDSON, mech. engin. tech.
Bowling Green
DENISE DONNELLY, comp. bus.
Nashville, Tenn.

TAMMY DORRIS, speech path.
Bowling Green
ELIZABETH DOWNS, bus. ed.
New Haven
THOMAS DOYLE, phys. ed.
Shelbyville
HOWARD DRAKE, ag. ed.
Morgantown
ANDY DREWLINGER, journ./Spanish
Newburgh, Ind.

KIMBERLY DUMMER, cmrcd. art
Louisville
DOUGLAS DUNCAN, indus. tech.
Henderson
BARBARA DUNN, public relations
Centerville, Ohio
JOAN DUPONT, bus. ed.
Elizabethtown
ANNA M. DUVALL, accounting
Leitchfield

SONJA DUVALL, management
Park City
SONDRA EAKINS, elem. ed.
Robards
MARGIE EARLY, hist./gov't.
Shelbyville
PAMELA EDWARDS, social work
Elkton
GARY ELLIS, indus. tech.
Henderson

REGINA EMBRY, bus. mgt./banking
Roundhill
SHERRY EMBRY, accounting
Morgantown
MARYLOU EMERINE, info. systems
Vine Grove
CHERI J. ENGLAND, health care admin.
Tompkinsville
CAROL B. EVANS, bus. mgt.
Tompkinsville

JOANIE EVANS, advertising
Bowling Green
KAREN EVANS, public relations
Lexington
ROSE FAJARDO, sociology
Bowling Green
EDWARD FARLEY, advertising
Louisville
RICHARD FARLEY, mass. comm.
Bowling Green

EULA M. FARMER, socio./rec.
Vine Grove
CINDY FISCHER, circui. art
Bridgeton, Mo.
GARY FLEMING, broadcasting
Paducah
BRIAN FOOTE, broadcasting
Louisville
IZABETH A. FORD, psych./social work
Evansville, Ind.

SHERRY FORD, indus. tech.
Horse Branch
DONNA FOSTER, elem. ed.
Jamestown
ELIZABETH FOURQUREAN, nursing
Cadiz
THOMAS FOWLER, biology
Parma Heights, Ohio
KAREN FRANCIS, phys. ed.
Indianapolis, Ind.

RANDY FRANKLIN, accounting
Nortonville
DAVID A. FRITZ, photojournalism
Cynthiana
AN G. FRYMIRE, environ. engin. tech.
Bowling Green
AINES, excep. child./behav. disorders
Horse Cave
MARK GALVIN, public relations
Marietta, Ga.

JORGE GARCIA, gov't./hist.
Bowling Green
DONNA GARDNER, tex. and cloth.
Scottsville
JOSEPH GARST, health care admin.
Glasgow
DERICK GATEWOOD, tex. and cloth.
Bowling Green
JENNIFER GIBSON, public relations
Haubstadt, Ind.

Looking up to dad

FEE PAYMENT gives Ray Carnegie and his 4-year-old son, K.D., a chance to be together. Carnegie, a graduate student from Jamaica, was preparing to write his check.

—T.J. Hamilton

ALESA GILL, info. systems
Aliensville
TERRI GLASS, community health
Hopkinsville
BYRON GLOVER, accounting
Nashville, Tenn.
TIM GOFF, accounting
Owensboro
SHANNON GOLD, recreation
Cadiz

TIMOTHY GOODIN, ag. ed.
Russell Springs
TIM GOTT, math
Bowling Green
KIMBERLY GRAGG, nursing
Beaver Dam
KAY GRAHAM, econ./chem.
Greenfield, Ind.
DANTE GRAVES, biology
Tompkinsville

JANICE GRAVES, English
Tompkinsville
CHUCK GREENE, management
Eddyville
DONNA GREER, dent. hygiene/s
Hendersonville, Tenn.
DONNA GREGORY, nursing
Franklin
GREGORY GREY, ag./hist.

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Fine feathered friend

While most students would be satisfied with a dog or a cat for a pet, Tammy Baldini wasn't, so she got herself a pet cockatoo, named Arthur.

Baldini, a Hendersonville, Tenn., senior, worked in a pet store in Nashville during the summer and on holidays. Arthur was delivered to the store in the summer of 1982.

"I wasn't a big fan of birds," she said. "My manager told me to train him. So I did."

Baldini returned to the store at Christmas to find that Arthur was still there.

"He recognized me and I fell in love," she said.

Baldini asked her parents to loan her the money to buy Arthur and they agreed.

"They kept putting me off about the money. I never expected them to buy me a pet and then they surprised me at Christmas," she said.

Baldini said that her biggest problem with Arthur is giving him enough attention.

"He'll scream if he doesn't get enough attention," she said. "He can be pretty obnoxious."

Arthur, like most Western students, is a junk-food junkie.

"He loves pizza, french fries, popcorn, cheese — he'll eat virtually anything," she said. "He eats more people food than seed and sometimes he eats right off my plate."

"If he doesn't have things to play with, he'll go nuts. He constantly needs toys and if it's not made out of metal he tears it apart."

Baldini said that Arthur sometimes acts like a dog. In the mornings he'll fly onto her bed to play "blanket monster."

"Blanket monster is when I hide my hand under the covers and Arthur tries to get it," she explained.

"People have bad misconceptions about birds, but they really are a lot of fun," Baldini said.

— René Vance

SITTING on his perch, Arthur, a cockatoo, eyes his master, Tammy Baldini, a Hendersonville, Tenn., senior, got the junk-food junkie bird for Christmas in 1982.

— Todd Harris

DEBORAH GRINESTAFF, accounting
Bowling Green
CYNTHIA GRISE, diet. inst. admin.
Lewisburg
DONALD GRUDZIELANEK, environ. sci.
Bowling Green
CAROL GUERNSEY, pub. rel./rec.
Speed, Ind.
KEITH GUIER, music ed.
Oak Grove

MARK HAGAN, mech. engin.
Whitesville
PAMELA HAGAN, accounting
Bowling Green
MARY HAKANSON, excep. child ed.
Smiths Grove
MARK HALE, speech. path.
Russell Springs
SCOTT HALE, hist./psych.
Louisville

SHIRLEY HALL, bus. mgt./legal sec.
Glasgow
JENNIFER HAMBY, nursing
Madisonville
CLARK HAMMERS, agriculture
Morgantown
TY HANDY, bus. admr./finance
Glasgow
CHARLES HARDESTY, agriculture
Whitesville

KIMBERLEY HARLOW, info. systems
Glasgow
SUSAN S. HARMON, journalism Frankfort
DENISE HARPER, elem. ed.
Franklin
DONNA HARRELL, library sci.
Falls of Rough
KENNETH HARRIS, comp. pro. bus.
Shelbyville

KIM HARRISON, management
Danville
STEVEN HARROD, marketing
Louisville
LEIGH ANN HART, health ed.
Tennysen, Ind.
SHARLENE HARTFORD, bank/finance
Sehree
HAMIDI HASAN, info. systems
Segamat, Johor, Malaysia

MATHEW P. HATHAWAY, psychology
Northfield, Ohio
MARLA J. HATTER, computer sci.
Franklin
SUZANNE HAWKINS, math
Chenaborn
RICHARD E. HAYDEN JR., tex. and cloth
Bowling Green
JEFFREY L. HEATH, broadcasting
Bowling Green

Hemming it up

LENDING a helping hand to Broderick Gatewood, a Bowling Green senior, is Gwen Perry, a Waco, Texas, sophomore. The two were working on a project in an elementary clothing class.

— Ron Bell

DIANNE L. HEILE, psychology
Bowling Green
SARAH E. HEIN, English
Indianapolis, Ind.
ANGELA HELMS, performing arts
Chandler, Ind.
MATTHEW HELTON, photojournalism
Fairfax, Va.
CYNTHIA L. HENKEN, health care admin.
Bowling Green

MYLENE R. HENLEY, history
Bardwell
ROBIN M. HESS, diet./inst. admin.
Evansville, Ind.
ANTHONY S. HESTER, indust. tech.
Ashland
TIMOTHY L. HESTER, elec. engin. tech.
Mount Washington
LISA A. HIGDON, nursing
Owensboro

STEVE HIGDON, marketing
Louisville
LISA HIGHBAUGH, elem. ed.
Elizabethtown
DAVID HILDRETH, biology
Bowling Green
SUSAN G. HILL, accounting
Browder
TOMMY HINES, music
Morgantown

TIMOLI J. HODGE, marketing
Morehead
JUDY M. HODGES, community health/counsl./speech
Bowling Green
LAURIE HODGES, health care admin.
Franklin
JAMES W. HOFFMANN, cmrc. art
Versailles
ROLAND S. HOFFMAN, physics/chemistry/computer sci.
Bowling Green

DAVID A. HOFFMANN, elec. engin. tech.
Fort Mitchell
JAN B. HOLLIDAY, home ec. ed.
Olmstead
LYNNE HOLLIDAY, elem. ed.
Olmstead
MARY K. HORNBACK, accounting
Louisville
STEVE HORNBACK, accounting
Glendale

CHERYL A. HORNUNG, math/computer sci.
Louisville
NANCY A. HOSKINS, nursing
Harrodsburg
ASHLIE J. HOUK, English
Horse Cave
LESLIE B. HOUK, computer sci./biochem.
Horse Cave
JERRY A. HOWARD, elec. engin. tech.
Morgantown

RUTH A. HUDSON, info. systems
Columbia
JANICE HUFFINES, recreation
Russellville
LUANN HUGHES, community health
Franklin
ANNA MARIE HULLETT, excep. child ed.
Auburn
SUSAN L. HUMPHREY, psychology
Louisville

MELISSA HUNTSMAN, data processing
Bowling Green
MARK HUSK, computer sci.
Bowling Green
ROD W. HUTCHESON, finance
Mayfield
TERESA IRWIN, geog.
Ottawa, Ill.
CHARLES N. JACKSON, finance
Bowling Green

GREG JACOBS, biology
Louisville
ROBIN W. JAMES, comp. sci./math
Benton
TERRANCE JAMES, bus. mgt.
Owensboro
KATHY JANSSEN, info. systems
Louisville
CYNTHIA J. JARVIS, comp. sci.
Bremen

ANN B. JENKINS, tex. and cloth.
Bowling Green
PATRICK F. JENKINS, biology
Fordsville
EDDIE JENT, recreation
Morgantown
ANN B. JIRCITANO, excep. child ed.
Bowling Green
CHRISTOPHER JIRCITANO, geology
Niagara Falls, N.Y.

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

— Greg Lovett

Only temporarily sidelined

The man they called "the Turk" strode purposefully up to him.

"You're out of here. Sorry. Turn in your playbook and check with the office on your way out." The Turk turned, unrepentant, and carried the same message to 20 other young ball players.

Tom Fox sighed and slouched in one motion, like an animal taking a bullet. It wasn't the first time he had heard such words and it may not be the last. He absorbed them philosophically — after all, he still had his abilities, his enormous self-confidence, and his faith in God. What he didn't have was a job in the National Football League.

Fox, a Cleveland, Ohio, senior, was a standout defensive end in the four seasons he played for Western. In the summer of 1983, with his eligibility expired, Fox decided to make himself available for the N.F.L. draft. He failed to be drafted, but was invited to several free agent camps, among them the Houston Oilers, Denver

Broncos, Pittsburgh Steelers, and the Arizona Wranglers of the United States Football League.

"Denver's organization reminded me the most of Western's," Fox explained. "They contacted me before the draft, explained why they couldn't draft me and why they wanted me to report to camp. After the draft they kept in touch with me and followed through — just like Western did when they recruited me."

So July of 1983 found Fox in the Bronco's training camp in Greeley, Colo., battling for one of five possible spots on the squad with 115 other free agents.

In the end, however, the coaching staff couldn't justify a place for him on the squad and he was cut — one of the last defensive ends to be cut.

Fox accepted the news graciously. "This sure isn't the first time this has happened. I was cut from pee-wee football back home in Cleveland — I just kept coming back."

Fox is still coming back. After he gets his degree in recreation, he plans on returning to camp and giving it another try. Denver has invited him back, and he is thinking about trying his luck again in the U.S.F.L.

FORMER football standout Tom Fox watches from the stands at the Tennessee Tech football game. Watching with Fox was Louisville senior Kim Dummer.

"If none of that works out, then I want to work with people in physical therapy or maybe get into hospital administration," Fox said with a gentleness that belies his imposing 6-foot-4-inch, 260-pound frame, "and if I never get into pro ball, I guess I'll have to be happy just watching from the sidelines."

Watching from the sidelines was a new experience for Fox during the fall. After four years of being on the field, Fox was forced into the stands.

"The hardest part about sitting in the stands is listening to the crowd heckle the players when they're losing." Fox's eyes turned toward the floor. "If they knew how hard it is out there they wouldn't be so quick to yell ... if they only knew."

Tom Fox knows.

John Tayman

ASHLEY JOHNSON, broadcasting
Pittsford, Rep. South Africa
BABATUNDE JOHNSON, broadcast
Bowling Green
BECKY J. JOHNSON, English/biotech
Marion
DAREN L. JOHNSON, sociology
Russell Springs
GRETCHEN JOHNSON, computer
Owensboro

RHONDA JOHNSON, accounting
Franklin
STEVEN D. JOHNSON, broadcast
Hopkinsville
SHAIRE A. JOINER, office admin.
Hopkinsville
DEBORA JOLLY, psychology
Horse Cave
ELIZABETH JONES, elem. ed.
Columbia

JONATHAN JONES, finance
Corydon
JULIE JONES, government
Bowling Green
KENDRA JONES, biology
Bowling Green
KRISTA JONES, nursing
Greenburg
JILLIENNE JOSEPH, acct./psychiatry
Bowling Green

SALMAH JURAIMI, chemistry
Bowling Green
TIM JUSTICE, advertising
Glasgow
BETH KELLAMS, comp. sci.
Tell City, Ind.
BETH KELLY, dent. hygiene
Franklin, Tenn.
VANESSA KELLY, comm. disorders
Bowling Green

BELINDA KEMPER, phys. ed.
Upton
KIMBERLY A. KERLEY, accounting
Glasgow
HELENE KIETA, excep. child ed.
Radcliff
TAMI KILLINGBECK, med. tech.
Louisville
CONNIE KING, int. design
Bowling Green

LESLIE KING, bus. ed.
Scottsville
LIZ KINER, dent. hygiene
Brentwood, Tenn.
KIM KIRKLAND, elem. ed.
Hendersonville, Tenn.
KIMBERLY KISSEL, psychology
Evansville, Ind.
LORI KNIGHT, text. and cloth.
Benton

SUSAN KNIGHT, text. and cloth.
Louisville
THERESE KOOP, public relations
Ellettsville
JAMES KRUMPELMAN, chemistry
Louisville
ISMAIL KU NOR IZAH KU, accounts
Jitra, Malaysia
BRIAN KUSTER, accounting
Tell City, Ind.

Single calculations

QUIET surroundings of Smith Stadium provide a place for Gary McNally to study his calculus. McNally, a Meade Co. senior, was studying on one of the last warm days of the fall.

BELINDA LaGRANGE, comp. sci.
Elizabethtown
ROGER LANDRUM, elem. ed.
Clayhole
DAVID E. LANE, comp. sci./math
Bowling Green
LAURA LANKFORD, speech path.
Mount Washington

WILLARD LASTER, biology
Greenville
MARTIN LAUTNER, accounting
Tell City, Ind.
BRUCE M. LAW, civil engin. tech.
Owensboro
TRACY LAWLESS, elem. ed.
Russell Springs

DONALD LAWSON, civil engin. tech.
Shively
DIANNA LEAR, elem. ed.
Central City
PATRICIA LEE, elem. ed.
Campbellsville
SANDRA LEE, biology
Middlesboro

SUSANNE LEWIS, bus. ed.
Monticello
PATRICIA LILLY, info. systems
Gallatin, Tenn.
MARTY C. LINDSEY, computer sci./math
Smiths Grove
MARY ANNE LINDSEY, history/pre-law
Bowling Green

LISA G. LINK, bus. ed.
Franklin
JEANINE LISTON, office admin.
Owensboro
MICHAEL L. LITCHFIELD, banking
Campbellsville
PATSY ANNE LITTLE, special ed./recreation
Bowling Green

HONG LIU, mech. engin. tech.
Lexington
MARTHA LAYNE LOGSDON, phys. ed.
Nicholasville
PATRICIA S. LONG, finance
Elizabethtown
GREGORY D. LOW, history
Pittsburgh, Pa.

STEVE LOWRY, photojournalism
Lexington
JEFFREY LOY, agriculture
Jamestown
LUIS LOZADA, agriculture
Caracas, Venezuela
MATTHEW D. LUNSFORD, computer sci.
Russell Springs

TRACIE LUSBY, computer sci.
Fairfield, Ohio
BRENDA LUSH, special ed.
Clarkson
PATRICK T. LYNCH, phys. ed.
Louisville
DAVID L. MAJOR, English/allied lang. arts
Hopkinsville

KATHY MANFORD, public relations
Louisville
LEE MANLEY, social work
Louisville
GLEE ANNA MANS, diet./inst. admin.
Newburg, Ind.
JEANNE E. MANSELL, med. records tech.
Washington, D. C.

Savoring the moment

DIRECTOR of the Sigma Phi Epsilon skit, Tommy Womack, a Madisonville senior, sits back stage after the Kappa Delta Washboard Jamboree. The Sig Eps won the competition and received a washboard for a trophy.

— Alan Warren

ANGELA C. MAPLE, psychology/speech comm.
Bowling Green
MONA MAPLE, diet./inst. admin.
Beaver Dam
MELISSA A. MARSCH, tex. and cloth.
Lewisport
DAWNELLE MARSHALL, health care admin./business
Bowling Green
SUZANNE MARTIN, info. systems
Campbellsville

THOMAS M. MASON, mass. comm.
Russellville
JAMES N. MAUCK, psychology
Boonville, Ind.
MARY JO MAYS, marketing
Princeton
DEBORAH C. McBRIDE, tex. and cloth.
Litchfield
ELISA McCARTY, public relations
Nashville, Tenn.

RICK McCARTY, indust. tech.
Bowling Green
MARGARET McCLARNON, cmer. art
Gallatin, Tenn.
GINGER McCLEARN, library sci.
Drakesboro
TERRI McCCLURE, speech path.
Cadiz
LUCINDY McCUBBINS, math/speech and theater
Murfreesboro

AMY McDONALD, dent. hygiene
Louisville
CHARLENE R. McDONALD, biology
Lexington
KAREN L. McDONALD, English
Louisville
MICHAEL W. McDOUGAL, geography
Gallatin, Tenn.
DEWAYNE McDOWELL, broadcasting
Upton

RONALD L. McGAVIC, indust. arts ed.
Shively
PATRICIA McGuINNESS, special ed./elem. ed.
Fort Campbell
TAMMY McINTOSH, elem. ed.
Olmstead
GARY W. McNALLY, geography
Muldraugh
CLAY McNEILL, broadcasting
Nashville, Tenn.

CARLIE McPEAK, agriculture
Bowling Green
MANJA MDDOLI, English, psychology
Bowling Green
CHARLES MEADOR, marketing
Elizabethtown
DEBBIE K. MEDLEY, special ed.
Loretto
LORI A. MEDLEY, public relations
Shelbyville

Unexpected stop

AS SHE gives information to the police, Donna Harrell, a Falls of Rough senior, rests on her car. Harrell's car left Normal Drive in front of Cravens Graduate Center.

GRETCHEN A. MEIERS, biology
Bowling Green
DALLAS MELOON, geology
Louisville
KERRY W. METHENY, geography
Greenville
BRIAN P. MEYER, indust. tech.
Evanville, Ind.

AMY L. MILES, photojournalism
Signal Mountain, Tenn.
CRAIG MILLER, advertising/sociology
Owensboro
RUTH C. MILLER, psychology
Louisville
TERRI MILLER, elem. ed.
Owensboro

CHARLES R. MIRACLE, marketing
Pineville
JENNIE MITCHELL, encl. art
Huntsville, Ala.
ELIZABETH MIZANIN, mass comm.
St. Charles, Ill.
AHMAD N. MOHD-ZAIN, accounting
Raub, Malaysia

ROBIN MOHON, government
Central City
JACQUELINE E. MOLNAR, tax. and cloth.
Franklin, Tenn.
JAMIE M. MONROE, biology/chemistry
Bowling Green
DIANE MOORE, computer sci.
Bowling Green

DORIS MOORE, computer sci.
Bowling Green
GRACE MOORE, photojournalism
Franklin
HERBERT B. MOORE, fine arts
Cynthiana
KAREN L. MOORE, advertising/bus. admin.
Bowling Green

TAMI MOORE, marketing
Eaton, Ohio
DAVID G. MORGAN, history
Dawson Springs
DOUG MORGAN, ag. bus.
Vine Grove
GEORGE E. MORRIS, public relations
Bowling Green

GINGER E. MORSE, social work
Princeton
KAY MOUSER, info. systems
Horse Cave
MICHAEL W. MOYERS, sociology
Nashville, Tenn.
NANCY L. MUDD, excep. child ed.
Leitchfield

KIM MYERS, math
Glasgow
LAURA NAGY, public relations
Iron Mountain, Mich.
KAREN NATION, agriculture
Shelbyville
SCOTT NEFF, broadcasting
Dale, Ind.

BARRY NELSON, history
Nebo
MARY NETHERTON, recreation
Bowling Green
JEFFREY W. NEWMAN, computer sci./math
Greenville
MARIA K. NOE, speech path./psychology
Lexington

PERSONALITY

A projected accomplishment

A crash course in cinematography and rock'n'roll music helped Karen Richardson write the script for an award-winning movie.

The Richmond, Va., graduate student wrote the screenplay for "Rock: It's Your Decision," named the best youth film of 1982-83 by the Academy of Christian Cinematographic Arts.

The movie concentrates on a 17-year-old boy and his research into the rock music field. "He decides that rock music is not for his Christian lifestyle," Richardson said.

The conflicts the lead character faces make the film entertaining as well as informational, she said.

Although the film carries an anti-rock message, Richardson said she doesn't oppose any type of music in particular.

"I'm not against contemporary music," she said. "I am against music — if it's labeled rock or country or easy-listening — that promotes a lifestyle contrary to scripture.

"I don't want people to think that all I listen to is 'Amazing Grace' and 'The Old Rugged Cross.' That's not true."

She said she listens to classical, easy-listening and Christian music, but she's "extremely selective."

The movie focused on rock music because "rock is one of the most prevalent problems for Christian teenagers," she said.

Richardson wrote the movie when she was a senior at Liberty Baptist College in Lynchburg, Va. Her creative writing teacher suggested her name to Olive Film Productions, and one phone call later, she was offered the job.

"I was numb," she recalled. "It was panic and numb at the same time, because I knew I could work up a story line, but I didn't know anything about production."

And she knew just as little about the subject, she said.

So for several months, Richardson studied books on movie production

CONFLICTS from pressure groups is the subject of docu-drama: "Rock: It's Your Decision." Karen Richardson, a Richmond, Va., graduate student, wrote the screenplay after encouragement from a teacher.

and music, researched song lyrics and titles, and interviewed record store clerks and students.

She said drama classes helped her write the script. "It helped me see the action in my mind, as if my mind was the movie screen," she said.

After two months of writing, she had a final version.

Richardson said she has also written a novelette, a play, several dramatic monologues, some short stories and poetry. Much of her work has a religious theme, but she also enjoys writing science fiction.

But with the success of her first film, screenplays are something she wants to keep working on.

"God's given me the talent to write," she said, "and I want to use it for Him."

Craig Dezern

BETH NORD, recreation
Dale, Ind.
BEVERLY K. NUCKOLS, community health
Horse Cave
KIM OAKLEY, info. systems
Bowling Green
WILLIAM OLDHAM, broadcasting
Evansville, Ind.
TESSIE OLIVER, agriculture
Kingsport, Tenn.

MICHAEL W. ORMES, computer sci./math
Paris
MELINDA J. OVERSTREET, psychology
Cave City
GARLAND B. PAGE, computer sci.
Louisville
DEBRA R. PAIGE, nursing
Greenville
KIMBERLI A. PAINE, phys. ed.
Kokomo, Ind.

LADONNA D. PARE, dent. hygiene
Gomaliel
GAIL PARKER, tex. and cloth.
Owensboro
RETA A. PARKER, info. systems
Gallatin, Tenn.
RITA PARKER, int. design
Auburn
VIVIAN D. PARKER, accounting
Goodlettsville, Tenn.

PHILIP S. PARRISH, elem. ed.
Scottsville
NANCY K. PARROTT, compres. bus.
Greensburg
KELLY PAULL, elem. ed.
Summer Shade
JO PAYNE, home ec. ed.
Franklin
JEFF PATE, banking/small bus. management
Cloverport

SHERRY PENDLEY, tex. and cloth.
Bowling Green
DEANNA PETERS, psychology
Owensboro
MARK PFEFFERMAN, computer sci.
Alexandria
SANDRA L. PIERCE, emci. art
Leitchfield
JOSEPH H. PILLOW, history
Russellville

PHYLLIS PITMAN, math
Albany
LISA PLAIN, int. design/tex. and cloth.
Sacramento
JULIE A. PLEASANT, accounting
Dawson Springs
KRISTA PLUMMER, marketing
Evansville, Ind.
COLLEEN M. POHLGEERS, nursing
Fort Mitchell

ELIZABETH L. POINDEXTER, dent. hygiene
Burkesville
PAMELA L. PORTMAN, elem. ed.
Hendersonville, Tenn.
TARA L. POSEY, elem. ed.
Beckmont
DIANA K. POWELL, math
Philpot
KATHERINE L. POWELL, math
Bowling Green

KATHRYN M. H. POWER, public relations
Bowling Green
NANCY J. PRICE, marketing
Bowling Green
TIMOTHY G. PRICE, biology
Louisville
LARRY FUND, elec. engin. tech.
Santa Claus, Ind.
PAMELA J. RALSTON, advertising
Glasgow

DARINDA J. RAMEY, recreation
Morehead
MARK RAMEY, agriculture
Bowling Green
LAURA L. RAY, agriculture
Louisville
CHERYL A. REED, speech path.
Valley Station
LISA REESOR, elem. ed.
Horse Cave

ALLEN R. REID, broadcasting/recreation
Liberty
ETTA J. REID, journalism
Loretto
LAURA A. REINSCHELD, special ed.
Louisville
CARRIE REYNOLDS, mass. comm.
Campbellsville
ERIC J. RHIVER, marketing
Evansville, Ind.

Breaking away

PINEVILLE senior, James Combs, takes a break during a bike race held at Beech Bend Raceway. He was waiting for the next race to begin.

— T. J. Hamilton

JANINE RHOADES, geog.
Bowling Green
GWENDOLYN RICHARDSON, bus. &
Bowling Green
MARCIA E. RIDDLE, accounting
Louisville
KIMBERLY RIGGS, dent. hygiene
Campbellsville
PAUL E. RIPPLINGER, accounting
Newburgh, Ind.

MELITA A. RIPPY, government/broad
Portland, Tenn.
KATHY ROBERTS, indust. tech.
Eminence
KIM ROBERTS, info. systems
Franklin
LISA M. ROGERS, biology/med. tech.
Jamestown
JUDY H. ROSACKER, social work
Elizabethtown

BARRY L. ROSE, journalism
Bowling Green
SUSAN J. ROSS, French
Nashville, Tenn.
EDWARD A. ROTHSCHILD II, biolog
Louisville
LISA R. ROWLAND, broadcasting/voc
Bowling Green
DALE ROYSE, finance/marketing
Owensboro

JIM RUBY, religion
Louisville
TINA SACHLEBEN, accounting
Louisville
SARA J. SALB, comp. bus.
Jasper, Ind.
DAVID V. SALYERS, government
Middleburg
MARY C. SAMUELS, psychology
Louisville

ISARJI SARUDIN, English
Bowling Green
LISA SAWYERS, marketing
Bowling Green
CATHY SCHAMMEL, public relations
Stoughton, Wis.
DREW SCHILLING, management
Fort Mitchell
JILL M. SCHUMAN, advertising
Madison, Wis.

ANGELA L. SCOTT, diet./inst. admin.
Morgantown
EUGENIA SCOTT, computer sci./accounting
Owensboro
JANA M. SCOTT, agriculture
Eminence
GERALD A. SELIG, geography
Louisville
AHMAD J. SHAARI, English
Bowling Green

OMAR SHARIF, speech path.
Bowling Green
PATRICIA SHARP, public relations
Elkton
EFFIE S. SHAW, home ec. ed.
Marionville
THELMA V. SHELTON, sociology
Central City
CHARLANN L. SHEPHERD, theater
Barlow

JANET R. SHEPHERD, home ec. ed.
Greenbrier, Tenn.
JOHN A. SHIELDS, agriculture
Bloomfield
MARDELL SHIPP, tex. and cloth.
Upton
LORA SHIRELY, nursing
Marshall, Ill.
LESLIE SHIRLEY, biology
Columbia

TERRY SHOULDERS, elec. engin. tech.
Boonville, Ind.
ROBERT SHULTS, accounting
Gallatin, Tenn.
MARY BETH SIDDENS, physical therapy
Glasgow
TIM SIMPSON, music ed.
Bowling Green
CORENTHA SKAGGS, health care admin.
Smiths Grove

LEILANI SLEDGE, phys. ed.
Princeton
MARNITA SLEDGE, health care admin.
Hickman
REGINA SLEET, tex. and cloth.
Perryville
DEBORAH SMILEY, performing arts
High Point, N.C.
JACK SMITH, pub. rel./gov't/speech
Bowling Green

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

A school of hard Knox

Theresa Sparks really knows her gold. She was the first woman to be hired by the Fort Knox gold vault to be a guard.

Sparks, a Colonial Heights, Va., senior, is a military dependent graduate of Fort Knox. In the summer of 1981 she was hired by the U.S. Army to guard the gold vault at Fort Knox. Although other women guarded the gold, Sparks was the first woman to be hired directly by personnel at the vault.

While she was at Fort Knox, Sparks worked on an auditing team. Approximately eight years ago, someone questioned the validity that the vault actually has gold in it. Thus, there was a resolution passed by congress which stated that an audit must be conducted every year for the next 10 years. The auditing lasts for three weeks and includes moving the gold from vault to vault, taking measurements of the gold, and accounting for each piece. Everything is recorded and published so the general public can gain access to any needed information.

"The position my dad held in the past, director of personnel and community activities at Fort Knox, prevented me from being hired for anything which came under him. I was really in a bind for summer employment. I just lucked out," Sparks said. Her family was more than excited. "This was my first job where I really had any responsibility."

Sparks' voice became intense as she tried to express the amount of responsibility that was placed on her and the other guards. "The gold bricks weigh between 30 to 35 pounds each. They're not ordinary bricks. Each mover (while moving bricks from vault to vault) works for a half hour and rests for a half hour," Sparks said.

AS THE first woman to be hired to work in the Fort Knox gold vault, Theresa Sparks has learned a lot about responsibility. Sparks, a Colonial Heights, Va., senior, worked on an auditing team.

"I think women have pretty much created a stepping stone for themselves in the department because, for one thing, the secretary of the treasury is a woman, and the director of the mint, Donna Pope, is also a woman."

Pope made a visit to the vault during the period of Spark's employment. "I knew she was coming. She came in, I was introduced, and I wanted to say 'It's a pleasure to meet you,' but it came out totally backwards. Yet she could understand the position I was in. It was the one chance I got to rub elbows with someone important."

The size of the vault also fascinated Sparks. "You can see the vault from just about anywhere in Fort Knox," she said. "It's really something."

—Lorri Burchett T

Short cut

WHILE she visits for the weekend, Kathy Owens, an Auburn graduate, gives Tim Doyle, a Louisville senior, a trim. He got the trim in front of Rodes-Marlin Hall.

— Amy May

IRA SMITH, acct./hist.
Olaton
MARY ANGELA SMITH, elem. ed.
Nashville, Tenn.
YVONNE SMITH, psychology
Louisville
KATRINA SNEAD, recreation
Bowling Green
DAVID SNEED, agriculture
Columbia

ANN SNODGRASS, elem. ed./lib. sci.
Morgantown
SABRINA SONNER, finance
Livermore
MICHELE SOYARS, math/comp. sci.
Russellville
BONNIE SPEED, int. design
Louisville
DAWN SPEER, speech comm.
Plane, Ill.

CARLA SPIRES, music ed.
Columbia
JEFFREY STAMPS, government
Shepherdsville
ROBERT STANFILL, computer sci.
Louisville
STEPHEN STANLEY, mech. engin. tech.
Belton
DENNIS STAPLES, accounting
Central City

ROBYN STEIER, info. systems
Louisville
BENNIE STEPHENS, elem. ed.
Center
GREGORY STEWARD, phys. ed.
Olmstead
BART STEWART, math
Franklin
HARLAN STEWART, geology
Louisville

MITCHELL STEWART, civil engin. tech.
Paducah
MILDRED STICKLEY, med. records tech.
Bowling Green
ELIZABETH STRAIN, tex. and cloth/int.
Rossville
JO EVELYN STRAIN, elem. ed.
Franklin
ROBERT STRATTON, agriculture
Mount Royal

MELINDA STRODE, nursing
Fountain Run
SCOTT STUMBO, indust. arts ed.
Nancy
LAURIE STURGEON, compre. bus.
Horse Cave
LISA SUBLETT, info. systems
Belton
IZALI SULAIMAN, computer sci.
Johor, Malaysia

CYNDI SULLIVAN, special ed.
Louisville
KAREN SULLIVAN, elem. ed.
Scottsville
EVA SUTTON, social work
Fulton
ReJEANA SYDNOR, med. records tech.
Russellville
LESLEY TALBOTT, elem. ed.
Bardotown

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Guillermo's travels

There was no credit earned. He had no daily schedule. Guillermo Arbelaez spent his summer outside of the classroom learning in a different way.

Arbelaez, a Medellin, Colombia, senior management major, spent his summer riding trains and hitchhiking through Western Europe. His journey led him through 17 countries, including three countries that were under communist rule.

His 85-day expedition began with a second-class Eurailpass train ticket, and a backpack with his belongings.

A number of times Arbelaez would hitchhike to and from his different destinations. "I thought it was more fun to hitchhike than take the train," he said.

Arbelaez began his 17-country journey in Luxembourg. Some of his stops included such places as Scandinavian countries, concentration camps in Germany, castles in Austria, beaches in Yugoslavia, ruins in

IN ONLY 85 days, Guillermo Arbelaez, a Medellin, Colombia, senior, traveled to 17 countries and then back to Bowling Green. Arbelaez rode trains and hitchhiked on his trip.

Greece, and a gypsy show in Spain.

"The best experience was meeting people and learning their cultures," he said.

Arbelaez spent many nights sleeping on the train, in cheap hotels, or on the side of the road.

"When I slept on the streets, that sometimes got scary," he said.

"The people (Europeans) are the friendliest people you will ever meet," he said.

Bread, sardines, fruit, cheese and sugar were the main ingredients of his daily diet. After he finished his trip, he had lost about 10 pounds.

During his trip, his total expenses were only about $1,800, which included his train ticket, food, and hotel expenses.

"I learned more in the three months traveling than three years of school," he said.

Gary Briggs

—Rick Marantz

MICHAEL TARTER, broadcasting
Liberty
GLENDY TAYLOR, comp. bus.
Auburn
RICKY TAYLOR, comp. bus.
Crosby Plains, Tenn.
VICKI TAYLOR, music/elec. ed.
Bowling Green
JEFFREY TEDDLETON, info. systems
Depot

ELAINE TERRY, elect. engin. tech.
Glasgow
KEITH THOMAS, accounting
Munfordville
RAY THOMAS, photojournalism
Louisville
RODNEY THOMAS, management
Henderson
JACQUELINE THOMPSON, office admin.
Glasgow

PETER THOMPSON, engineering
Bowling Green
WILLIAM THRELKELD, chem./bio.
Williamstown
SCOTT THURMAN, bus. mgt.
Murray
SHERRY THURMAN, geology
Garrison
RHONDA TIPTON, math/comp. sci.
Owensboro

THERESA TIPTON, accounting
Owensboro
ROBERT TISDAL, int. design
Barlow
JOANNA TODD, elem. ed.
Greenfield
ARTHUR TOMPKINS, broadcasting
New York, N.Y.
DEREK TRACY, public relations
Bowling Green

KIM TRAUGHBER, comp. bus.
Paducah
TERRY TUNKS, bus. admin.
Bowling Green
JACKIE UNDERHILL, community heal.
Louisville
TERRY UTLEY, management
Madisonville
CAROL VANBIBBER, bus. admin.
Hopkinsville

LISA VANDIVER, marketing
Paducah
JILL VAUGHT, special ed.
Bethel Ridge
VALERIE VELEZ, dent. hygiene
Fairview, Tenn.
GREGORY VINCENT, marketing
Graham
REBECCA VINCENT, health ed.
Auburn

TIMOTHY VOGES, computer sci.
Tell City, Ind.
VINCENT VOLKERDING, geography
Louisville
JAMES WAGONER, broadcasting
Horse Cave
KEITH WAHL, bus. ed.
Dale, Ind.
AMY WALLACE, English/art
Cadiz

JEFFERY WALLACE, geology
Bowling Green
MARY WALLACE, health ed.
Gamaliel
DREAMA WALTON, public relations
Auburn
JEFFREY WARNECKE, bio./chem.
Lexington
PATRICIA WATSON, German
Whitley City

SONJA WEBB, biology
Owensboro
JENNIFER WEHLING, agriculture
Cincinnati, Ohio
LANA WHEAT, chemistry
Jamestown
TONY WHALEN, broadcasting
Bowling Green
MARIA WESTON, speech/comm. disorders
Jamestown

CHRISTOPHER WENZLER, speech
Germanstown, Tenn.
BELINDA WELLS, computer sci.
Prestonsburg
CARRIE E. WHITE, accounting
Cannert
KELLY WHITE, biology
Lewisburg
ROBIN WHITE, special ed.
Hull

SARA RUTH WHITE, accounting
Bowling Green
SHANNON WHITE, psychology
Cecilia
GARY WHITTLE, bus. ed.
Russell Springs
MARY ELLEN WICKHAM, dent. hygiene
Bardstown
STEVE WIGGINTON, recreation
Louisville

JOSEPH WILK, info. systems
Bowling Green
CHERYL WILKERSON, psychology
Whitesville
ELIZABETH WILKINSON, special ed./elem. ed.
Bowling Green
BRUCE WILLIAMS, computer sci.
Hopkinsville
JERRY WILLIAMS, cmrel. art
California

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, music ed.
Bowling Green
KATRICE WILLIAMS, photojournalism
Scottsville
SCOTT WILLIAMS, chemistry
Lawrenceburg
MEREDITH WILLS, compt. sci./math
Nashville, Tenn.
JEFFREY WILSON, recreation
Kent, Ohio

Dream weaver

TEXTILES major Barbara Peachee works on weaving a rug. Peachee, a Richmond, Va., senior, was working in one of the weaving rooms in the fine arts center.

— Mary Ann Lyons

RICKIE WILSON, bus. ed.
Cave City
LYNN WINDHORST, computer sci.
Chatham, Ill.
KIMBERLY WINKENHOFER, government
Fort Knox
KAREN WINTERHEIMER, social work
Evansville, Ind.
MICHAEL WOLF, advertising
Louisville

JOHN WOMACK, int. design
Auburn
RONDA WOODLEY, int. design
Jasper, Ala.
JEFFREY WOOSLEY, history
Bowling Green
RICKY WRIGHT, accounting
Livermore
TINA WRIGHT, elem. ed.
Sharon Grove

CARLA WUCHNER, marketing
Jasper, Ind.
JOHN WYATT, civil engin. tech.
Tell City, Ind.
BARRY YATES, speech comm.
Kuttawa
JENNIFER YEKER, elem. ed.
Evansville, Ind.
CHARLES YOUNG, government
Radcliff

RUTH YOUNG, accounting
Bowling Green
JANICE YOUNT, comp. sci./math
Shelbyville
AZAH YUSOF, English
Bowling Green
JAMAL ZEGLAM, chemistry
Bowling Green
LISA ZIMMER, elem. ed.
Bowling Green

GERALD ZIMMERMAN, ag./math
Charleston Heights, S.C.
ALEX BELL, GRADUATE STUDENT counseling ed./psych., Bricktown, N.J.
STEPHEN A. BIVEN, GRADUATE STUDENT public administration, Bowling Green
BARBARA BOLING, GRADUATE STUDENT public administration, Gallatin, Tenn.
JAY BREWER, GRADUATE STUDENT
Glasgow

SAID M. FATEMIBADI, GRADUATE STUDENT chemistry, Teheran, Iran
ANNETTA HAYWOOD, GRADUATE STUDENT history, Ulica
TSUNENORI HOMMA, GRADUATE STUDENT agriculture, Tokyo, Japan
JEAN KING, GRADUATE STUDENT sociology, Burlington
THOMAS W. MacFARLAND, GRADUATE STUDENT
voc. administration, Seaville, N.J.

SHARON MACKEY, GRADUATE STUDENT bio./secondary ed., Corbin
DEBBIE McGREGOR, GRADUATE STUDENT child dev./family relations, Middletown, Ohio
ELIZABETH O'DONNELL, GRADUATE STUDENT school psychology, Bowling Green
CLOVIS C. PERRY JR., GRADUATE STUDENT geography, London
DIANA L. SHORES, GRADUATE STUDENT instruct. tech., Bowling Green

CYNTHIA SMITH, GRADUATE STUDENT secondary ed., Webster
KATHRYN TARTER, GRADUATE STUDENT
elem. ed./English, Liberty
CHANCHAI THEMSOONTORN, GRADUATE STUDENT management, Bangkok, Thailand
JOSE VILLEGAS, GRADUATE STUDENT agronomy/geo., Miranda, Venezuela
KAREN YOUNG, GRADUATE STUDENT home ec. ed., Bowling Green

Kick the habit

ON THE south lawn of Downing University, Center Izah Sulaiman, a Malaysia senior, defends against Toni Schmierer, a Leitchfield sophomore. The two were playing soccer during the warm fall weather.

Junior

c · l · a · s · s

LABOR DAY weekend is a time to get away for Jerry Williams, a Cold Springs junior. Williams planned to work over the weekend.

PAUL ABELL, Casey Creek
BONNIE ADAMS, Hendersonville, Tenn.
CINDY ADAMS, Bowling Green
HARRIETT AKINS, Bardonia
SUSAN ALBERT, Paducah
MARK D. ALLEN, Adairville

MELANIE ALVEY, Clarkston
DULISSA G. ANDERSON, Henderson
SHANNON ASHBY, Russellville
WILLIAM T. ASHBY, Auburn
KRIS ASSADI, Louisville
DAVID S. ATKINSON, Bowling Green

ELIZABETH A. BABCOCK, Louisville
ANGELE M. BADGER, Santa Claus, Ind.
JULIE R. BAILEY, Lexington
MARSHA G. BAILEY, Bowling Green
MICHAEL G. BAILEY, Louisville
AIMEE BAKER, Tampa, Fla.

LIBBY BAKER, Elizabethton
HAROLD G. BALDWIN, Leitchfield
TOM BARGER, Franklin
MARVIN BARLOW, Liberty
KENNETH W. BARNHILL, Paducah
SHERRI L. BARTOS, Owensboro

GORDON M. BATES, Hendersonville, Tenn.
LINDA H. BAYRUNS, Bowling Green
PAMELA BEARD, Bowling Green
RICHARD L. BECKORT, Rockport, Ind.
SARAH BEE, Harrodsburg
KENNETH A. BELL, Camelsot

TED BENNETT, Bowling Green
LISA BENNINGFIELD, Magnolia
JOSEPH L. BENTLEY, Camelsot
TONYA BERNLEY, Newburgh, Ind.
DEBBIE BERRY, Madisonville
JAMES M. BERRY, Sharon Grove

AMY BLAKELEY, Westchester, Pa.
BRIEN BLAKELY, Abingdon, Va.
DALE BOECK, Milwaukee, Wis.
PAMELA BOLING, Owensboro
JAMES BORDERS, Elizabethton
JOSEPH P. BOWERS, Bechtmont

STACEY M. BOYD, Lexington
JEFFREY D. BRADFORD, Bowling Green
CHARLOTTE E. BRADLEY, Owensboro
MARCUS L. BRAND, Central City
VICKIE L. BRANHAM, Barkersville
DONNA F. BRATCHER, Clarkston

GARY BRIGGS, Goodlettsville, Tenn.
BARRY D. BRITT, Smith Grove
TRACY BRITTAIN, Hendersonville, Tenn.
MISSY BRODSKY, Henderson
KAREN D. BROOKS, Glasgow

GINI BROWN, Bowling Green
GREGORY K. BROWN, Beaver Dam
JENNIFER C. BROWN, Hendersonville, Tenn.
STACY R. BROWN, Louisville
RAYMOND C. BROWNING, Lebanon
LAURIE BRYAN, Goodlettsville, Tenn.

JANICE E. BRYANT, Columbia
JOHN H. BUCHANON, Scottsboro
MELISSA S. BUCKLEY, Hopkinsville
LORRI A. BURCHETT, Hopkinsville
THERON P. BURCHFIELD, Hazard
STEPHANIE BURGESS, Hardinsburg

ANNA M. BURNETT, Pineville
DENITA BURYSEK, Bowling Green
GREGORY K. BUSH, Newburgh, Ind.
ANNE BUTHOD, Evansville, Ind.
MARK E. BUXTON, Tennyson, Ind.
BETH A. CALVERT, Evansville, Ind.

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Pool patrol leader

The water is no stranger to Jill Lasher. She has been swimming since she was three years old, and competitively since she was eight. She now works as the head lifeguard at the Diddle Arena swimming pool.

Lasher, a Newburgh, Ind., junior, has been working at the Diddle pool for five semesters. To be a lifeguard, the guards must try out every fall. "To try out you have to take an endurance test — swim laps across the pool, and a safety test — save two 'drowning' victims," Lasher said. The lifeguards must also have their advanced life saving and water-safety instructor certificates.

Being head lifeguard at the pool means that she is in charge of all the other guards. Lasher, a recreation major, has been working as a lifeguard since she was 16. At home, she is the assistant manager of the city pool in Newburgh.

WHILE people swim at the Diddle Arena pool, Jill Lasher, a Newburgh, Ind., junior, serves as the head lifeguard. Jill had been working as a lifeguard for five semesters.

There is a difference that Lasher noticed in working at home and at Diddle. "At Diddle the students come and go, and at home you have to get the public to come to you," she said.

Lasher worked a maximum of 15 hours a week, and the guards were able to set their own hours. When the crowd at the pool was small, she used the time to do homework.

"The crowd at the pool varies. In the beginning of the semester it's crowded, but towards midterm and finals there may be only three or four people in the pool," Lasher said.

In addition to being a lifeguard, Lasher is also in charge of the Timettes, the girls that time meets for Western's swim team. There are about 30 Timettes, and they usually have about 18 girls at each meet.

After graduation Lasher hopes to continue her work with the water. "I'd like to work at an aquatic facility, to run the pool and the programs."

Jill Brown and Melanie Mietz

SUSAN M. CAMPBELL, Hopkinsville
HARRIET CARTER, Nashville, Tenn.
CYNTHIA CARTWRIGHT, Morgantown
VINCENT CARTWRIGHT, Louisville
JEFFREY L. CARVER, Fountain Run
VINCENT CASTILLO, Palatine, Ill.

NANCY CAUDILL, Franklin
SARAH CAVIN, Nashville, Tenn.
JOHN W. CHESTER, Louisville
JOEY CHICHIZOLA, Bowling Green
WILLIAM P. CLANCY, Owen Sound
SUSAN CLARK, Woodburn

LISA J. CLARKSON, Elron
TAMMY CLARKSON, Bowling Green
CYNTHIA CLATER, Cecilia
BECKY CLEMENTS, Liberty
JERRY CLEMENTS, Sturgis
PATRICIA L. CLEMENTS, Lexington

Winter warmth

UNSEASONABLY warm weather in February gives Suzie Boyd, a Louisville freshman, LeAnn Kelsey, a Danville junior, and Karen Neeley, a Wickliffe sophomore, a chance to lay out in the sun. The three girls were lying outside of Central Hall.

— T. J. Harrison

MELISSA A. DUNKEL, Evansville, Ind.
GREGORY DUNK, Bowling Green
JEFF EADENS, Bowling Green
KELLY V. EAST, Smith Grove
EDIE J. EDMONDSON, Kuttawa

LEWIS EONER, Benton
NANCY T. ELMORE, Elizabethtown
KAREN M. ENDERS, Owensboro
KEITH ETTER, Litchfield
BOBBIE L. EVANS, Louisville

CHARLOTTE FERRELL, Summer Sh
STEVEN C. FINLAY, Tall City, Ind.
LOBI FINLEY, Portland, Tenn.
KENNETH A. FLAHERTY JR., Louisville
CARLA J. FLATT, Jamestown

LINDA FLOOD, Hardinsburg
ANTONIA H. FLOWERS, Russellville
SUSAN FLOYD, Owensboro
CARLA A. FORD, Gladale
MARK V. FORD, Alexandria, La.

WILLIAM T. CLEMONS, Litchfield
CONNIE COBB, New Cove
TINA M. COFFEY, Owensboro
PAMELA S. COLE, Abingdon
RAYMA COLE, Broughton

SHERMAN N. COLEMAN, Bowling Green
ANN M. COMBS, Knoxville
TINA E. COMBS, Irvington
KAREN E. CONNOLLY, Wilmette, Ill.
KIMBERLY S. COOK, Tall City, Ind.

ROBERT F. COOK, Bowling Green
TODD COOK, Bowling Green
CHRISTAL CORLEY, Greenville
ROBERT COTTER, Louisville
PATTY COTTRELL, Berniceville

ANGI D. COX, Hopkinsville
MELISSA COX, Hendersonville, Tenn.
SANDRA CRITCHFIELD, McDowell
JANET S. CROUSORE, Mount Vernon
LOBI CROUSORE, Mount Vernon

LOBI CUNDIFF, Greenville
EDNA CURTIS, Hardinsburg
LEIGH ANNE CURTIS, Lexington
RANDALL T. CURTIS, Owensboro
BOBBY E. DALE, Russellville

ROGER D. DANIEL, Paducah
SHERI L. D'ASARO, Nashville, Tenn.
NEIL DAUBY, Tall City, Ind.
REBECCA DAVENPORT, Early River, Alaska
JEFFREY S. DAVIS, Rockport, Ind.

KAREN DAVIS, Scottsville
WILLIAM M. DAYBERRY, Hardinsburg
FELISCHIA K. DILLARD, Bowling Green
JEFF DODD, Springfield, Tenn.
PATRICIA DOTSON, Louisville

DEBRA A. DOUGHERTY, Hopkinsville
TIMOTHY S. DOWLE, Louisville
DAVID L. DRUMMOND, Nashville, Tenn.
BARBIE DRURY, Hardinsburg

PATRICIA M. DRURY, Frankfort
CHARLES DUCKETT, Russellville
KEVIN DUFFY, Nashville, Tenn.
STEVEN F. DUNES, Greenville

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

A versatile writer

He was in the Navy for six years, the Merchant Marines for four and he has also been around the world one and one-half times. David Parrish is not your average student.

Parrish, 32, a Scottsville junior, is also interested in writing. "All of the traveling I have done has contributed to my desire to write," said Parrish, who has submitted one short story and five poems to the campus literary publication "Zephyrus."

Parrish, a history major, says his favorite subjects to write about are the sea, sailing and people. He served on an ammunition ship in the last year of the Vietnam War. "For a long time I wasn't on dry land for more than a week," he said.

His favorite land is the Orient where he lived for 18 months and worked as quartermaster on a research vessel.

Parrish, who prefers writing historical fiction, is also interested in photography. He hopes to set up a studio in South Dakota and do scenic photography.

"I'm interested in working with and teaching the Sioux Indians. There is a lot of animosity between them and the residents in South Dakota who are mostly first-descendant Europeans," he said.

His writing reflects his past experiences. He has written a number of poems and one short story. His short story is about German immigrants. Parrish got the idea from his in-laws who came to the United States from Germany in the 1800s. He plans to develop the story into a novel, when he graduates and has more time.

James Michener is Parrish's favorite author. When Parrish visited the various countries that Michener had described, he said they seemed to be exactly as Michener had depicted.

Although Parrish has had no formal writing training, he has taken some writing courses at Western. "I plan to continue to write and hopefully get published," he said.

Candace Roberts T

ALTHOUGH David Parrish is a history major, his greatest interest is writing. Parrish, a Scottsville junior, has written about the sea, sailing, people and historical fiction.

CHANDLER FOWLER, Brentwood, Tenn.
RANDY FOX, Dumas
LAURA J. FRANKLIN, Gallatin, Tenn.
NANCY FREW, Bowling Green
ANN M. FUGATE, A.P.O., N.Y.
BARRY FULKERSON, Calhoun

BECKY GAREHART, Bowling Green
LISA GARDNER, Newburgh, Ind.
REGINA GEBALDS, Mount Vernon
JENNIFER B. GERTSEN, Wheaton, Ill.
CAROL J. GIBSON, Brownsville
PENELOPE S. GILBERT, Louisville

STEVE GIVAN, Leitchfield
JULIE GODBY, Science Hill
JAMES M. GOFF, Hartford
DAISLEY C. GORDON, Louisville
DOUGLAS GORMAN, Hopkinsville
JOHN K. GOTT, Bowling Green

— Tony Rivers

TERESA GRAVES, Mammouth
SHELLY GREEN, Mayeville
DONNIE GREGORY, Tompkins
RONNIE GREGORY, Bowling G
LADONNA GUINN, Glasgow
HOLLY HARBERMEL, Clarksville

JULIA M. HALL, Bowling Green
T. J. HAMILTON, Owensboro
LISA HARDCASTLE, Bowling G
LISA HARDESTY, Owensboro
MARTHA L. HARDIN, Brownsville
WILLIAM L. HARDISON, Bow

LINDA K. HARGETT, Springfield
STEVE T. HARRIS, Sharon Grove
GERALD HARRISON, New Alb
JOHNNY E. HARRISON, Austin
ROLAND C. HAUN III, Cecilia
DAVID D. HAYES, Radcliff

LYDIA HEADY, Macon
LARRY HEDDEN, Louisville
GERGORY T. HELSON, Louisville
PAMELA A. HENDERSON, Greenville
TERESA HENDERSON, Bowling Green
BETTY LOU HENDRICK, Hardinsburg

ELLEN HENSHAW, Decatur, Ala.
SHARON HIBBARD, Philpot
MELISSA HIGGS, Louisville
CHIP HIGHTOWER, Bowling Green
JEFF HILDEBRANDT, Harrodsburg
KRISTIN HILL, Franklin

ANGELA HINES, Bowling Green
ROBERT L. HINTON, Russellville
GINA M. HIPPS, Sikeston, La.
WAYNE C. HOBBS II, Bowling Green
SANDY HODGES, Murfreesboro
ASTRID HOFFMANN, Gallatin, Tenn.

SUSAN K. HOFSSASS, Lexington
KATHLEEN HOLLOWELL, Hopkinsville
DWAYNE HOLMAN, Madisonville
TERESA L. HOLMAN, Provo
JIMMY HOOK, Bowling Green
MARK A. HOPKINS, Glasgow

BRIAN L. HORNBACK, Elizabethton
TAMARA M. HUFFINES, Mount Vernon
DON HUGHES, Frankfort
ISAAC B. HUGHES, Midway
REBECCA HUGHES, Auburn
SUSAN L. HUMPHREY, Louisville

ELLISHA JAGGERS, Radcliff
THOMAS A. JAMES, Hendersonville, Tenn.
DARINDA JESSUP, Louisville
LISA M. JETT, Winchester
VALERIE T. JIRCITANO, Saratoga, N.Y.
DENNIS C. JOHNSON, Bowling Green

LEONA R. JOHNSON, Glasgow
STACIA E. JOHNSON, Lexington
AMY L. JONES, Louisville
JAMES JONES, Brown Summit, N.C.
SURENNA JONES, Greenburg
ZELDA JONES, Stanford

ROKANE JULIUS, Owensboro
JOSEPH KAMINSKI, Owensboro
JOHN KEARNEY, Carlisle, Pa.
THOMAS KELLEY, Nashville, Tenn.
ANGELA KELSO, Madisonville
BONNIE KENNEDY, Edinburg

LINDA KEPLY, Portland, Tenn.
BRUCE KIETA, Bowling Green
YNN KIRKPATRICK, Kassel, Germany
LISA KNIGHT, Russellville
SARAH KNIGHT, Greenville
SAMUTH KOAM, Bowling Green

Pottery perfection

DURING a ceramics class, Beverly Porter, a Russellville junior, uses a string to cut a pot off the wheel. It was her first time to make a pot on the wheel.

Resting place

TWO EAST Hall residents, Bryan Smith, a Louisville junior, and Gene Duncan, a Henderson senior, move mattresses out of the dorm. They were preparing the mattresses for storage.

—Greg Lovett

LANCE KOENIG, Fort Campbell
NOBUHIKO KOYAMA, Kanagawa, Japan
CAROL LABHART, Tell City, Ind.
DEBRA LANE, Bowling Green
JAMES LARAMORE, Louisville
JILL LASHER, Newburgh, Ind.

DEBORAH LAWRENCE, Louisville
KIMBERLY LAWRENCE, Indianapolis, Ind.
RICHARD LAWRENCE, Smith Grove
ANN LESTER, Metropolis, Ill.
BILLY LESTER, Gilbertsville
JOAN LEVERIDGE, Merritt Island, Fla.

MIKE LILLY, Gallatin, Tenn.
LEE ANN LINDSEY, Columbia, Tenn.
JULIE LIPPERT, Boaz
BENJAMIN LIVINGSTON, Bowling Green
LOWELL LLOYD, Orem, Utah
CHRISTY LOCKE, Greenbrier, Tenn.

ANN LOGAN, Shelbyville
KIMBERLY LOGAN, Hendersonville, Tenn.
PATRICIA LOVEDAY, Elizabethton
VICKIE LOWE, Madisonville
ANN LOWMEDES, East Springs, Tenn.
BEATRIZ LOZADA, Valera, Venezuela

THOMAS LUCKY, Paris
KENNON LURIE, Campbellsville
RICHARD LUTZ, Elizabethton
DAVID LYNNER, Louisville
JILL LYTTLE, Williamsburg
TOBY MADISON, Hartsville

SCOTT MAJORS, Caneyville
JANET MALTRY, Cincinnati, Ohio
ROSEMARY MANCI, Henderson
LOBI MARLOW, Russellville
GEORGE MARSHALL, Hendersonburg
VIENESSA MARTIN, Cave City

PERSONALITY

A year in the spotlight

What some girls only dream about, Suzanne McGaha, a Russell Springs junior, has made a reality.

Since she became Miss Lake Cumberland in April of 1983, McGaha has grown accustomed to dealing with reporters and live interviews. She competed against 11 other girls, all of whom had been pre-chosen for the pageant.

In addition to being crowned, McGaha was awarded a $1000 scholarship, $250 in wardrobe certificates and a chance to claim the Miss Kentucky title. Prior to becoming Miss Lake Cumberland, she was a contestant in two other pageants, including Miss Western, in which she placed third.

The Lake Cumberland pageant consisted of a personal interview, evening gown, swimsuit and talent competition.

"As soon as people call it a beauty pageant, I correct them. It's not a cattle call. Fifty percent of the judging is on talent," she said.

Scholarship money served as a motivator for the broadcasting major to participate in the pageant.

McGaha began preparing in December for the April pageant.

Because the personal interview questions usually concern political matters, she worked to familiarize herself with current events.

"You have to develop an opinion and realize how you feel about things," she said.

All the Miss Lake Cumberland contestants were given a host family to stay with during the week of the pageant.

When all phases of the pageant had been completed, the crowd watched as McGaha received her crown.

"I felt like I was floating," she said. "It was such a good feeling, such a great prize."

She went on to compete in the Miss Kentucky pageant, held in Louisville in July. The rest of the summer McGaha spent doing television commercials for condominium resorts and McGaha Tire Company.

Although McGaha did not fair as well as she would have liked in the Miss Kentucky pageant, she was not discouraged. She planned to enter more pageants. "Pageants are just a lot of fun," she said.

Ann Gardner

MISS Lake Cumberland of 1983, Suzanne McGaha, a Russell Springs junior, sits in her room in McCormack Hall. McGaha received a $1000 scholarship along with the title.

JANE MASSEY, Scottsville
ROBERT MATTHEWS, Evansville, Ind.
KAREN MATTINGLY, Hardinsburg
TRACY MATTINGLY, Louisville
MIMI MAXSON, Bowling Green
KEVIN MAYS, Elizabethton

LISA McCALL, Frankfort
TONYA McCauley, Bowling Green
PATTY McCLURE, Louisville
KAREN McCLUSKEY, Adams, Tenn.
MICHELLE McCONNELL, Evansville, Ind.
DEBORAH McCOY, Cloverport

DANA McCUBBIN, Summer Shade
THOMAS McCULLOUGH, Brownsville
MICHAEL McDANIEL, Horse Cave
BILL McDONALD, Central City
PENNY McDOWELL, Magnolia
RICHARD McELROY, Nashville, Tenn.

CARA McFALL, Jamestown
O'BRIAN MCKINLEY, Elizabethton
NINA McNEAR, Winchester
CAROLYN MEAD, Lyndale, Mass.
CYNTHIA MEADOR, Fountain Run
HENRY MEADOWS, Portland, Tenn.

SHEILA MEADOWS, Clinton, Tenn.
TAMI MEREDITH, Clarksville
PATTI MIDGETT, Cross Plains, Tenn.
MELANIE MIETZ, Juliet, Ill.
LAURA MILES, Buffalo
SUE MILES, Newburgh, Ind.

BRENT MILLER, Ellettsville
KARYN MILLER, Hendersonville
MELODY MILLS, Brandenburg
KEITH MISEGADES, Prospect
EVA MONTGOMERY, Portland, Tenn.
JULIANNE MOORE, Campbellsville

FENNY MOORE, Ash Grove
JAMES MORGAN, Shilohville
SUSAN MORGAN, Bowling Green
CRYSTAL MORRIS, Paris
DON MORRISON, Louisville
LORA MORROW, Bowling Green

DONALD MORSE, Shilohville
KIM MOSER, Summer Shade
LAURA MOSS, Louisville
MAX MOSS, Bowling Green
ANN MURDOCK, Madisonville
BETH MYERS, Campbellsville

JULIE NAPIER, Ash Grove
JUDY NICHOLS, Louisville
MOIRA NICHOLSON, Louisville
REBECCA NIXON, Columbia
KAREN NOLAND, Crestwood
DENNA OLIVER, Lexington

Walking the line

INSTEAD of jogging, Lisa Bovie, a Pensacola, Fla., junior, prefers to walk around the Smith Stadium track. Bovie liked to run at night when it was cooler.

CAROL OWENS, London
GRADY PARE, Canabell
PHYLLIS PARKS, Galtys, Tenn.
KATHINA PATTERSON, Louisville
STEVEN PAUL, Newburgh, Ind.
CHERYL PAYNE, Bardonia

RAY PEAKE, Hodgenville
KAREN PEARSON, Newburgh, Ind.
SHERY PEDIGO, Red Boiling Springs
HARAN PERRAN, Bowling Green
SUSAN PELLERITE, Owensboro
DENISE PHELPS, Bowling Green

LETTIE PIKE, Franklin
RAMONA PITTS, Louisville
RONDA PITTS, Franklin
EVA POOLE, Lexington
TIMOTHY PORTER, Madisonville
DIANA POWELL, Versailles

Picture perfect

HARTFORD junior Debbie Simmons gets ready to have her picture taken while photographer Alan Davis helps her pose. The picture was for a graduating nurses composite.

PETER POWELL, Antioch, Tenn.
ROBERT POWELL, Clarkson
SCOTT PRUITT, Somerset
ROBYN RABBETH, Louisville
KAREN RAFFERTY, Whitesville

CINDY RALSTON, Bowling Green
DEPP RASNER II, Shepherdsville
JULIA RATHER, Lexington
DARRELL RAY, Gamaliel
DARRELL RAYNOR, Louisville

STANLEY REAGAN, Tompkinsville
TERESA REECE, Knob Lick
KRISTEN REEDER, Newburgh, Ind.
KAREN REVELL, Anchorage
YURI REVICH, Bowling Green

CANDACE REYNOLDS, Owensboro
JEFFREY RICE, Scottsville
MARK RICHARDS, Scranton, Pa.
SUSAN RICHARDS, Jamestown
DEAN RICHARDSON, Brentwood, Tenn.

GREG RICHARDSON, Louisville
TRACA ROBACK, Somerset
LEIGH ROBERTS, Bowling Green
CATHY ROBERTSON, Evansville, Ind.
SHARON ROBERTSON, Owensboro

MITZI RODGERS, Miltown
JANETTE RODRIGUEZ, Louisville
SUSANNAH ROLL, Floyd Knobs, Ind.
MARCIA ROOTS, Campbellsville
FRANCES ROSS, Lexington

—Tammie Wilson

Down to business

AS THE Phonothon nears, Melissa Buckley, a Hopkinsville junior, prepares letters to be sent to alumni. Buckley was the chairwoman for the 15-day event.

CAMILLA ROWE, Beaver Dam
LARENDA RUDOLPH, La Center
ANTHONY SANDERS, Hopkinsville
KIM SANDERS, Nashville, Tenn.
KARSHA SANDERS, Castalian Springs, Tenn.

ANGIE SCHEMAN, Fort Mitchell
JULIA SCHMITT, Bowling Green
CEDRIC SCRUGGS, Louisville
BEN SEGO, Upton
AMANDA SETTLES, Owensboro

SUSAN SEXTON, Scottsville
LISA SHARTZER, Hardinsburg
MARY SHAW, Barrenville
JEFFREY SHELTON, Hopkinsville
LISA SHIRLEY, Glasgow

— Alan Warner

CARMEN SHORE, Cadiz
MICHAEL SIBIO, Owensboro
TAMMY SIMMONS, Louisville
KRISTI SKAGGS, Scottsville
GINA SLAUGHTER, Hull

DERRICK SMITH, White House, Tenn.
GARY SMITH, Philpot
KELLY SMITH, Owensboro
SHAWN SMITH, Versailles
STEPHEN SMITH, Evansville, Ind.

THOMAS SMITH, Letchford
KIM SNIDER, Dallas, Texas
ALAIN SOLAGAN, Ankara, Turkey
CYNTHIA SPARKS, Central City
JOAN STAFFORD, Paducah

PAUL STAGNER, Bowling Green
CAROLYN STALCUP, Burksville
DEREK STAPLES, Fordsville
VIRGINIA STAPLES, Glasgow
JEFF STATELER, Rockport, Ind.
KATHY STATELER, Owensboro

JIMMY STEWART, Chickasaw
LESLIE STILES, Louisville
CHRIS STINNETT, Owensboro
DON STINNETT JR., Harrodsburg
MIKE STINNETT, Bowling Green
JEAN STOCKTON, Maysfield

KAREN STRANGE, Corbin
LAURIE STREAN, St. Louis, Mo.
MARC SUTER, Nashville, Tenn.
SUSAN SWEENEY, Louisville
DENISE SWITZER, Glasgow
JOLENE SZUBA, Fort Mitchell

PERSONALITY

P · R · O · F · I · L · E

A reel artist's tribute

I wanted the mural on my floor of Pearce Ford Tower to be different from any of those on other floors," said Kevin Knapp, an Evansville, Ind., junior, who is painting a mural on the 23rd floor of the men's largest dorm.

"I thought of the idea as a freshman," Knapp, a commercial art major, said. "I got together with my RA and we discussed several ideas but we really didn't get to work on it until this (fall) semester."

Getting permission to paint the mural was not difficult for Knapp. He first had to talk to the dorm director and have his design passed. Once it was passed, the dorm supplied the paints and Knapp supplied the time.

CLINT EASTWOOD is portrayed in a mural painted by Kevin Knapp, an Evansville, Ind., junior. Knapp designed the mural which is on the 23rd floor of Pearce-Ford Tower.

The mural is based on the movie, "Firefox," which stars Clint Eastwood. Chase scenes involving the plane, Firefox, are shown in the mural.

Knapp's mural is not the only one in PFT. There are murals on almost every floor. "I wanted to make mine a dedication to Clint Eastwood," Knapp said.

Knapp says that this is his first mural and it shows "a sense of realism with a twist of caricature." The only other large work Knapp has done was a 5-by-6 foot black and white painting which he did for a painting class.

After college Knapp hopes to go into advertising. Although he doesn't plan to paint murals, he would like to do illustrations.

"I hope to finish the mural this spring," Knapp said. "I want to make it a floor project so everyone can leave his 'mark' on the floor."

Jessica Rappaport

DARRELL TADE, Tompkinsville
AMY TATE, Bowling Green
DEBRA TAUL, Glen Dean
BETH TERRELL, Owensboro
JOY TESTA, Harrodsburg
JANE ANN THARP, Maderdelle

DORIS THOMAS, Rockfield
STEVIE THOMAS, Tompkinsville
TINA THOMAS, Mayeville
TODD THOMAS, Cold Springs
JACK THOMASON JR., Hopkinsville
MIKE THOMLEY, Duthan, Ala.

AMY THOMPSON, Hendersonville, Tenn.
ANN THOMPSON, Lexington
LEJEANA THOMPSON, Portland, Tenn.
LINDA THOMPSON, Bowling Green
MECHELLE THOMPSON, Rineville
CHARLES THURMAN, Slatell, La.

WOODY TICHENOR, St. Charles, Ill.
RHONDA TILFORD, Clarksville
TERESA TOMPKINS, Madisonville
MARY JO TRAVIS, Glasgow
LINDA TRUMAN, Bowling Green
BETH TUCKER, Horse Cave

CONNIE TUCKER, Campbellsville
BOB TUDOR, Nashville, Tenn.
THOMAS TYRE, Shepherdsville
FESTUS UKACHUKWU, Ansonia, Nigeria
THERESA ULRICH, Indianapolis, Ind.
MICHELLE UZZLE, DePue

RENE VANCE, Akron, Ohio
MARK VANFLEET, Annandale, Va.
WILLIAM VENEMAN JR., London
SCOTT VICK, Springfield, Ill.
ANN WADDLE, Campbellsville
JULIE WAGONER, Eddyville

MARK WALDEN, Lexington
ERIC WALKER, Hopkinsville
MICHAEL WALLACE, Cadiz
ANGELA WALSH, Fairdale
SUSAN WALTER, Portland, Tenn.
SUE WANNER, Wheaton, Ill.

CHEVEL WARMINGTON, Hendersonville, Tenn.
PAULA WARZON, Whitesburg
AMY WASHBURN, Glasgow
BEN WATSON, Bardonia
JONI WETZEL, Bowling Green
ANITA WEST, Portland, Tenn.

TERESA WHEET, Bowling Green
LISA WHELAN, Louisville
ALISA WHITE, Hopkinsville
JILL WHITE, Russellville
MARGARET WICKLIFF, Bardonia
PAULA WILLARD, Crestwood

LUANNE WILLIAMS, Jamestown
MICHAEL WILLIAMS, Hopkinsville
TAMELA WILLIAMS, Cadiz
PENNY WILLIS, Central City
RAMONA WILLIS, Falls of Rough
SCOTT WILLIS, Louisville

BRENDA WILLOUGHBY, Scottsville
ROBERT WILLS, Owensboro
CHRISTY WILSON, Hartford
TERESA WINSATT, Owensboro
WILLIAM WISDOM, Tompkinsville
KIMBERLY WOOD, Nashville, Tenn.

SARAH WOODALL, Gallatin, Tenn.
KIMBERLY WRIGHT, Horse Cave
LITA YATES, Franklin
DAVID YAX, Edgewood
RICHARD YOUNG, Richmond, Ind.
JOAN ZIKMUND, Evansville, Ind.

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

The magic of movement

She sits in a corner, lifeless, untouched by the world. She wears a green and white dress with her blonde hair in pigtails. She has a big smile that stretches across her face. It comes to life when she is picked up by a human being.

She is Chiquita Chiquita Banana, also known as KD, a 24-inch puppet that becomes real in the hands of Versailles junior Wendy Combs, an elementary education major. "About five years ago I tried out for the puppet team for my church," she said. "We started with five puppets and we now have about 80."

Combs' right arm is responsible for most of KD's movements.

"My wrist is constantly moving and when I open my hand her mouth opens," Combs said. "She has two wires that are attached to her hands that allow me to move her arms."

"We usually perform to taped music and I move her mouth so it looks like she is singing. Every once in a while I talk to KD but I'm not very good at that yet," she said.

During the fall semester Combs and KD took an active part in the rush program for Kappa Delta, of which Combs is a member.

"This is how Chiquita Chiquita Banana became KD. We did a skit in which KD played a rushee," she said. "The rushees and sisters both loved the skit and it helped our rush presentation very much."

Each summer Combs and KD travel with other puppet team members to various states to perform.

"We've been to Pennsylvania, Missouri, and Florida. We perform in neighborhoods, campgrounds, and day care centers. Children think puppets are magical and just seeing their smiles and hearing their laughter makes it all worthwhile," Combs said.

KD, a 24-inch puppet, comes to life in the hands of Wendy Combs, a Versailles junior. Combs used the puppet for children's groups and a Kappa Delta sorority rush program.

Combs said she practiced about twice a week with the puppet team when she was in high school.

"But now the only practice I get with KD is when I sneak around the Kappa Delta house, letting KD peak around doors, making my sisters smile," she said. Combs sometimes watches the Muppet Show, "just to get ideas," she said. "When people see me working with her they think I do all the work. I just sit there and let KD do all the work!"

Jessica Rappaport 7

Sophomore

c · l · a · s · s

TAKING advantage of the nice weather are Diane Legler, a Louisville sophomore, and Melissa Abernathy, a Crestwood freshman. The two were relaxing at Smith Stadium.

JOAN C. ADAMS, Owensboro
JULIE ADAMS, Bowling Green
PATTY ADAMS, Georgetown
JANICE ALBERT, Paducah
SAM ALEXANDER, Louisville
TRACY ALLRED, Middletown

PAMELA S. ANDERSON, Philpot
REBECCA M. APPENFELDER, Louisville
LAURA ARMSTRONG, Madisonville
DEBORAH L. ARNETT, Elizabethtown
TAMMY J. ATHERTON, Utica
MARY M. BAKER, Franklin

SUE BALLARD, Louisville
SHONNA BARNEY, Franklin
TROY BEARD, Columbia
DENISE BEAUCHAMP, Hollywood, Fla.
LAURIE BEAUREGARD, Russellville
ROBIN BECKHAM, Lebanon

SCOTT M. BELCHER, Hardinsburg
CRYSTAL BELL, Paducah
STEVEN R. BELL, Edmonson
TINA M. BELL, Smithland
DEANNA L. BENNETT, Louisville
REBECCA BESTE, Mount Vernon, Ind.

STANLEY W. BLACK, Bedford
CARYN L. BOATMAN, Bowling Green
AMY L. BOGLE, Owensboro
EDDIE BOOHER, Franklin
DIA L. BOOTH, Owensboro
ANN BORGERDING, Paducah

TAMMY BOSTON, Campbellsville
TRACY L. BRADFORD, Louisville
DAYNA S. BRASHEAR, Seneca
LESLIE A. BRAUN, Newburgh, Ind.
SHERI L. BRAUNER, Gladale
KELLY BREHM, Fort Campbell

JANIS BRIDGES, Springfield, Tenn.
HOLLY BRIZENDINE, Hartford
ANDREA BROOKS, La Center
VICKI L. BROUGHER, Louisville
A. FRANKLIN BROWN, Liberty
BRIGETTE BROWN, Franklin

JILL BROWN, Portland, Tenn.
KENNY W. BROWN, Central City
LAUREN BROWN, Louisville
LYNETTE BROWN, Beecher Dam
MICHAEL BROWN, Sharon Grove
RHONDA BROWN, Park City

SHERI L. BROWN, Louisville
SUSAN K. BROWN, Owensboro
WILLIE BROWN, Bowling Green
BRIAN S. BRUCE, Jeffersonville
JIMMIE D. BRUCE JR., Bremen
DEBBIE BRUMFIELD, Irvington

PATRICIA K. BRUTSCHER, Louisville
FAITH BRYANT, Beechmont
GINA M. BRYANT, Liberty
CHRISTAL BURDEN, Morristown
CYNTHIA BURNETT, Rineyville
OBIE P. BYRUM, Nashville, Tenn.

MARK CALVERT, Scottsville
SUSAN L. CARDER, Germantown
CYNTHIA G. CARPENTER, Hendersonville, Tenn.
ALICIA CECIL, Philpot
GENA CHANDLER, Brandenburg
ANNETTE CHEEK, Independence

KIM CHRISMAN, Elizabethtown
RHONDA CLARK, Owensboro
STEPHEN D. CLARK, Bellevue
JANET CLECKNER, Nashville, Tenn.
MICHELE COLLINS, Horse Cave
TAMBERLY COLLINS, Dawson Springs

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Songs of salvation

Joey Hayes may soon be a well-known name in the world of contemporary Christian music.

Hayes, a 22-year-old Bowling Green sophomore, performed his first public concert Dec. 8 in Van Meter Auditorium for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Although Hayes said he enjoys doing concerts, he has much bigger things in mind.

He has recorded a demo-tape for a talent agent at the Dharma Agency in Nashville, Tenn. This is the same agency that brought out another big talent, popular Christian singer and Western graduate Michael Card.

"I'm excited about the whole situation now," Hayes said. "I'm looking for good things from the agency. I've gotten my concert promoted on a Christian radio station in Nashville, and I've had some flyers sent there too."

Hayes has not heard from the talent agency, but he hopes for some exciting avenues to open up, such as recording an album.

"I'm definitely looking or hoping for this to turn out to be a career," Hayes

"I'M DEFINITELY looking or hoping for this to turn out to be a career," Joey Hayes, a Bowling Green sophomore, said. Hayes wrote Christian music and gave a performance on campus.

said. "But I'm going to do whatever the Lord wants me to do."

A unique thing about Hayes is that he writes his own songs, a talent he hopes to expand.

Hayes, who has performed at many weddings, churches and schools, became interested in music at the age of 11 when he got a guitar for Christmas. He furthered his musical interest by playing along with John Denver while listening to his albums.

"Pretty soon, I found the toy I had gotten for Christmas wasn't a toy anymore," Hayes said.

Hayes thinks Denver has had the greatest influence on his music, but he said there have been others.

"Dan Fogelberg and Michael Card have also influenced my music a great deal," Hayes said.

However, Hayes also gives much credit for his music to Dr. William Lane, a professor in the philosophy and religion department.

"He had a big part in setting up my demo-tape," Hayes said. "He has helped me out a lot."

Hayes, a photojournalism major, is now considering changing his major to religion.

Hayes spends his afternoon delivering newspapers now, but in the future look for him to be singing full time.

Doug Gott

BLAKE COLWELL, Scottsville
ANITA COOMES, Franklin
MELISSA J. COPELIN, Sonoma
PAMELA COUCH, La Grange
LINDA COURSEY, Russellville
CAROL L. COX, Adairville

DENISA J. COX, Russellville
EDDIE COX, Magnolia
JULIE COX, Franklin, Tenn.
MICHAEL COX, Seminole, Fla.
KEVIN CRAWFORD, Caneyville
JEFFREY D. CROWELL, Owensboro

TIM CULVER, Louisville
MICHELLE DANKS, Bowling Green
LAURA DAUGHERTY, Elizabethtown
MARY DAVIS, Lafayette, Ind.
SHERYL DAWSON, Olmstead
BETSY DeKOSTER, Louisville

Broom business

BROOMS are a business for Pat Cunningham, a Stoutsville, Ohio, sophomore. He used equipment made in the 1870s to make the brooms which he sold for spare money.

TANA DEMUNBRUN, Brownsville
SHERRI DENNY, Lancaster
CAROL DeVASIER, Russellville
MIKE DIAS, Paducah
LANN DIUGUID, Hopkinsville
PAMELA DIXON, Louisville

SELIM Y. DOGRUYOL, Bowling Green
DIANE L. DOOLEY, Tell City, Ind.
PATRICIA A. DOOLIN, Bowling Green
JANICE M. DOWELL, Edinburg
DANA DOWNEY, Franklin
MICHAEL D. DUNAGAN, Louisville

AMY DUNCAN, Louisville
JAMES E. DUPIN, Louisville
JULIE DUSSEAU, Louisville
RENEE DUVAL, Park City
ROBIN DUVAL, Louisville
ROBERT A. EAST, Louisville

—Rick Maurer

MARK D. EBLEN, Lexington
MARCELLA EDMONDS, Glasgow
SHELLY EDWARDS, Hardyston
CATHY ELMORE, Alton
LISA EMBRY, Louisville
PAMELA S. EMBRY, New Albany, Ind.

DELMER ESTERS, Bowling Green
ANN EVERLY, Prestonsburg
CYNTHIA M. FAUST, Louisville
QUINTEN L. FAWBUSH, Louisville
KEITH FERGUSON, Bowling Green
SHERRY FIELDER, Bowling Green

BRUCE FLANNERY, Louisville
MARY KAY FLEMING, Huntsville
DARA A. FLORENCE, Cave City
MARCIA FOE, Bowling Green
PATRICIA J. FOLEY, Russell Springs
PATRICIA FORBES, Prosser

TRACY L. FORD, Brandenburg
CARLA FORSHIE, Bowling Green
HOLLY L. FOWLER, Lawrenceburg
KATHY FOX, Nashville, Tenn.
MARTA A. FRANK, Louisville
JOANNE FRANKLIN, Noctonville

REBECCA J. FREW, Bowling Green
JANE L. FRYMIRE, Madisonville
JEANETTE D. FUGATE, A.P.O., N.Y.
SUSAN GALYEN, Greenville
WANDA GAMMONS, Horse Cave
SHARON GASH, Lawrenceburg

CAROLYN GAY, Irvine
JERRY GENSHEIMER, Louisville
SANDY GIBSON, Clarkston
NATHAN GILBERT, London
KEITH GILLIAM, Bowling Green
SHARON KAY GILLIAM, Hopkinsville

CHERYL GLENAR, Leitchfield
SUSAN GOSLING, Louisville
SUSAN GRAHAM, Rumsby
ROGER C. GRAVES, Tompkinsville
DAVID GRAY, Mount Vernon
MARY F. GREEN, Carmichael

KELLY GREENWELL, Rineyville
TRACEE GREENWELL, Owensboro
DEBORAH GREGORY, Bowling Green
WAYNE T. GRIFFIN JR., Eubank
CAROL GRIFFITH, Nashville, Tenn.
NANCY GRIGGS, Bowling Green

ANITA GRINSTEAD, Bowling Green
DONNA GUESS, Adamsville
JANEL HACKLEY, Clarkston
LORI ANN HAGAN, Maceo
ALESHA HALE, Owensboro
CARLA HALE, Hannaburg

EDWINA HALL, Auburn
MARY HALL, Louisville
STEPHANIE HALL, Auburn
JANICE HALSEY, Edgewood
RAKIE HAMILTON, Barlow
TERRI HAMILTON, Horse Cave

TODD HAMILTON, Glasgow
BRENDA HARDEN, Durkessville
KAREN HARR, Fordville
MARISA HATLER, Russellville
RAY HATTEY, Mount Washington
KAREN HAYCRAFT, Philpot

TERI HAZZARD, Paris
TONY HELM, Hardinsburg
RICHARD HELMS, Middleboro
UDOMCHAI HEMSTAPAT, Raleigh, N.C.
DEBRA HENDRICK, Bowling Green
LOUISE HENIGMAN, Alcoa, Tenn.

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

A smile worth remembering

Again. Again. And again. Carmen Wood heard this at least 50 times with a television camera a few feet from her face. She was smiling over and over again with her head tilted a little bit this way and then a little bit that way.

The Nashville, Tenn., sophomore was in the process of doing a Captain D's commercial in Nashville. She had done some modeling before but this was her first time in front of television cameras.

Wood said it took three and one-half hours to make the commercial which ran for 30 seconds on all the Nashville stations for two months.

The commercial began by showing a family of four walking into the restaurant. The next shot was of Wood smiling. It took at least 50 times smiling to find just the right smile and it was only shown about one second in the commercial. Wood said she developed a crick in her neck from turning her head so much to get the right angle.

She said she was nervous and that her mouth became cottony because she didn't know what was expected of her. She said she was exhausted afterward.

She had first gone to an advertising agency in Nashville when she found out her father had made $100 for doing an advertisement which only took a few hours of his time.

She went to the agency in the middle of the summer and was called a month later for the Captain D's commercial.

Putting commercials together is one area of mass communication she is interested in. Through this commercial she was able to see what goes on behind the scenes.

Wood first saw the commercial in her Rodes-Harlin dorm lobby with about 30 people. She said it started out as just a few friends who were anxious to see her on television and then people coming into the lobby became interested and gathered around.

BEING in a television commercial was a new experience for Carmen Wood, a Nashville, Tenn., sophomore. Wood was a waitress in a Captain D's commercial.

She said, "I felt funny. The lobby was packed with everyone ready to see this commercial."

"It came on and then it was over. It was all over so quick."

"All I could remember about it was that my lipstick looked so orange and I looked stupid."

"I thought it was no big deal. I got excited when I got my $250 pay. That's when I got excited," Wood said.

She said she was surprised when people on campus recognized her from the commercial. One guy on campus came up to her and said, "I know this is going to sound dumb but I have a bet with a few friends of mine. Weren't you in a Wendy's commercial?" Close enough, he won the bet.

Tonya Berkley

DANA HESTER, Mount Washington
HOLLIE HILDRETH, Bowling Green
JENNE HILL, Middlesboro
LEA ANN HILL, Madisonville
CYNTHIA HINES, Bowling Green

JOHN HINTON, Scottsville
ALISON HODGES, Munfordville
THOMAS HOLLEY, Bexley, Ohio
JOHN HOLLINSWORTH, Tompkinsville
JAMES H. HOOD, Fort Knox

TAMMY HOOSIER, Campbellsville
JENNIFER HOPPER, Jamestown
ROBERT HORNUNG, Louisville
DANNY HOSER, Bowling Green
ELAINE HOWARD, Harrodsburg

JAMES HOWARD, Whitesville
JEFFREY HOWARD, Owensboro
WILLIAM HOWE, Mayfield
BETH HUBBARD, Owensboro
CINDY HUFF, Harrodsburg

—Rick Musochio

Deity debate

BIBLICAL passages are discussed by Jim Gilles, a traveling evangelist, and Johnny Ragan, a Mount Sterling sophomore. Gilles spent the day on campus before continuing south.

DAVID HUFFMAN, Bowling Green
BARBARA JO HULSEY, Calhoun
MARK HUMPHRIES, Nortonville
NATALIE HURT, Union
ELIZABETH JAMES, Harrodsburg

MELISSA JAMIESON, Brentwood, Tenn.
TERESA JARVIS, Owensboro
MICHELLE JENKINS, Louisville
PAMELA JETER, Horse Cave
DONITA JEWELL, Edmonton

BECKY JOHNSON, Taylorsville
MARCIA JOHNSON, Cecilia
MICHAEL JOHNSON, Jenkins
TERESA JOHNSON, Louisville
TONY JOHNSON, Hawesville

JANA JONES, Franklin
JULIA JONES, Bowling Green
RHONDA JOYCE, Leitchfield
CATHY KANNEBERG, Tell City, Ind.
JENNIFER KELTNER, Columbia

RICHARD KEMP, Russellville
LAWRENCE KIMBROUGH, Nashville, Tenn.
JERI KIRKWOOD, Bremen
KAREN KIRSCH, Nicholasville
DONNA KITTINGER, Russellville
NICOL KNERR, Wapakoneta, Ohio

KELLIE KNIGHT, Central City
JULIE KREDENS, Louisville
JULIE KUEHN, Highland, Mich.
MARTHA LAFFERTY, Horse Cave
STEPHEN LAIRD, Lexington
ANITA LAMAR, Louisville

LATRISHA LAMAR, Hartford
MELISSA LAMKIN, Paysonville
LORI LAW, Bowling Green
LEE ANN LAWLER, Mankinville
LISA LAWSON, Miami, Fla.
LISA LEE, Louisville

PENNY LEE, Scottsville
TAMMY LEE, Bowling Green
DIANE LEGLER, Louisville
BECKY LEOPARD, Franklin, Tenn.
JENNIFER LIPTAK, Arlington Heights, Ill.
ROGER LITTLE, Albany

SUSAN LONG, Russellville
KIMBERLY LOVEDAY, Middleboro
MARIANELA LOZADA, Caracas, Venezuela
MAURA LYONS, St. Louis, Mo.
RANDALL H. LYTLE JR., Beaver Dam
CARLA MACKEY, Calhoun

LISA MAGLINGER, Owensboro
TRACY MANSFIELD, Scottsville
MELANIE MARKHAM, Auburn
TRACY MARKSBURY, Booneville, Ind.
MICHELLE MARTIN, Nashville, Tenn.
SUNDOS S. MASRI, Nablus, Israel

LORINDA MATSON, Cincinnati, Ohio
MELISSA MATTHEWS, Cave City
KIM MAXSON, Bowling Green
NANCY MAY, Alton
SUSAN MAY, Marion
SHERRY MAY, Hodgenville

MARY McALLEN, Nashville, Tenn.
RONNIE McAMISH, Irvington
LAURA McCLELLAN, Louisville
CARLA McCUBBIN, Horse Cave
MICHAEL McGUINNESS, Fort Campbell
ANGELA McINTOSH, Olmstead

BARRY McKINNEY, Columbia
ELIZABETH McKINNEY, Louisville
KATHY McLAUGHLIN, Bowling Green
DONNA McLEMORE, Fordsville
MIKE McMAHAN, Vine Grove
DANA McREYNOLDS, Louisville

Terminal delay

DISAPPOINTMENT shows on the face of Stephanie Sparks, a Bloomington, Ind., sophomore. She was in the Registrar's office and couldn't get the class she wanted.

BRYANT MEDLEY, Brandenburg
CONNIE MERRITT, Owensboro
DOROTHY METZMEIER, Campbellsville
DON METZNER, Elizabethtown
DANIEL MEYER, Tell City, Ind.
LISA MICHEL, Louisville

KATHRYN MICHELSEN, Louisville
LANA MILAM, Shepherdsville
DARRELL MILLER, Summer Shade
FRANK MILLER, Jamesstown
LINDSEY MILLER, Elizabethtown
MARIA MILLER, Fairdale

MARY BETH MILLER, Hardinsburg
STEPHEN MOAD, Cloverport
CHERYL MOLAND, Franklin, Tenn.
WILLIAM MONIN, Hardinsburg
VINETTA MONROE, Cave City
JENNIFER MONTGOMERY, Calhoun

WESTERN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY

CLASS OF 1966

Paper wait

THE COLLEGE Heights Herald provides entertainment for Helen Hooper-Hirst, a Bowling Green sophomore. She was waiting for her mother outside Cherry Hall.

— T. J. Hamilton

KELLY MOORE, Barbourville
JAMES MOORMAN, Utica
KATHLEEN MORAN, Louisville
TAMMY MORCOM, Lynchburg, Va.
ANGELA MOREHEAD, Franklin

FLORENCE MORENO, Owensboro
DARLA MORGAN, Scottsville
DONNA MORGAN, Glasgow
SHARON MORRIS, Harrodsburg
BRENT MOSELEY, Harrodsburg

LESLIE MOSELEY, Columbia
TAMMY MOSIER, Summer Shade
ELIZABETH MOSS, Rockfield
THOMAS MOUNTAIN, Owensboro
ANITA MURPHY, Lebanon

KELLEY MURPHY, Nashville, Tenn.
LISA MURPHY, Dundee
MARK MURPHY, Louisville
ROBYN MURPHY, Lancaster
SHERRI MURPHY, Lexington

CAROLYN NEALY, Lewisburg
KAREN NEELEY, Wickliffe
ELLEN NEGLEY, La Center
TAMLYN NELSON, Louisville
TOM NETH, Evansville, Ind.

FRANK NEUBER, Bowling Green
MIKE NEWTON, Bowling Green
SHEILA NORFLEET, Middletown
LISA NORMAN, Horse Cave
SHEREE NORMAND, Bowling Green

JONATHAN NORRIS, Portland, Tenn.
ANITA OAKES, Scottsville
TERESA ODLE, Lynchfield
KATHERINE OGDEN, Horse Cave
BRIAN O'KEEFE, Louisville

SALLY OLDHAM, Bowling Green
SCOTT OLDHAM, Bowling Green
STACY OLIVER, Louisville
SHARON OTTENS, Sebree
KEVIN PARDUE, Scottsville

Low clearance

CAUGHT IN FLIGHT is Bruce Flannery, a Lewisville sophomore. He was practicing the high jump at Smith Stadium.

— Ray Thomas

MELTRENA PARHAM, Podiatra
KIMBERLY PARKER, Quality
PATTY PARRENT, Bowling Green
KIMBERLY PARSON, Columbia
KIMBERLY PATTERSON, Livermore
SEAN PECK, Gilbertville

TONY PENNINGTON, Sonora
TAMMY PERKINS, Scottsville
GWENDY PERRY, Waco, Texas
JAMES PHILLIPPI, Williamstown
JAMES L. POSZE JR., Colitz
CHARLEY PRIDE, Clay

NEKA PROFFITT, Fountain Run
KANDACE PROFFITT, Winchester
MATT PRUITT, Bowling Green
PAMELA A. PSIMER, Lexington
MARCE PUCKETT, Fairmont
IVANOV PUENTES, Bowling Green

JUAN M. PUENTES, Bogota, Colombia
JANE PURCELL, Scottsville
DAVID W. PURCELL, Cloverport
SUSAN QUISENBERRY, Lexington
WARREN S. RAMSEY, Bowling Green
MICHAEL RANDOLPH, Wickliffe

SONDRA RANSON, Owensboro
MICHAEL REFF, Campbellsville
MARTHA G. RICE, Elizabethtown
TERRI RICE, Evansville, Ind.
CINDY RICHARDS, Cloverport
REBECCA L. RICKS, Nortonville

MARIETTA RIGGS, Upton
ROBIN RIGGS, Brandenburg
CAROLYN M. RIPPY, Adolphus
ELIZABETH RITTER, Bowling Green
JUDY ROBBINS, Jeffersville, Ind.
MARILYN ROBERTS, Auburn

JOHN ROBINSON, Carthage, Tenn.
DANIEL RODRIGUEZ, Chicago, Ill.
ALICIA RODRIGUEZ, Cadiz
TAMMY ROWLAND, Louisville
ALLYSON, Y. ROWLES, Nashville, Tenn.

TERESA RUSSELL, Oak Grove
SUE RUTHERFORD, Geneva, Ill.
BARRY RUTLEDGE, Horse Cave
JUDITH D. SANDAGE, Cannelton, Ind.
JENNIFER SAPP, Campbellsville

JEFF SASSE, Henderson
ANGELA K. SAWYER, Hinesville
KIMBERLY A. SAYLOR, Lexington
SHANNON SCHEIDEGGER, Owensboro
DENISE A. SCHMIDT, Jasper, Ind.

LAUREL SCHOBORG, Paducah
DEBRA SCHULER, Louisville
KENNY H. SCHWING, Owensboro
REBECCA A. SCOTT, Bowling Green
LAURA ANNE SEARS, Murray

TONY F. SEAY, Louisville
JILL A. SELLERS, Shepherdsville
CRAIG R. SEPKO, Harrodsburg
KATHERINE E. SHEPARD, Murray
MARY SHIFFLETT, Russellville

ALAN SILVA, Cloverdale, Calif.
LAURA D. SIMMONS, Glasgow
PAUL SIMON, Bowling Green
KIM SKEENS, Elizabethtown
GINA SMITH, Burkesville

MELISA J. SMITH, Cadiz
SHARON A. SMITH, Leitchfield
SHEILA A. SMITH, Louisville
JEFFREY D. SNEDDEN, Elkhart
MARY C. SNYDER, Bowling Green

DALE A. SOULEYRETTE, Sonoma
CHUCK SPECK, Glasgow
SUE SPINO, Pepper Pike, Ohio
ANGIE SPRADLIN, Glasgow
WILLIAM T. SPURLOCK, Russellville

MICHELE A. SQUIER, Borgeville, Ind.
RICHARD A. STAHL, Clarksville, Ind.
LISA STANFIELD, Elizabethtown
SCOTT STARKEY, Mount Washington
KIMBERLY R. STINNETT, Cloverport

Romantic rock

AT THE Romantics concert, Kathy Fox, a Nashville, Tenn., sophomore, and Steve Gorman, a Hopkinsville freshman, show their enthusiasm for the group. The concert was held in the Garrett Ballroom on Dec. 6.

—T. J. Hamilton

LISA A. STONE, Henderson
LYNN STONE, Uca
CINDY STRINE, Glen Elyn, Ill.
LANCE STROTHER, Cave City
TRACY STUMPH, Bardonia

TRACYE SWITZER, Louisville
STEPHEN TANDY, Gamaliel
JENNIFER B. TARTER, Liberty
JENNIFER F. TARTER, Bethel, Ohio
AMY TAYLOR, Wickliffe

ERIC H. TAYLOR, Louisville
GARRY F. TAYLOR, Bowling Green
PAULA K. TAYLOR, Louisville
LAURA L. THOMAS, Central City
DAVID THOMSON, Madisonville

KIMBERLY THOMMESEN, Oconomowoc, Wis.
MYRL T. THOMPSON JR., Louisville
TERESA G. THOMPSON, Morgantown
LISA TINDLE, Cloverport
MARRIA TOROK, Louisville

LEE TOWNE, Madisonville
MARK T. TRAUTMAN, Glasgow
EDMOND E. TRAVIS, Cadiz
JEREMY F. TURNER, Tompkinsville
KIMBERLIE TURNER, Liberty
TRACI TURNER, Hermitage, Tenn.

BRENDA TYLER, Paducah
LISA TYLER, Arlington
SHERRIE A. UNDERWOOD, Hodgenville
SHERRY UPTON, Russell Springs
MARIANNE UTTER, Bowling Green
JOHN VANMETER, Vine Grove

SHERRI L. VANOVER, Uca
ABBY VANWINKLE, Owensboro
VALERIE J. VAUGHN, Vostava Hills, Ala.
VICKIE VAUGHN, Vostava Hills, Ala.
TONY VICK, Central City
MARIO VILLEGAS, Newtown Square, Pa.

LINDA VINCENT, Bowling Green
ROSE A. VINCENT, Russellville
SARA-ANN WADE, Owensboro
MARY M. WALLACE, Cadiz
LISA WALTERS, Magnolia
PATRICIA L. WATERS, Horse Cave

GAYE WATKINS, Smith Grove
NELL J. WEBB, Frankfort
KIM WELBORN, Madisonville
CHRIS WESTBROOK, Bowling Green
LOVORIA WHITE, Hopkinsville
MICHELE J. WHITELEY, La Grange

BRIAN WHITFIELD, Owensboro
WILLIAM C. WHITMER, Portland, Tenn.
JEFF WHITTINGHILL, Morgantown
PAMELA S. WHITTINGHILL, Greenville
ANGELA R. WILCOXSON, Horse Cave
SUZANNE WILKINS, Paducah

MICHAEL WILLET, Bowling Green
CHERYL D. WILLIAMS, Glasgow
DAVID C. WILLIAMS, Bowling Green
PENNY WILLIAMS, Fountain Run
ANDREA WILSON, La Grange
MARY K. WILSON, Greenville

TWONA D. WILSON, Glasgow
MELINDA WITHERS, Russell Springs
NELL E. WITHERS, Cynthiana
BARBARA WITTHROW, Bowling Green
CARMEN WOOD, Nashville, Tenn.
KATHRYN WOOD, Sebree

BETH WOODARD, Evansville, Ind.
BETH WOODLEE, Dunmore
RICHARD W. WOODWARD, Bowling Green
ROBIN WOODWARD, Franklin
KAREN WRIGHT, Hardyville
KAREN L. YOUNT, Shelbyville

On the road again

WHILE THEIR father preaches at Downing University Center, Sarah and Mercy Woroniecki wait for him. Jimmy Beard, a Nashville, Tenn., sophomore, watched the children.

— T. J. Hamilton

Freshman

c · l · a · s · s

BIG RED band member Kevin Jackson, an Olmstead freshman, reassembles his trombone after cleaning it. He was getting ready for practice.

RAY ABELL, Wickliffe
MELISSA ABERNATHY, Crestwood
DARRELL ADAMS, Horse Cave
HERMAN ADAMS, Corbin
KIM ADAMS, Tompkinsville
SUSAN ALBRIGHT, Irvington

TRACY ALLEN, Whitesville
RONDA AMBROSE, Philpot
JUDY ANDERSON, Hopkinsville
LINDA SUE ANDERSON, Gallatin, Tenn.
MONICA ANTHONY, Greenville
PAUL APONTE, Nashville, Tenn.

LISA APPLING, Russellville
BENJAMIN AUCLAIR, Vine Grove
MICHELLE AUCLAIR, Fullerton, Calif.
MARJORIE BABCOCK, Louisville
JAMES BAILEY, Russellville
ROBIN BAILEY, Glasgow

JANE BAIR, Ft. Wayne, Ind.
GARY BAKER, Bowling Green
LYNN BAKER, Bloomington, Ind.
MICHELE BALDWIN, Madisonville
JUDE BALLARD, Bardonia
CHERIE BANKS, Elizabethtown

JOHN BARKER, Owensboro
KEVIN BARR, Bethpage, Tenn.
NETTA BEARD, Louisville
BARBARA BEASLEY, Windsor
DOUG BECK, Louisville
MILDRED BECK, Bowling Green

AMELIA BEELER, Hustonville
SCOTT A. BEEN, Louisville
JOY BEHNKE, Nashville, Tenn.
DAVID BELL, Hendersonville, Tenn.
ELIZABETH BELL, Greenville, S.C.
MARY BELLFLOWER, Louisville

STEPHANIE BENSON, Louisville
AMY BICKETT, Ramsey
MARY BIRCH, Olney, Ill.
BOBBY F. BLAIR JR., Bowling Green
JODY L. BLAKE, Bowling Green
KIMBERLY ANN BLAKE, Benton

DONALD BLAKEY, Canaan
MARY BOEHMANN, Philpot
MICHAEL D. BOGGS, Prospect
MIKE L. BOLAND, Elizabethtown
TANJA M. BOLLINGER, Owensboro
TRACY L. BOND, Shelbyville

SHELIA BONNER, Indianapolis, Ind.
SUZANNE BOONE, Naperville, Ill.
MARIA ANN BORCHERT, Bowling Green
RONNAH ANN BOWLES, Madisonville
DANIEL K. BOYD, Cadiz
EDWARD BRACKEN, Herndon, Va.

GEORGENA BRACKETT, Upton
MARY RUTH BRANSTETTER, Hardysville
SHELLY BRANSTETTER, Horse Cave
DAVID J. BRASWELL, Owensboro
JO ANNETTE BRATCHER, Litchfield
DENISE E. BRISTOL, Letcher

JENNIFER L. BRISTOW, Bowling Green
BELINDA BROOKS, Louisville
GINA KAYE BROWN, Cloverport
JANET L. BROWN, Glasgow
STACY BROWN, Harrodsburg
CRAIG E. BROWNING, Lindseyville

AINEE BRYAN, Paris
JAMES L. BUNCH JR., Franklin
MICHAEL BURNETTE, Bowling Green
BILLY J. BURTON, Bowling Green
SONYA D. BURTON, Princeton
JOSEPH BURYSEK, Franklin

MARIA LYNN BUSH, Scottsville
TRACY R. BYRD, Jamestown
JODY LYNN CALHOUN, Glasgow
FRANK CARDWELL, Franklin
CHAD CARLTON, Lawrenceburg
HERBERT CARMAN, Kings Mountain

LAURA B. CARRICO, Paducah
KELLY B. CARROLL, Munfordville
DAVID CARTER, Madisonville
HAROLD D. CARTER, Glasgow
STACY ELLEN CARY, Burkesville
MELISSA C. CASTELL, Mayfield

FENNER CASTNER, Louisville
JANET L. CAUDILL, London
LISA M. CHARLES, Bowling Green
TONYA CHEAK, Burgin
TODD R. CHEEVER, London
RENEE CHELCHOWSKI, Hopkinsville

ALLISON CLARK, Winchester
KEVIN R. CLARK, Elizabethtown
PAULA CLARK, Calhoun
TOMMY CLAYCOMB, Vine Grove
TOMMY CLAYTON, Bardonia
GERALD CLAYWELL, Burkesville

LISA A. CLINE, Franklin
BOBBIE JO CLOYD, Bowling Green
CURTIS W. COBB JR., Cecilia
KENNY COBB, Magnolia
LEANNE COFFEY, Glasgow
CAROLINE COLBY, Mayfield

ROLAND COLE, Louisville
BOBBY COLEMAN, Cadiz
KATHY JO COLEMAN, Bowling Green
JERRY COLLINS, Barbourville
TIMOTHY COMBS, Ellettsville
LISA COOHILL, Bowling Green

PERSONALITY

P · R · O · F · I · L · E

A well-balanced performance

While most students have their hands full juggling school, jobs, and social activities, Curtis Cobb, a Cecilia freshman, spends his time juggling pins, balls, and fruits.

"I like to juggle as a hobby. Whenever I get bored it is something fun to do," Cobb said.

Cobb became interested in juggling during high school. One of the classes he was taking included juggling.

"The teacher can only show you how to do the first three steps," Cobb said. "From then on it is all up to the person. If they have the curiosity and they are really into it, then they will be able to do it," Cobb said.

"You have to experiment all the time. You can't go to the grocery store or anywhere without picking up canned food, fruit or just anything," he said.

Cobb said that he would like to juggle at places like Opryland and Kings Island. "They have jugglers there that stand outside and perform. I have always admired people who do that."

Although he enjoys it, Cobb does not plan to make a career of juggling. For him it is fun and keeps him from getting bored.

As tricky as it looks, Cobb thinks juggling is quite simple. To begin, the juggler must practice throwing one ball up in the air and catching it with the other hand. A second ball is added and caught with the same hand. This becomes a pattern of throwing one ball over another.

"If somebody says that I can't juggle something, then I have to do it just because they say I can't. After awhile you become bored doing the same old tricks and you begin to try and think of something that would be totally impossible to juggle," said Cobb.

Cobb believes that it is possible to juggle anything as long as it isn't too heavy. He once saw someone juggling chain saws, although he doesn't feel comfortable enough to try that maneuver.

WHILE he works as a night clerk at Garrett Conference Center, Curtis Cobb, a Cecilia freshman, practices his juggling skills. Cobb became interested in juggling in high school.

Juggling objects that are off weight, such as a bowling ball, ping-pong ball and a ring, makes it more difficult. All items need to be of similar weight, Cobb said.

"The different combinations you can juggle with three items are endless. If you can learn to juggle things consistently, then that is really something," he said.

"If you can think of anything that you feel would be impossible to juggle, let me know and I'll work on it for a few months," Cobb said with a smile.

Jennifer Hatfield

Graceful gaze

BEGINNING ballet class is a good place for Jo Ann Shepard, a Radcliff freshman, to concentrate on her ballet form. The class met in the Smith Stadium studio.

— Mary Ann Lyons

TAMMY SUE COOK, Leitchfield
TONY L. COPELAND, Princeton
PENNY K. CORDER, Elizabethtown
ANN MARIE COTTRELL, Bonnierville
JODI L. COULSON, Leitchfield
CONSTANCE R. COVELLI, Russellville

MARK A. CRAVENS, Liberty
MARLA CROW, Bowling Green
CAROL CROWE, Owensboro
ROBERT J. CULL, Bowling Green
ROBERTA DAME, Rumsey
EVA DANT, Calhoun

VIVIAN DAUGHERTY, Lexington
JENNIFER L. DAUM, Newburgh, Ind.
KITTY DAVIDSON, Madison, Tenn.
JACQUELINE S. DAVIS, Louisville
JANICE DAVIS, Madisonville
LEIGH ELLEN DAVIS, Princeton

MICHAEL T. DAVIS, Whitesville
WILLIAM DAVIS, Bowling Green
KELLY DAY, Louisville
LYSA M. DEESE, Hopkinsville
LORIE DEMUNBRUN, Bowling Green
DOREEN L. DENNIS, Central City

SUZANNE DEPUTY, Bowling Green
KAREN DEVER, La Grange
CINDY DEVINE, Bowling Green
C. LEIGH DEWESE, Louisville
AUDREY A. DILLMANN, Danville
KRISTINA DONALDSON, Louisville

SHEILA DOUGLAS, Bowling Green
MARIA H. DOWNING, Fountain Run
LAURA K. DREWRY, West Lafayette, Ind.
JENNIFER DRURY, Gilbertsville
MINDY DUNN, Louisville
DONNA DUNVILLE, Hanson

DEANNA L. DUVALL, Beaver Dam
ROBERT W. DYE, Lexington
KIM EAKLE, Gamaliel
BETH EATON, Gilbertsville
FELICIA J. EBERHARD, Evansville, Ind.
MICHAEL EDMONDSON, Kuttawa

LISA EDWARDS, Sulphur Well
PAMELA EDWARDS, Versailles
WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, Russellville
LIZ EPPINGER, Evansville, Ind.
GREG ELDER, Glasgow
RHONDA ELMORE, Franklin

DOUGLAS T. EMBERTON, Tompkinsville
HUGH EMBRY, Caneyville
JANET S. ENGLAND, Edmonson
KAREN ENGLAND, Franklin
KIMBERLY ENGLAND, Bowling Green
THOMAS ERVIN, Brentwood, Tenn.

RONNIE H. ESTES, Auburn
SHARON EVERHARD, Bowling Green
SCOTT T. FARMER, Franklin
JEFFREY A. FELTY, Louisville
DEBBIE FENDMORE, Louisville
LESLIE FERGUSON, Bowling Green

STEVEN FERGUSON, Bowling Green
HOLLY FETHERLIN, Westlake, Ohio
PATRICIA A. FIELDS, Morgantown
ELIZABETH FISHBURN, Bowling Green
LISA FISHER, Scottsville
ANGIE FLEENOR, Bowling Green

DAMITA L. FLETCHER, Eminence
CHRISTIE FLORENCE, Olmstead
LORI WYNN FOE, Bowling Green
TAMMY JO FOLEY, Tompkinsville
JANA FORD, Leitchfield
BEVERLY FOWLER, Clarkson

SHAWN D. FREELS, Greenville
DENISE FREEPARTNER, Harrodsburg
PATI FREW, Bowling Green
STACY D. FULKERSON, Utica
JEFFERY A. FULLER, Lexington
MARK FYFFE, Lexington

DEBBIE C. GANT, Hanson
ANN GARDNER, Roanoke, Va.
DONNA M. GATTO, Leitchfield
DAWN GENTRY, Mount Vernon
SEAN GEORGE, Capetown, South Africa
CINDY GIBBS, Russellville

TAMMY GILLIAM, Russellville
TANA GLOVER, Calhoun
JOHN GOFF, Leitchfield
VICKIE GOLDEN, Bowling Green
ANNETTE GOODIN, Lebanon
CHERYL GOODING, Bowling Green

Final touches

BEFORE a rehearsal of "Red Shoes," Ann Street, a Nashville, Tenn., freshman, applies her makeup. Street played Karen in the play.

TODD GOODWIN, Lawrenceburg
VIVIAN GOOLSBY, Gamaliel
LEASA GORDON, Mortons Gap
DOUG GOTT, Hopkinsville
MACK GOTT, Bowling Green
ANN GOWEN, Columbia

CATHY GRAVES, Columbia
TERESA GRAY, London
RHONDA GRIMES, Bowling Green
MARLA GRINSTEAD, Scottsville
KIMBERLY GROVES, Ellettsville
AMY GROWNEY, Louisville

LISA GUMM, Glasgow
SHERRY HALL, Leitchfield
LISA HAMILTON, Philpot
TOD HANCOCK, Elizabethtown
MIKE HARDCASTLE, Bowling Green
LISA HARDESTY, Elton

— Alan Warr

KATHY HARDIN, Benslow
ANGELA HARRISON, Louisville
KAREN HARPER, Glasgow
TIM HARPER, Cave City
DEBRA HARRIS, Bowling Green
DAVID HARRISON, Fountain Run

TERESA HARRISON, French Lick, Ind.
LESLEY HART, Russell Springs
KEIRSTEN HARVEY, Brownsville
NANCY HAUSKINS, Nashville, Tenn.
PHYLLIS HAYES, Horse Cave
WILLIAM HEARN, New Albany, Ind.

ANGELA HEDGES, Crestwood
GREG HILTON, Louisville
JAMES HENDERSON, Bowling Green
NANCY HENDRICK, Hendersonburg
LISA HENSLEY, Brandenburg
TRICIA HETTINGER, Louisville

PERSONALITY

P · R · O · F · I · L · E

'H' is for hard work

To most of us, the letter "H" wouldn't be significant. But to Cindy Smith the letter means a great deal.

"Head, heart, hands and health are the four H's of 4-H, the largest youth organization in the state," said Cindy Smith, vice president of 4-H on the state level.

Smith was elected in June of 1983 at the state-wide 4-H Week held in Lexington.

"I have been involved with 4-H for eight years and have been building up to this with leadership experiences in the 4-H of Bowling Green," said Smith, a Bowling Green freshman who has a double major in public relations and agriculture.

Smith was recognized last year by the state 4-H as a state Record Book Winner for beef. This recognition was for keeping the records of the cattle on her farm.

"I kept records of the care and feeding of the cattle and presented it to the state Record Book Committee and won," she said. "State winners there compete nationally but mine didn't win. These state awards are presented at 4-H Week.

"4-H IS a great organization to show personal accomplishments and learn about leadership," according to Cindy Smith, a Bowling Green freshman. Smith served as the vice president for the state 4-H.

"4-H Week is a time for all members to come together for personal recognition and learning experiences," Smith said. "Members of 4-H, ages 9-19, compete in state judging of events ranging from fashion to agriculture. They also attend seminars on leadership and attend other activities such as a banquet and a ball."

As the vice president of the state 4-H, Smith will represent 4-H throughout the state. She will be in charge of recreation and the different committees made up of 4-H members.

"I preside over the Teen Council which plans 4-H Week," she said. "I will also speak on leadership and 4-H activities at meetings, fairs and banquets throughout the year."

Smith plans to use her 4-H experiences to become a specialist in agricultural public relations.

"4-H is a great organization to show personal accomplishments and learn about leadership," she said. "It is even better when you receive recognition for it."

Jessica Rappaport T

KIMBERLY HEWLETT, Waverly, Ohio
GRETCHEN HICKS, Louisville
JENNIFER HILL, Louisville
ANGELA HIMES, Winchester
BARBARA HIMES, Springfield, Tenn.
JAMES HISEN, Lamb

GARY HOBGOOD, Sebree
KATHY HODGES, Muncieville
TERESA HOLLINGSWORTH, Shepherdsville
LAURA HOSKINS, Owensboro
TAMMY HOSKINS, Liberty
AMY HOUSTON, Bowling Green

PAULA HOUSTON, Owensboro
CYNTHIA HOWARD, Tompkinsville
JEFFREY HOWARD, Owensboro
SHERYL HOWELL, Bowling Green
STELLA HUBBARD, Edmonton
JOHN HUDSON, Ballou

Freshman pole

AN INTEREST survey is completed by Bob Cull, an Ithaca, N.Y., freshman. He filled out the survey as he moved into Pearce-Ford Tower.

MELISSA HUEBNER, Evansville, Ind.
DANNY HUFF, Olaton
ANNE HUGHES, Franklin
TIMOTHY HUGHES, Auburn
H. MACK HUMPHREYS II, Mayfield
JUDY HURT, Nicholasville

KIMBERLY IRVING, Glasgow
DEBORAH IRWIN, Glasgow
MARLA JACKSON, Newburgh, Ind.
BRIAN JEFFRIES, Bowling Green
SCOTT JEFFRIES, Bowling Green
KIM JENT, Jackson, Miss.

ERIC JOHNSON, Morgantown
JILL JOHNSON, Springfield, Tenn.
MARGARET JOLLY, Glen Dean
AMY JONES, Louisville
LARRY JONES, Franklin
MALCOLM JONES, Madisonville

CAROL JORDON, Elron
JoANN JOSEPH, Louisville
CHARLES JOURNEY, Shepherdsville
TIMOTHY JUSTIS, Welch Creek
JULIE KAEIN, Arlington Heights, Ill.
CHARLES KANDUL, Smyrna, Ga.

JOEY KEITH, Beaver Dam
KEVIN KEITH, Greentown, Ind.
KARRIE KEMP, Russellville
CHERYL KENNEDY, Louisville
JEFF KEY, Lewisburg
JANET KILGO, Bowling Green

GAYLE KINDRED, Fort Knox
DANNY KINKADE, Litchfield
TODD KIRBY, Bowling Green
MELISSA KLUMB, Mount Washington
TERRI KNIGHT, Marietta, Ga.
BARB KOEHLER, Edgewood

CHADLEY LADD, Madisonville
JOSEPH LALLY, Louisville
MELANIE LANE, Franklin
MICHAEL LAWS, Nashville, Tenn.
CYNTHIA LAYMAN, Louisville
LAURA LAYMAN, Wadesville, Ind.

KAREN LEE, Louisville
TYRA LEE, Bowling Green
CHRIS LANEAVE, Mayfield
BRUCE LINDSEY, Owensboro
JANE LINTON, Mount Washington
BOBBI LIS, Buffalo Grove, Ill.

TERESA LISCH, Springfield, Ohio
ADRIENNE LOGAN, Lexington
BARBRA LONG, Owensboro
PAMELA LONG, Clayton, Ohio
PATRICIA LONG, Bowling Green
RICKY LONG, Glasgow

Lover bore

CAMPING out has a new meaning for Larry Breunig, a Paris freshman, who is taking a nap while waiting to buy tickets for the Loverboy concert. Breunig set up camp at 5 a.m. to pay $12.50 for a ticket.

RONICA LONG, Levensburg
 SEAN LOVELLY, Caliz
 KIM LOWE, Madisonville
 SANDRA LOWE, Glasgow
 CYNTHIA LOY, Fairplay
 MARY ANN LUCAS, Woodlawn

TIM LUCAS, Leitchfield
 CHARLES LUCKETT, Louisville
 SHERRY LUDWIG, Bowling Green
 DANA LYDDAN, Irvington
 ALISON LYNCH, Somerset
 DANIEL MacVEIGH, Louisville

BRIAN MADDOX, Genesee Hills, Calif.
 KEVIN MANN, Franklin
 SHARON MARKSBARY, Smith Grove
 MARY MARTIN, Mount Washington
 JAMES MASTERSON, Richmond
 LISA MATHIAS, Portland, Tenn.

CAROL MATHIS, Horse Cave
 ROBIN MATTINGLY, Louisville
 LISA MAUZY, Colbran
 SHARON McALPIN, Torkinsville
 DAVID McCELVEY, Bowling Green
 MARY MCCORMICK, Owensboro

MONA McCOY, Glasgow
 ERIN McGOWEN, Glasgow
 KARMEN McINTOSH, Elton
 RITA McINTOSH, Bowling Green
 MITCHELL McKINNEY, Driestown
 CINDY McMILLAN, Auburn

JODI McNEAR, Winchester
 GLORIA MEADOR, Franklin Run
 SUSAN MEANS, Versailles
 MELVIN MEANY, Louisville
 CAROL MEDLEY, Elizabethtown
 STEPHANIE MEIERS, Bowling Green

— Greg Lovett

PERSONALITY P · R · O · F · I · L · E

Like father, like daughter

Even if Clemette Haskins had chosen to go to the University of Southern California, she could probably be found in the afternoon watching her favorite soap opera, "All My Children."

"I love soap operas," Clemette said. The 5-foot-9-inch freshman was recruited by more than 100 colleges and universities and chosen to play basketball with the Lady Toppers.

She lay curled up on the bed, hugging her pillow. Stuffed animals and Smurfs stood on the shelves next to pictures of her family. She and two friends watched "One Life to Live."

This is how Clemette relaxes. Playing basketball leaves little free time. The 1983 Miss Kentucky Basketball and Athlete of the Year came to Warren Central High School. She feels that basketball is more physically demanding in college than it is in high school.

"A lot of time you think it's worth it," she said. Sometimes she wonders what it would be like if she did not play basketball.

A typical day during basketball season consists of going to class, eating, practicing, eating and studying.

According to Paul Sanderford, Lady Topper head coach, people expect great things of her, especially since she's the daughter of Hilltopper basketball coach Clem Haskins. "I think Clemette does a great job of putting it all in perspective," he said.

"I don't think I'm any better than anyone else," Clemette said. "I know people are always going to compare me to my dad."

Although Clemette enjoys playing basketball and especially likes the closeness of the team, she needs a break every once in awhile. She likes spending time with friends who do not play basketball. "I make time for my social life," she said.

Her father never pressured her to play basketball. He taught her the basics of the game when she was in third grade and let her decide if she wanted to pursue the sport.

DURING a basketball game, Lady Topper coach Paul Sanderford instructs Clemette Haskins. Haskins was named 1983 Miss Kentucky Basketball and Athlete of the Year.

Traveling with the basketball team takes her away from family and school. She has a difficult time adjusting to road trips. "You have to get your studying done in the hotel and on the bus," she said.

Although she lived in Central Hall, Clemette was not a stranger at home. She and her mother have an especially close relationship, she said. When she did spend time with her family, she said she enjoyed a good meal and family conversation.

Clemette will probably major in broadcasting and is thinking about a minor in psychology. "I'd like to be a basketball commentator, be on 'Good Morning America,' something in my major," she said.

Even though she is sometimes pressured, she said she is glad to be playing basketball.

Angie Struck

STEVE MELLOAN, Manfordville
REBECCA MELTON, Owensboro
SHANNON MEREDITH, Louisville
TERRY MILAM, Russellville
MELINDA MISLY, Greensburg
CAROLINE MILLER, Louisville

CYNTHIA JO MILLER, Bowling Green
DWAYNE MILLER, Louisville
JULIE MILLER, Bowling Green
KAYE MILLER, Franklin
LAURA MILLER, Madisonville
LISA MILLER, Caneyville

RHONDA MILLER, Franklin
PAULA MILTON, Louisville
TERESA MILTON, Newburgh, Ind.
AMY MONROE, Allegre
JOELLA MONTGOMERY, Owensboro
FERGUS MOORE, Murray

MARVIN MOORE, Hopkinsville
SHANNON MOORE, Morgantown
KAREN MORRISON, Adairville
ANDREW MOUTARDIER, Owensboro
KEITH MUDD, Sturgis
SCOT MUSIC, Franklin

CINDY NANTZ, Livermore
LITTIA NAPIER, Bowling Green
LORI NAPIER, Camellie
KARIN NASS, Louisville
BARBARA NEAL, Brentwood, Tenn.
BRENDA D. NEALY, Lewisburg

JAMES NELSON, Owensboro
LISA NEWCOMB, Campbellsville
MARK NEWMAN, Greenville
SUSAN NININGER, Louisville
DONNIE NIX, Princeton
RONNIE NIX, Princeton

CYNTHIA NORDLUND, Shepherdsville
REBECCA NORENE, Brownsville
KEVIN NORRIS, Glasgow
DEBRA OAKLEY, Benton
ELIZABETH OSBORNE, Bowling Green
JANNA OWENS, Franklin

SHERYL PALMER, Ellettsville
KATHRYN PAPPAS, Owensboro
VICKI PARIS, Caneyville, Ind.
CHARLOTTE PARR, Louisville
KIMBERLY PARR, Louisville
MARTHA PARROTT, Campbellville

JEFFREY PASCHALL, Hazel
SARA PATTERSON, Upton
JOHN PECK, Versailles
LISA PENICK, Louisville
DONNA PERRY, Lawrenceburg
THOMAS PETERSEN, Bowling Green

Lounge letter

ANXIOUS to compare notes, Joe Murphy, a Canton, Ohio, freshman, writes postcards to friends at Kent State University. Murphy was writing in the Downing University Center during the first week of classes.

SUSAN M. PETERSON, Louisville
SUSIE PETERSON, Loretto
JOE PETETT, Tupper Lake
CHERYL PFAHL, Bowling Green
JILL PINKSTON, Calhoun
KAREN PLUMMER, Evansville, Ind.

SAMUEL POLLARD, Grayville, Ill.
GREGORY POOLE, Henderson
GILBERT POTTER JR., Lewistown
GREG POWELL, Bowling Green
MARSHA PRADA, Louisville
MICHELLE PUCKETT, Glasgow

SUSAN RANDELL, Carmel, Ind.
DIANE RAY, Louisville
MATTHEW READ, Louisville
ROBERT RENDER, Centertown
BOOKER T. RICE, Louisville
AMY RICH, Bowling Green

— Greg Lovett

TAMMY RICHARDS, Brownsville
TERI RICHARDSON, Bowling Green
LAURA RICHESON, Mayfield
JANNA RIDDLE, Louisville
WILLIAM RIDDLE, Woodburn
ELIZABETH RIGGS, Upton

KIMBERLY RITHCIE, Evansville, Ind.
ANTHONY RITTER, Summer Shade
LYNN RIX, Bowling Green
JEFFREY ROACH, Hartford
RACHEL ROACH, Heston
MARGARET ROBERTS, Mequon, Wis.

STEPHEN ROBERTSON, Bardonia
REBECCA RODES, Danville
MARLEY RODGERS, Bowling Green
JAMES ROGERS, Hopkinsville
KATHY ROHLER, Louisville
KIM RUSSELL, Owensboro

Water relief

AFTER cross country practice, Dean Klein, a Sylvania, Ohio, freshman, finds the sprinklers at Smith Stadium a relief. The temperatures had risen into the 90s.

—T.J. Hamilton

PHILIP RYAN, Bowling Green
MATT RYDSON, Elkhart, Ind.
DEE ANN SALVERS, Princeton
KAREN SAMMONS, Elizabethtown
LISA SANFORD, Owensboro
STACIE SANFORD, Lebanon

STEPHANIE SCHALK, Louisville
BOB SCHEIDEGGER, Owensboro
JEANNE SCHLEPERS, Whitesville
JOSEPH SCHNERINGER III, Louisville
LAURILEE SCOTT, Princeton
MELISSA SCOTT, Louisville

STEVE SCOTT, Elizabethtown
KAREN SEGO, Union
FREDERICK SHANKS, Radcliff
EVAN SHAW, Nashville, Tenn.
KNOWLES H. SHAW IV, Louisville
LINDA SHERWOOD, Hendersonville, Tenn.

JAMES SHORT, Franklin, Tenn.
MARQUITA SHUECRAFT, Salem
SARA SHURE, McAllen, Texas
TODD SIDEBOTTOM, Louisville
LYNELLE SIMMONS, Owensboro
DAWN SIMMS, Edgewood

VONDA SIMPSON, Glasgow
LISA SKAGGS, Taylorsville
THERESA SKAGGS, Taylorsville
DEBORAH SKILES, Bowling Green
ANGIE SMITH, Hendersonville, Tenn.

CINDY SMITH, Bowling Green
FRED SMITH, Corbin
LINDA SMITH, Louisville
MELONIE SMITH, Macon, Ga.
SHANNON SMITH, Whites Creek, Tenn.
SHEILA SMITH, Russell Springs

SUSAN SMITH, Bowling Green
MABILYN SNIEL, Beaver Dam
TIMOTHY SNIDER, Bloomfield
KELLEY SPENCER, Louisville
BARRY STAHL, Rockford
WILLIAM STAMBAUGH, Lexington

ELIZABETH STANFIELD, Nashville, Tenn.
KIMBERLY DAWN STAPLES, Glasgow
MICHELLE STEARMAN, Danville
CAROLYN STEELE, Marion
JACQUELINE STEEN, Glasgow
POLLY STEPHENSON, Walton

VICKIE STINNETT, Bowling Green
LANITA STINSON, Scottsville
SHEILA STOCKTON, Morganfield
ERIC STOGNER, Elizabethtown
TOM STONE, Louisville
DARRYL STRODE, Oak Grove

MELANIE STRODE, Fountain Run
ANGELA STRUCK, Louisville
DEBORAH STUNEY, Cool Water, Mich.
GAYLE SUTTON, Jasper, Ind.
HEIDI SWENCK, Burke, Va.
ROBERT TABER, Freshlett

DONNA TARENCE, Bowling Green
DONNA TAYLOR, Central City
SARAH TAYLOR, Hendersonville
LAURA JO THESSEN, Franklin
LISA THOMAS, Peck, Mo.
PATRICK A. THOMAS, Bowling Green

URSULA THOMAS, Louisville
VICTORIA THOMAS, Lexington
GREG THOMPSON, Campbellsville
VICKIE THOMPSON, Edmonon
PAUL THORNDALE, Lexington
ERIC THORNE, Louisville

JACINTA TICHENOR, Calhoun
KIMBERLY TOLIVER, Russellville
GAIL TOMES, Caneyville
SHARON TOMPKINS, Lexington
LEEANNE TOYE, Lexington
KIM TRICE, Madisonville

KAREN TURNER, Louisville
TOMI N. VanCleave, Calhoun
CHRISTOPHER VANDERVER, Sacramento
MARIA VanFLEET, Annandale, Va.
DENISE VINCENT, Graham
TERENA VINCENT, Bowling Green

ANITA VINSON, Cecilia
KELLEY VOIERS, Somerset
BETH WALDROP, Allensville
ROBERT WALKER, Oak Grove
SHARON WALKER, Lexington
SUSAN WALKER, Cordova, Tenn.

MARY LOU WALTERS, Manfordville
THOMAS WALTHALL, Louisville
KELLY WAREHIME, Louisville
ANTHONY WARING, Bowling Green
JAMES WATHEN, Bardonia
JOSEPH WATHEN JR., La Grange

BRAD WATKINS, Bowling Green
DALENA WATKINS, Morgantown
RICHARD WATKINS, Hopkinsville
RICHARD WATT, Bowling Green
SUSAN WATTS, Nashville, Tenn.
CYNTHIA WEAVER, Elizabethtown

JANET WELCH, Livermore
ANGELA WELLS, Ulica
DAYNA WEST, Guthrie
EDWARD WEST, Ramsey
LISA WHALEY, Caneyville
ETHEL WHITE, Russellville

ANGELIA WHITFIELD, Scottsville
MARY WHITFIELD, Madisonville
BLAINE WHITMER, Bowling Green
CHRIS WILDER, Brownsville
ANTHONY WILKERSON, Louisville
KATHY WILLARD, Crestwood

BARBARA WILLIAMS, Louisville
MONICA WILLIAMS, North Chicago, Ill.
REBECCA WILLIAMS, Mount Washington
DORIA WILSON, Henderson
MELISSA WILSON, Tompkinsville
RONNIE WILSON, Russellville

DONNA WINCHELL, Hawesville
JERALD WINSTEAD, Newburgh, Ind.
DIANNE WOLFE, Brownsville
DAVID WOLFF, Fort Mitchell
SUSAN YOUNG, Lewisport
PENNY YOUNT, Shelbyville

Packing problems

"I THINK I brought too much stuff," says Vicki Mulliken, a Fort Wright freshman, as she unpacks boxes of her belongings. Mulliken was moving into Schneider Hall at the beginning of the fall semester.

— Ray Thomas

—John Tayman

the touch of Academics

It was the underlying reason for being at Western: academics.

For some the reason was more apparent than it was for others.

Students spent hours writing papers that would take professors hours to grade. It was all a part of the system.

Three professors traveled to foreign countries after being chosen to participate in the Fulbright Senior Lecture program.

In an effort to help students be better writers, several professors and instructors participated in a weekend workshop.

Some students were able to take a different approach to learning. Nursing students gained career experience through on-the-job training.

No matter what area of study a student was involved in, everyone felt the touch of red.

—John Tayman

Inside:

196 President Donald Zacharias looks at the changes on campus and expresses his views on the future of Western.

202 The industrial engineering and technology department expands by adding a robotics class.

205 Husband-and-wife team William and Dorothy McMahon explain what it's like living and working together.

WHILE waiting for a friend to finish a term paper, Laura Ray, a Louisville senior, studies meteorology. Ray was an agriculture major.

COAL samples are tested for moisture by Pete Plannerstill, a Bowling Green senior. He was working in the lab in Thompson Complex.

—Bobby Rice

O An Optimistic influence

"Change" is the inevitable forecast for Western and its students, according to President Donald Zacharias.

Zacharias spoke with excitement about some of the changes that will occur in the university.

The most obvious change will be in the appointments of a new vice president for academic affairs and new department heads for journalism and English.

"The men who are leaving those positions will be missed and there was some concern about finding the right individuals to replace them," Zacharias said. "But the search committees have had no problems in finding qualified candidates."

Zacharias said he sees the changes as "an opportunity to bring someone in with experience from other places and fresh insights."

"It's often refreshing to have a new leadership style," Zacharias said. "And if we approach the situation with that frame of mind, change can be invigorating."

Other changes in the university will occur because of problems in getting enough funding from the state, Zacharias said.

"One obvious problem in Kentucky and most other states is the lack of funding for education," Zacharias said.

Because of the deficits, Western began a development program three years ago to fill in the monetary gaps.

"We are helped significantly by our alumni," Zacharias said. "They make it possible for us to give more scholarships than we could without them, and they do so much more."

Zacharias said he also believes there will be significant changes in higher education as a whole during the next few years.

"In the long run, there will be a lot of changes in higher education," Zacharias said. "There will be a lot of forces pushing us into a period of new ways of doing things."

The higher education trend in the future will be toward "life-long learning projects," Zacharias said.

"We will be offering schedules and classes that will appeal to adults—professionals and people who didn't get the chance to attend college before," he said. "This will be especially true in large cities."

Zacharias said the student population has declined in the past few years and he expects the average age of students to rise.

"The shortage of students will intensify the competition between schools," Zacharias said, "and because of the competition, it should be a very good time to enter college."

The president said he also believes the changing technology will have to be "explored and monitored in order to help our students to be competitive in their fields."

Zacharias believes the university's faculty should stay informed of what is happening in their particular fields and should also endeavor to do some form of "scholarly work," whenever possible.

Zacharias himself plans to be involved in the changing of the university. Although he was unable to teach a class during the 1983-84 school year, Zacharias said he planned to teach a speech class again next spring, keeping the promise he made when he became president—to teach one three-hour class in speech communications each year.

Zacharias considers the changes that will be happening in the university with optimism. Like the frog with the bright red eyes that sits on the president's desk, Zacharias plans to keep a close watch on everything that happens.

Tami Peerman

Practicing patience

Photos by Bobby Roe

Father knows best. Until her junior year in high school, Sherry Mays had no idea what she wanted to study in college. Then her father urged her to decide upon a career in which she could find enjoyment, help other people, and become self-sufficient—"Like nursing."

Mays, a Hodgenville sophomore, looked into the profession and decided on it as a major.

During her first semester of nursing, Mays volunteered at a nursing home. One of the patients told her that she would make a fine nurse, and for the first time she was sure that nursing was definitely the career choice for her.

"To be appreciated is so important in nursing," she said. "That makes nursing worth-while."

"I was looking for something I could help myself in and help other people," she said. Although nursing is not a high-paying job, this is reward enough.

"A nurse has to have a love of people and dedication to stick with it."

Medical knowledge and skill are important, but nursing also involves people. "I'd say it's 50-50," she said. "We try to meet their needs psychologically as well as physically."

TALKING TO patients is one of Mays' favorite parts of her job. Mays spent a lot of time in her patients' rooms.

Nursing has instilled in Mays a sense of respect for human life, which she applies to her work with patients. Understanding is an important part of coping with patients, she said. A sick person may be lonely or grumpy, and Mays tries to empathize with him.

"Nursing is a lot of teaching patients how to care for themselves," she said. "Respect is just tied into a person so tightly."

Mays said she tries to remain calm when she's at the hospital, although nursing sometimes can be hectic.

"There are times when it's so busy it's hard to enjoy it," she said. During the first semester of her sophomore year, Mays pledged a sorority and became so busy that she did not like nursing. Last semester was easier, and she regained her interest in nursing. She attributes this to experience.

"The more you do, the better you feel about it," she said.

Her fellow nursing students offered much support. Mays said that the nurses in her class were very close, and she hopes she can find such a caring atmosphere in a working situation.

Mays' nursing class worked at Greenview Hospital and the Medical Center on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Patient assignments were distributed at the hospital the night before, and the nursing students made out care plans.

Although crawling out of bed at 6 a.m. was sometimes difficult, Mays reported to the hospital by 8:30 a.m. She met with her instructors for a pre-conference to discuss the plans for the day, and began work at 8:30 a.m. At 3 p.m. she met with her instructor again for a post-conference to evaluate her work.

Patient care was the order of the day. Mays received one to four patients a day, to whom she always took a personal interest, she said.

"I want to be with them and make them feel good," she said. Mays spent much time in her patients' rooms and said, "It's hard to break away."

At the hospital Mays took care of her patients, distributed medication and observed surgery, which she said is "interesting if you have the stomach for it." Nursing students focused on different clinical settings such as a nursing home and surgery. During her second semester Mays worked in obstetrics with newborns and mothers who had just given birth.

"I loved it," she said, so much that she may choose to specialize in obstetrics.

Mays has not ruled out the possibility of becoming a doctor, but she said she wants to be able to quit work and raise a family in the future. Her hospital work has never brought her close to a dying patient, she said, but she thinks she could handle it.

"If the patient can accept it, I can," Mays said. "If you can accept death, it's as natural as being born."

Working at the hospital gave Mays challenges and new experiences. She called giving her first injection, which was administered to a newborn. It was "dramatic experience," she said. But she feels good about herself when she has done something for the first time and has done well.

"You feel like you've accomplished something," she said.

Angie Struck

KNOWLEDGE OF medical files is an important part in Mays' nursing training. Mays, a Hodgenville sophomore, worked at the two Bowling Green hospitals every Tuesday and Thursday.

PART OF Mays' job is filling out patient care plans. Mays worked at Greenview Hospital and the Medical Center as part of her nurses training.

W^{the} Western influence

By always being invited to dinner parties and receptions, Ronald Eckard sometimes felt like the "token American" guest while in Turkey.

Eckard, an associate professor of English, was one of three of Western's professors who were chosen to participate in the Fulbright Senior Lectureship — teaching in foreign countries during the 1983-84 school year.

Eckard taught English as a foreign language at the Middle East University in Ankara, Turkey. James T. Baker, professor of history, taught American studies at private universities, Tam-kang and Fu-Jen, in Taiwan, and Joseph Survant, professor of English, was the first person ever to teach literature on a Fulbright in Malaysia, at the Universiti Sains Malaysia in Penang.

The Fulbright program, initiated in 1946, enables the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between Americans and those of other countries, according to the Fulbright Booklet for 1984-85. Grants are made to qualified U.S. citizens and to other countries for university lecturing, advanced research, graduate studies and other purposes.

Each year the commission publishes a booklet listing the available positions for the upcoming school year by country and discipline. A wide range of disciplines is represented. Approximately 80 grants were available for East and Southeast Asia

(Taiwan and Malaysia) and 50 for the Middle East and North Africa (Turkey). There were eight other lecturers from Kentucky in the Fulbright program last year, with the programs in Western Europe as the most competitive. Eckard, who completed his Fulbright in late May, has observed many religious and cultural differences between nations during his stay. "Ninety percent of the Turks are Moslem, which stresses love and respect for one's fellow human beings,"

One television station is all they have, and it is only aired from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Eckard said. "Open affection is common with hundreds of people in the streets walking arm and arm."

Another interesting difference Eckard recognized was the importance of the family unit in this culture. "If young people have a party, the first people they invite are their parents and grandparents — unheard of in the United States," he said.

One television station is all they have, and it is only aired from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. Last year's installments of Dallas and Falcon Crest were popular shows. Eckard observed that technology has caught up with the East. The rich are anxiously waiting to see the latest movies from the U.S.

Eckard taught three classes, one with 20 students and the others with 15. The university had about 12,000 students and about 1,000 faculty members. METU is known for its engineering, computer science and other technical programs. It is said to be the best university in Turkey, if not in the Middle East, Eckard said.

"The Turks are fully aware that English is the language of international trade and commerce," Eckard said. They also know that their knowledge of the language can help lead them to jobs.

Students must take a test, and if they are not proficient enough in English, they must take a full year of it before enrolling as freshmen.

Eckard worked on learning the language. "The custodians took pity on me. They stopped by the office several times a day to speak simple Turkish with me and to teach me some new words," he said. He felt the

Western's Fulbright Lecturers

Ronald Eckard

Place:
Ankara
Turkey
Institution:
Middle East
University

James Baker

Place:
Taipei
Taiwan
Institution:
Tam-kang
Fu-Jen

Joseph Survant

Place:
Penang
Malaysia
Institution:
Universiti
Sains
Malaysia

Graphic by Beth Hamilton

this illustrated their general friendliness and helpfulness.

Eckard admitted he knew very little about Turkey when he made his selection. He expected his stay to affect what he reads about Turkey and also give him empathy when teaching foreign students here.

Many miles away in Taiwan, James Baker was also experiencing an interesting stay while teaching in China. Baker was on his second Fulbright.

Baker taught an American studies course at two private universities, one Tam-kang and the other Fu-Jen. "I taught basically the same material that I would at home, but of course I had to keep the language simple and speak slowly and clearly," he said. He added that being a native southerner, speaking slowly comes naturally.

Both universities had about 10,000 students, and both were located on the outskirts of Taipei, where Baker lived while in Taiwan.

Baker's biggest problem in teaching was the students' reluctance to talk back. "Once open, they usually flooded me with questions and comments, but opening is tough sometimes," he said.

One problem Baker encountered was the Chinese language. The Chinese have four tones in their language and a slip any place could be a big mistake. "For example," Baker said, "the word for university, used with the wrong set of tones, means flood, big water instead of big school."

Some things are the same though, whether it be in Taiwan or the U.S. When Baker asked a student who just made the 'able tennis team how to say "table tennis" in Chinese, she replied, "We call it ping pong."

Baker asked a student how to say "table tennis" in Chinese; she replied, "ping pong."

All Baker's students were graduates, working on M.A.s in American studies and were between 23 and 33 years old. Tam-kang is the only school in Taiwan that offers an M.A. in American studies.

Baker felt as though he represented America to his students but "right now, since the U.S. broke relations with Taiwan in order to establish them with the Mainland, America is something of a puzzle," he said.

All applicants for Fulbright awards are screened and reviewed on the following criteria: professional qualifications, background and teaching experience, previous grants with preference to those who have not had one, experience abroad with preference to those not having substantial recent experience abroad, and personal qualifications. Knowledge of a foreign language is desirable but not required in most cases.

Eckard intends to apply for another Fulbright, following his experiences in Turkey where people are "friendly, hospitable and genuinely like Americans," he said.

Baker felt that in Taiwan he was seeing American history from a different perspective. He quoted Confucius as saying, "A man who goes over again what he has already learned and gains some new understanding from it is worthy to be a teacher."

Candace Roberts

EDITOR'S NOTE: Information for this story came from correspondence with Ronald Eckard and James Baker.

Herobotics

Illustration by Bobby Roe

Hero is his name — nothing more, just Hero. He can walk, talk, and he can even play a game of tic-tac-toe.

... Welcome to the world of robotics. "And step into my lab," as Dr. Frankenstein would say to his creature.

Hero is a robot, one of several now being studied in the industrial engineering technology department. Along with his talking friend, Rhino, and other mechanical roomies, Hero is there to be examined, manipulated, torn apart and rebuilt again.

"We believe mechanical engineering students need to understand the interface between computers and machines. And basically, robots are machines run by computers. They are a permanent part of our future, and by offering a course in the subject we hope to give the student knowledge that he can use in the workplace," William A. Beard, instructor of the class, said.

Approximately 7,000 robots are in use now in the United States. Beard predicts by the year 1990 at least 100,000 will be used.

The course is designed to meet two objectives. The first, he explained, is to teach the application of robotics, and the second is to discuss the social implications they place on our society. "It's not to teach them how to build a robot, but instead to teach them how to work with one," he said.

Beard traveled throughout the country last summer studying the various types of robots in industries and research laboratories.

With the aid of $35,000 in foundation grants, the program began in the fall semester. "It is just in its introductory phases. We are learning along with the students," Beard said.

"The word robot comes from the Czechoslovakian word, robotika, meaning helper or servant. And that's what they're intended to be.

"Because of our society, we are conditioned to fear them, like Frankenstein. Most people are intrigued or repelled or both," he said. Beard feels that people are afraid of change and of being replaced.

But, he says, "Robots can do the monotonous, dangerous jobs and leave the more challenging ones to humans. Man's greatest asset is his brain, not his brawn."

"Most of them (robots) today," he stated, "have one arm, are deaf, and can't walk. Their main function is to put bolt A into socket B. There are very, very few R2D2s in the world."

Beard feels the semi-skilled laborer will be the most effected. For example, robots are now used in the General Motors Corvette plant to paint the cars. "A man could perform the job, but he has to protect himself against the fumes. But a robot doesn't care what the air is like; he's indifferent."

Because they have human qualities, Beard said people forget that robots can't think or feel. "They're just machines and yet we give them names and personality attributes. Almost everyone loves robots like R2D2 and C3PO; it's almost as if we expect there to be a little man inside. You find yourself wanting to give them a hug," he said.

Programming robots like these that can walk and talk is part of the objective of Western's course. As one of their prime specimens, Rhino politely says, "Hello, my name is Rhino. How are you?" as he slides across the floor. "His vocabulary is quite extensive and we take him with us to schools in the area and community meetings to show him off," Beard said.

Western hopes to continue to build on its program and to coordinate robotics into other departments such as computer science. "There will come a day when no drafting will be done with the pencil and paper; it will be done with computers. And there will be a time when only robots will do certain jobs. We need to keep up with the times and teach skills that are marketable," Beard said.

Lori Medley (7)

— Alan Wiser

There is a saying that opposites attract; sometimes they also complement each other. William and Dorothy McMahon are both professors of English, but that is where their similarities end.

Mrs. McMahon grew up in St. Louis during World War II. It was a dismal time. "We lived under the apprehension that we were going to lose the war," she said. "We were intelligent. There was no money, no men (they were all in the war), no cars and no center of attention for young people. It was a bleak time."

Mrs. McMahon cites three dramatic moments in her life.

IN HER 270 sculpture class, Karen Noland, a Crestwood junior, works on a model figure. She was sculpting in the fine arts center.

Potter College

- Art
- Comm. and Theatre
- English
- Government
- History
- Journalism
- Modern Lang. and Intercultural Studies
- Music
- Philosophy and Religion
- Sociology, Anthropology and Social Work

departments

Beyond 9 to 5

"I was about to graduate from high school when a man in a dark limo on the edge of campus offered me a contract to be a prostitute in St. Louis," she said. "He said, 'Honey, you have the look.'"

Her second dramatic moment came a few years later when Ernest Tubb, then an unknown, offered her a contract to sing with him in the Grand Ole Opry. "I told him I had better fish to fry," she said.

And she did have better fish to fry. She wanted to be an opera singer. Unfortunately, she lost her voice ability when trying to change her vocal range.

Mrs. McMahon left college after her freshman year, because she thought she "knew everything." She came back as a 26-year-old sophomore after her father, hearing the loneliness in her voice, convinced her to finish her education.

It was at the University of Chicago that her third dramatic moment occurred.

Her friend, the president, planted her in a young professor's class as a spy to rate his teaching abilities. She said she didn't like the professor, but he was a good teacher. She dropped some pages off in his office one day and he said, "Miss Phipps, I suppose you know I am interested in you." She replied, "No, I didn't know." She was halfway down the hall when she realized what he had said. She returned to his office, stuck her head in the door, and replied, "But I'll think about it."

The professor was William McMahon and they married a year and a half later, even though he did give her a B in the class. "I got a good typist," Mr. McMahon said. "She's worth a lot."

Mr. McMahon grew up in a small Arkansas town. His mother was born in Bowling Green; McMahon is an ancestor of C. Perry Snell.

"I have six great passions," he said. "Hunting, fishing, books, roses, girls and tennis. They have never changed, but my wife is now the most interesting."

His favorite hobby, next to his wife, is his over-300 rose bushes. He started with four bushes the couple bought while struggling through graduate school. He is now a well-known writer for national rose magazines, and shows his own collection of roses.

continued on page 206

CAROL BROWN
Head/modern languages, intercultural studies

JERRY D. CARDWELL
Head/sociology, anthropology, social work

JAMES FLYNN
Head/English

WARD HELLSTROM
Dean/Potter College

JOHN LONG
Act. dept. Head/philosophy, religion

RONALD NASH
Head/philosophy, religion

RICHARD TROUTMAN
Head/history

DAVID WHITAKER
Head/journalism,
Dir./university publications

9 to 5

cont.

Mr. McMahon teaches American literature, and Mrs. McMahon teaches British literature.

One of his greatest moments was when a group of his students nominated him for the college teacher award. He was surprised to receive the nomination, since he considers himself a conservative teacher and feels students often favor more liberal teachers. "They were willing to forgive me," he said.

As a couple, the McMahons have different interests. While she enjoys hunting and fishing with him (they both insist she is a better shot), she also enjoys raising cattle. He hates it because it is "too much work."

While some of their hobbies are different, their ideas of life also vary. She is a Democrat and "cares more about the poor," and he is Republican and "cares more about culture."

"He is a golden boy," she said. "Nothing bad has ever happened in his life. The result is that he can think as a realist."

He sees pop music as trash. She claims she could dance in the gym all night long.

"Young people can gain confidence and get over their inhibitions by dancing," she said.

"You don't have a right to have inhibitions," he said. "The only place you should cut loose is in your private life. You should be restrained in public, and as unrestrained as you want in your love life."

"The main mistake of the age in which we live is that there is not enough attention paid to things that will endure, i.e., books, paintings, classical music. People who are experts in taste usually know they are experts."

Mrs. McMahon feels someone becomes an expert from a whole of experience, after reaching through all walks of life. "Life is suffering, but life is also beautiful," she said.

"I don't accept any bit of that," Mr. McMahon said.

"We are each other's best friend and worst critic," she said. "This causes very heated debates."

Mr. McMahon said, "When Linda Ronstadt took a turn away from pop music and took a classical approach, she finally saw the light."

Mrs. McMahon said, "Linda Ronstadt turned down Jerry Brown because she knew that to meet the right man at the right time, under the right circumstances and to know he loves you and yourself alone, and when she decided she was going to hold out for that — that is when she saw the light."

The McMahons may have different ideas, but both are serious and enthusiastic about their profession.

The couple has been at Western for the past 20 years. "We are now getting students that are children from our first students," Mrs. McMahon said.

Both feel the teaching certification requirements need to be stricter in all levels of education. Mrs. McMahon feels that methods may have been put too far ahead of content.

"Many teachers' attitude is, 'I don't know anything to teach, but I certainly know how to teach it,'" she said. "Teachers should know subject matter well, be able to share insight with enthusiasm and should be tested to help him or her keep his confidence in his field."

"Unfortunately, I don't

"WE ARE each other's best friend and worst critic," Dorothy McMahon, professor of English, said. She and her husband, William, have both taught at Western for 20 years.

believe culture can afford to pay teachers what they are worth. You must want to be a teacher," she said.

They both enjoy teaching at Western, but feel it is not above change.

"Western is probably the best state school in Kentucky," Mr. McMahon said. "But even so, it is not serious about books, arts or ideas. The administration, teachers and students are all seriously negligent."

"We both know we are good teachers," Mrs. McMahon said. "The day we aren't or the day we lose our enthusiasm is the day we will quit."

The McMahon marriage has endured, despite their different ideas and beliefs. "We have enlarged each other," Mrs. McMahon said. "I understand, admire and respect his views and he does the same with me."

Have their different views affected their beliefs? "Not even slightly," Mr. McMahon said.

Kim Wilkerson

— Tony Kines

THOMAS BALDWIN
Prof./German
STEVEN BARKER
Inst./communication, theater
LOUIS BECK
Assoc. prof./sociology
ROBERT BLANN
Assoc. prof./journalism
MARK BROOKS
Inst./communication, theater
JAMES BROWN
Prof./theater

CHARLES BUSSEY
Assoc. prof./history
FAYE CARROLL
Prof./government
RAYMOND CRAVENS
Prof./government
HELEN CROCKER
Assoc. prof./history
NANCY DAVIS
Prof./English
GEORGE DILLINGHAM
Assoc. prof./history

ANN FIELDS
Asst. prof./English
LESLIE FLEENOR
Inst./English
CHARLES FORRESTER
Prof./art
JOSEPH GLASER
Prof./English
ANN GOETTING
Assoc. prof./sociology
CHARLES GUTHRIE
Assoc. prof./English

ANNA JO JOHNSON
Inst./English
BARBARA JOHNSON
Asst. prof./communication, theater
JOAN KRENZIN
Assoc. prof./sociology
CORY LASH
Assoc. prof./communication, theater
WILLIAM LANE
Prof./philosophy, religion
ROBERT MARTIN
Assoc. prof./modern languages, intercultural studies

JIM MILLER
Prof./modern languages, intercultural studies
GRETCHEN NIVA
Assoc. prof./English
DENNIS OKHOLM
Inst./philosophy, religion
KAREN PELZ
Assoc. prof./English
FRANCES PERDUE
Inst./English
STEVE PROBUS
Prof./communication, theater

EVAN RUDOLPH
Assoc. prof./communication, theater
JACK SCHOCK
Assoc. prof./anthropology
JANET SCHWARZKOPF
Assoc. prof./English
JUNE SINCLAIR
Inst./English
JIM SPICELAND
Assoc. prof./philosophy
WALTER STOMPS
Prof./art

CRAIG TAYLOR
Asst. prof./sociology
TERRY VANDER HEYDEN
Inst./journalism
RON VEENKER
Prof./religion
ARVIN VOS
Prof./philosophy
BART WHITE
Asst. prof./communication, theater
ROBERT WURSTER
Assoc. prof./English

Beneficial experiments

Because of his dedication to his work, Thomas Coohill decided to move within walking distance of his laboratory in the north wing of Thompson Complex.

"I moved from living south of town to where I now live a half a block away from campus. I decided that if I was going to spend my life in this building, I didn't want to spend my life driving to and from it," he said.

Coohill's many hours of dedication and hard work may have paid off. He has found that a food preservative could be a possible cure for herpes.

Coohill, a physics and biology professor, first heard of the food preservative, butylated hydroxytoluene (BHT) when he was invited to spend a year at Penn State in 1978. While there, a group of scientists were working with BHT as a potential treatment for herpes.

"We did a few minor experiments with BHT while I was there. They showed that if you put this chemical on a topical lesion, a person would get a less severe case of herpes," he said. "It occurred to me that a better way to use BHT would be to take it orally so that it would go to all parts of the body, and perhaps it would keep people from getting the infection in the first place."

Coohill was not the first to try this experiment. Others had tried the experiment and failed, and Coohill believes this was because they used the wrong model. He felt that the best model to use would be rabbits.

"You infect the eye of the rabbit with herpes and therefore you can see the lesion very clearly, without having to kill the rabbit," he said.

Blaine Ferrell, an associate professor of biology, assisted him with the experiments. The two are so convinced of the cure that they applied for a patent on the idea. If their plan to use BHT orally is approved, the royalties will go to Western, Ferrell and Coohill.

"Originally, the funds for the experiment came out of our own pockets, but after the original success, the department of biology and Western contributed some funds to allow us to continue. We now have a federal grant from the National Institute of Health," Coohill said.

Coohill first came to Western in 1972 for a joint appointment in the departments of physics and biology. He received his undergraduate degree at the University of Toronto and his doctorate in biophysics at Penn State.

"My lifelong work has been the effects of light and biological systems. I've worked with a kinds of things such as small animals, sunshine, and cells and human viruses. This will continue to be the main thrust of my work for some time to come," Coohill said.

When Coohill first came to Western, he received a grant from the Food and Drug Administration through the Bureau of Radiological Health.

"They are largely responsible for the facilities I have, along with some help from Western," Coohill said.

WORKING IN HIS LAB. Thomas Coohill, professor of physics and biology, dilutes the herpes virus for his experiment. He worked on the project with Blaine Ferrell, associate professor of biology.

—Kevin Egan

W. HENRY BAUGHMAN
Coordinator/emergency care instruction

LAURENCE BOUCHER
Head/chemistry

WILLIAM BUCKMAN
Head/physics, astronomy

ROBERT BUEKER
Head/mathematics

J. DAVID DUNN
Head/health, safety

LYNN GREELEY
Asst. dean/Ogden College

MARY HAZZARD
Head/nursing

ROBERT HOYT
Act. Dir./University Honors Program, prof./biology

LUTHER HUGHES JR.
Head/agriculture

JEFF JENKINS
Head/biology

RUBY MEADOR
Head/allied health

BOYCE TATE
Head/industrial, engineering technology

Ogden College

experiments cont.

We now have a facility for studying the effects of light that is probably as good as you'll find in the southeast. We have some very sophisticated equipment," Coohill said.

Coohill and Ferrell had been working on their herpes experiment for about a year. But they weren't working on their experiment alone. Students spent a lot of time working with them.

Another important factor of the experiment is that it has brought out Western's name. A lot of people have heard of the school because of the experiment and because of a biology newsletter of which Coohill is editor.

Coohill said that he enjoys working with students more than any other aspect of his job.

"Research itself is not enough for me. I have to have students working with me. Students at Western are very nice to work with and I really enjoy being around them," Coohill said.

He feels that the students are part of his extended family. He feels so close to his students that he sometimes calls them by the names of his children. And travel is never a problem for Coohill, since former students are located all over the country and he always has a place to stay.

Coohill said that while finding a treatment for herpes will bring him great satisfaction, he enjoys doing experiments with sunlight the most.

"I can see myself spending an awful lot of time in the future working on sunlight. I'm also at a strange stage in my life when I am thinking about what I'll be doing for the next 10 years. It may be the sunlight and it may be something I haven't even thought of yet. I just know that I plan to be working for as long as I'm still kicking."

Jennifer Hatfield

A DROP OF herpes virus is placed in laboratory rabbit's eye. Rabbits are used in order to see the lesion clearly.

—Kevin Egan

S. REZA AHIAN
Prof./geography
DON BAILEY
Prof./biology
RAY BIGGERSTAFF
Assoc. prof./health, safety
HELEN BROWN
Asst. prof./nursing
PANSY BRUNSON
Inst./mathematics
ARTHUR BUSH
Assoc. prof./industrial engineering technology

JO BYRD
Inst./health, safety
LARRY BYRD
Assoc. prof./chemistry
KAY CARR
Assoc. prof./nursing
JOHN CHAMBERLIN
Assoc. prof./chemistry
KAREN COMPTON
Inst./allied health
BEVERLY COOK
Asst. prof./nursing

STAN COOKE
Prof./communication disorders
FAROUK DARWEEH
Assoc. prof./industrial engineering technology
BETTY DETWILER
Prof./mathematics
RONALD DILAMARTER
Prof./geography, geology
LYNN DONNELLY
Inst./allied health
ORVILLE DOTSON
Assoc. prof./agriculture

WANDEL DYE
Asst. prof./industrial engineering technology
ROBERT EVERSOLL
Assoc. prof./industrial engineering technology
OSBURN FLENER
Asst. prof./mathematics
SCOTT FORD
Assoc. prof./biology
JANICE GIBSON
Asst. prof./nursing
LARRY GLEASON
Prof./biology

VIRGINIA HANKS
Asst. prof./mathematics
CAROLYN HARDCASTLE
Inst./mathematics
EDWARD HEIN
Prof./industrial engineering technology
PATRICIA HOOPER
Asst. prof./mathematics
MARTIN HOUSTON
Prof./biology
DOUGLAS HUMPHREY
Prof./physics, astronomy

MARY HUMPHREY
Inst./mathematics
NORMAN HUNTER
Prof./chemistry
RONNA HUNTER
Inst./allied health
STEPHEN JACOBS
Asst. prof./mathematics
RAY JOHNSON
Prof./agriculture
ELIZABETH JONES
Asst. prof./nursing

SUSAN JONES
Assoc. prof./nursing
WILBURN JONES
Prof./mathematics
ROBERT KRENZIN
Asst. prof./mathematics
BARBARA LEE-ROBINSON
Asst. prof./nursing
HOWARD LEEPER
Asst. prof./industrial engineering technology
HOWARD LOWREY
Asst. prof./industrial engineering technology

JAMES MARTIN
Asst. prof./agriculture
WILLIAM McPHAIL
Asst. prof./industrial engineering technology
GREGORY MILLS
Asst. prof./industrial engineering technology
CLETUS MITCHELL
Assoc. prof./agriculture
GEORGE NIVA
Assoc. prof./health, safety
KELLY NUCKOLS
Inst./industrial engineering technology

EDWIN PARKS
Asst. prof./allied health
EARL PEARSON
Assoc. prof./chemistry
FRANK PITTMAN
Prof./industrial engineering technology
RUDOLPH PRINS
Prof./biology
HUGH PUCKETT
Prof./biology
LINDA PULSINELLI
Asst. prof./mathematics

NANCY RASCOE
Asst. prof./nursing
GEORGE ROBERTS
Assoc. prof./industrial engineering technology
ROBERT SCHNEIDER
Prof./agriculture
RONALD SEEGER
Prof./geology, geophysics
LOWELL SHANK
Prof./chemistry
REBECCA STAMPER
Inst./mathematics

BARBARA STRANDE
Asst. prof./nursing
NORMAN TOMAZIC
Assoc. prof./industrial engineering technology
MICHAEL TRAPASSO
Asst. prof./geography, geology
MARTHA WATSON
Prof./mathematics
DONALD WENDT
Prof./industrial engineering technology
DALLAS WHEAT
Asst. prof./mathematics

BONNIE WILLIAMS
Inst./nursing
DEBORAH WILLIAMS
Inst./nursing
GORDON WILSON, JR.
Prof./chemistry
JAMES WORTHINGTON
Prof./agriculture
ALAN YUNGBLUTH
Prof./biology

College of Business Administration

- Accounting
- Business-Distributive
- Education and Office Administration
- Economics
- Finance and Quantitative Business Analysis
- Management and Marketing

departments

Money talks

If you're walking through the corridors of Grise Hall and hear someone shout, "Right on the money!" it's a sure bet that Drew Brahós is nearby.

The instructor, who teaches quantitative business analysis and information systems, has grown accustomed to the greeting from his business students.

Brahós fills the hours after class with writing, producing and hosting four business news programs on local radio stations.

"Right on the Money" airs on WDNS-FM each evening, Monday through Friday, and is most popular with students, Brahós said.

"I'm not a carnival-barker for the show and I don't survey classes to see who's listening, but the reaction has been very positive," he said.

The 10-minute program gives helpful hints to 18-to-30-year-old listeners about everyday business topics such as changes in the Bowling Green housing market and restaurant industry.

Brahós hosts similar programs

daily on WKCT and WKYU-FM.

"Simple Interest" on WKYU each Friday features special guests from WKU's business department and from the Bowling Green business community. It has a question-and-answer format.

"Afternoon Business Watch" and "Saturday Business Watch" on WKCT analyze business and economic trends and examine the stock market. Each of these shows is geared to the over-30 crowd.

Brahós said the programming of "Right on the Money" presents a special challenge since it is broadcast on "D98," a rock station.

"Your idea must come across to the listener quickly — within 90 seconds," he said.

The Chicago native, who came to Western in November 1983, thought Bowling Green needed informative business programs like those offered on some Chicago stations.

He sent proposals to each local station's general manager.

"They were all very receptive to the idea," he said.

Brahós was given the go-ahead to develop formats for four programs.

"The biggest challenge is developing four different audiences," he said. "It takes some shuffling, but I feel I've gotten better and better."

"With my academic background, I think I'm prepared for the shows. They don't require hours of research. I can develop a format in an hour," he said.

He holds graduate degrees from Duke University and Notre Dame, and was an assistant speech and debate coach for the Fighting Irish.

"I've always been interested in speech and radio broadcasting," he said.

Brahós thinks the programs have been successful because of their originality. He gives the public useful, localized information for everyday business needs — unlike syndicated programs based in distant cities.

continued on page 21

IN THE data processing lab in Grise Hall, a student works at a computer terminal.

MARVIN ALBIN
Interim head/finance, quantitative business analysis

ROBERT NELSON
Dean/business administration

R. J. OPPITZ
Asst. dean/business administration

HOLLIE SHARPE
Head/administrative office systems

J. J. SLOAN
Dir./academic computing,
research services

College of Business Administration

— Alan Warren

talks

"I don't use everything off the Associated Press wire or out of the Wall Street Journal," he said.

Brahos said Western students and Bowling Green residents are surprisingly informed about the

WHEN Brahos isn't teaching quantitative business analysis or information systems, he is broadcasting his radio show, "Right on the Money," on WDNS-FM. Brahos also airs shows on three other stations.

cont.

economy and current business trends.

"We have a very astute audience here," he said. "The knowledge of the market and economy is tremendous — as good as Chicago."

Although Brahos is enthusiastic about his "moonlight career," he keeps it in perspective and makes certain there is no conflict with teaching.

"Teaching is my first priority," he said. "Even though I take the shows seriously, if you begin to take yourself too seriously, it can begin to affect you personally."

Brahos, in his mid-20s, won't rule out a career in radio broadcasting, however.

"It's very much a personal interest," he said. "Hopefully it can develop into something in the future."

Susan Stinson Harmon

ALTHOUGH Drew Brahos enjoys broadcasting, his top priority is teaching. Brahos, who came here in November, teaches in the business department.

— Alan Warren

RICHARD ALDRIDGE
Asst. prof./accounting
ANDREW BRAHOS
Inst./finance, quantitative business analysis
ROBERT BRETZ
Assoc. prof./finance, quantitative business analysis
RICHARD CANTRELL
Assoc. prof./economics
FREDERICK CLARK
Asst. prof./accounting
WILLIAM DAVIS
Assoc. prof./economics

FRANK HOLLENBECK
Prof./economics
MARY HOLMAN
Asst. prof./administrative office systems
PEGGY KECK
Prof./administrative office systems
VERNON MARTIN
Prof./government
FRANK NEUBER
Prof./government
JANET PALMER
Asst. prof./administrative office systems

KAREN PICKERILL
Asst. prof./economics
ROBERT PULSINELLI
Assoc. prof./economics
CHUNG-WOOK RHEE
Inst./finance, quantitative business analysis
KENNETH UTLEY
Assoc. prof./administrative office systems
JOE UVEGES
Prof./government

A two-day retreat at Lake Malone gives teachers a chance to experience a

Role reversal

Photos by Mike Collins

While sprawled across the bed, Rod McCurry, biology instructor, struggled with his homework assignment.

Across the room, Dr. Sam McFarland, psychology professor, puzzled over the blank screen of a word processor, tried to type out his assignment. "I'm still stuck on the first sentence," he said.

McCurry and McFarland were two of 26 teachers who traveled to Lake Malone Inn in early October to learn how to teach their students to write better.

As part of the two-day session, teachers received a homework assignment — a 200-word paper describing a portrait.

"We wanted to put the participants in the position of their students and of facing something new out of their field," Virginia Ness-Hatlen, who led the seminar along with her husband, Burton Hatlen, said.

Ness-Hatlen and Hatlen, both English professors at the University of Maine, led the teachers through a series of seminar-type sessions on new writing techniques and on generating ideas for a paper.

The workshop was just one program offered by the Writing and Thinking Across the Curriculum Task Force headed by James Flynn, English department head.

The task force, he said, was interested in seeing some changes in the general education requirements of writing courses.

"The discipline is irrelevant," Dr. Mark Lowry, associate professor of geography and geology, said. "All students, regardless of their areas of study, need to have mastered good writing."

"The assumption for a long time was that good students knew how to write. A lot of faculty in a lot of different fields realized that wasn't true," Hatlen said.

To help students learn to write, instructors need to teach students how to generate ideas, Hatlen said.

Looping — a technique of free association, and free-writing — writing anything that comes to mind — are two ways to help. Through looping and free-writing, students can get a lot of ideas, then choose the good ones for their papers, Hatlen said.

"It is good to see so much concern from many different areas about the quality of writing in our school," Ginny Lehmenkuler, associate professor of nursing, said.

Mary Meehan

A WORD PROCESSOR helps Sam McFarland, psychology professor, complete his writing assignment. Rodney McCurry, biology instructor, and Margaret Howe, philosophy and religion professor, stopped by for support.

ART IS THE TOPIC of this discussion led by Virginia Ness-Hatlen, second on the left. She and her husband, Burton, both professors of English at the University of Maine, conducted the two-day conference at Lake Malone Inn.

LAKE MALONE, in Logan County, provides a scenic view for Ginny Lehmenkuler, nursing instructor, and Rodney McCurry, biology instructor, during the curriculum task force seminar. The two instructors were talking during a break in the conference.

College of Education

- Home Economics and Family Living
- Military Science
- Physical Ed. and Rec.
- Psychology
- Teacher Education
- Educational Leadership
- Educational Services

departments

Pursuing excellence

She sat in her office surrounded by mementos of her past and of her former students. Framed pictures hung on the wall, and stuffed animals crowded the shelves. An observer could tell that each item had a story behind it.

In only a matter of minutes, two or three students came into "Miss V's" office — to borrow something, ask about a class, or just say hello.

"I love the open-door policy we've established here at Western," she said. "I really don't mind students just dropping in. I like to spend a lot of time with my students."

"Miss V" is Jo Verner, an assistant professor in the recreation department of physical education and recreation.

"I love people," she said. "I wanted a field where I could serve people and help them enjoy their leisure time."

Verner has been involved in recreation for over 25 years.

She entered Virginia Commonwealth University after high school. After receiving her degree in recreation, Verner spent 11 years working with the Girls' Club. She held positions in Schenectady, N.Y., Valdosta, Ga., and her hometown of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Verner said she had the opportunity to move into an executive position, but feared "being stuck behind a desk."

Verner received her master's degree in 1972 at Western and has been teaching here since.

Throughout her career, Verner's major emphasis has been in therapeutic medicine — working with the blind, aged, handicapped and disadvantaged.

While putting in an 8-4 day, Verner finds time to read, watch television, go to movies, and play bridge. She also attends as many Western sporting events as possible.

"I feel that if I have a student in class, I should be there to show my support," she said.

As the Area-5 coordinator, Verner is also highly involved in the Special Olympics.

"Special Olympics is the frosting on the cake for me," she said. "I love teaching, but the icing is with the Special Olympics."

continued on page 220

BEFORE HE continues sewing, Thomas Turner, a Campbellsville senior, pins pants. He was working on a project for his 130 clothing class.

RONALD ADAMS
Dir./educational research

KENNETH BRENNER
Assoc. dean/education

CURTIS ENGLEBRIGHT
Head/teacher education

WILLIAM FLOYD
Head/home economics, family living

WILLIAM KUMMER
Coordinator/recreation curriculum

BURCH OGLESBY
Head/physical education, recreation

JACK NEEL
Dir./field services

ROGER PANKRATZ
Asst. dean/education

DONALD RITTER
Coordinator/elementary education

NANCY RUSSELL
Coordinator/library instruction

J. T. SANDEFUR
Dean/education

ROBERT SMITH
Coordinator/library media education

— Alan Warren

DAVID WATTS
Dir./teacher adm., cert., student teaching

JOHN VOKURKA
Coordinator/exceptional child education

WILLIAM TRAUGOTT
Head/educational leadership

College of Education

excellence cont.

DURING a recreation class, Jo Verner explains an assignment to a student. Verner has taught at Western for 12 years.

IN HER OFFICE, Jo Verner shares a laugh with Carol Kraemer, a Louisville senior. Verner had an open-door policy with students.

Verner said that Western welcomes 10 counties to the Special Olympics, and she is amazed with the support Western and its students offer.

Verner herself has had a spinal disfunction since birth, and had a foot amputated last year. She said she does not feel like it has affected her life that much though.

"My parents brought me up to think that I could do anything I wanted to," she said. "And I do."

Verner's dedicated work and deep interest in her profession led her to being named Woman of the Year by Gamma Sigma Sigma National Service Sorority and receiving the Fellow Award last year.

Verner emphasized the closeness she tries to achieve with her students.

"We do a lot of hugging around here," she said. Valerie Jircitano, a Niagara Falls, N.Y. junior, said, "When they made Miss V, they broke the mold."

Linda Sherwood

— T. J. Hamilton

JOSEPH CANGEMI
Prof./psychology
DAVID CANNON
Asst. prof./military science
JEFFERSON CASKEY
Prof./teacher education
WILLIAM CAVIN
Asst. prof./military science
DWIGHT CLINE
Assoc. prof./educational leadership

PHIL CONSTANS
Prof./educational leadership
F. CORYDON CROOKS
Assoc. prof./teacher education
WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM
Prof./psychology
LOU EHRCKE
Prof./home economics, family living
BETTY FULWOOD
Assoc. prof./home economics, family living

DORINE GEESLIN
Prof./teacher education
VERA GUTHRIE
Prof./teacher education
JACKIE HAMILTON
Asst. prof./military science
DELBERT HAYDEN
Prof./home economics, family living
JAMES HICKS
Prof./teacher education

RETA HICKS
Prof./teacher education
JUANITA HIRE
Assoc. prof./teacher education
MARTHA JENKINS
Prof./home economics, family living
JAMES JOHNSON
Prof./teacher education, Asst. dean/extended campus program
LEWIS McCARTER
Inst./military science

WILLIAM MEADORS
Prof./physical education
EULA MONROE
Assoc. prof./teacher education
VIRGINIA MUTCHLER
Assoc. prof./teacher education
FOREST RAMSEY II
Asst. prof./military science
HARRY ROBE
Prof./psychology

JOHN PAYNE
Asst. prof./military science
LEO PICKETT
Asst. prof./military science
RETTA POE
Assoc. prof./psychology
JOYCE RASDALL
Asst. prof./home economics, family living
CLYDE ROARK
Supply sergeant/military science

RAY ROSE
Asst. prof./physical education
ROBERT SCHRADER
Prof./educational leadership
DAVID SHANNON
Coordinator/school administration programs
VERNON SHEELEY
Prof./educational leadership
IMOGENE SIMPSON
Prof./library media education

ROBERT SIMPSON
Prof./psychology
FRED STICKLE
Asst. prof./psychology
JAMES TAYLOR
Inst./military science
SARA TAYLOR
Assoc. prof./teacher education
EVELYN THURMAN
Inst./teacher education

RICHARD WAX
Asst. prof./military science
JOHN WEAVER
Prof./military science
LARRY WHITE
Chief inst./military science
JOYCE WILDER
Inst./psychology

Administration, Faculty and Staff Making the connections

Some days she is literally "on the phone" for hours.

She is Geneva Ray, Western's campus switchboard operator. She has held that position for nine years and has every extension in Wetherby memorized, along with most of the other administrative and department office numbers.

There are 10 lines coming in to WKU. There are four lines for campus use, four outside lines coming in, plus two, two-way lines which Ray can use to call out on.

Ray answers all calls coming into Western except those calls dialled directly to a department. At times all 10 lines are blinking, and the phone on her desk, which is the house phone for that floor, is ringing.

Somehow she manages to answer each line and give the callers information without anyone having to wait very long for the service they desire.

Her job as campus operator consists of taking all incoming calls requesting information concerning student and faculty phone numbers. At times she gets some unusual requests, such as a caller wanting to know what John's number is. "You know," they say, "John who lives in PFT." She quickly informs them that she cannot give them a student's number without his last name, and hangs up.

"I don't have time to listen to how cute John is or what room he lives in," Ray said.

Besides answering the switchboard, Ray fills the positions of personnel clerk, receptionist, and, perhaps most frequently, "floor counselor."

"The girls in the offices here seem to come to me with their problems for some reason," Ray said. "I'm their shoulder to cry on."

Although she may not be up and down at her job, definitely moves about — one corner of the desk to look a number, to the other corner to answer the house phone. repeats these movements almost continuously for hours.

There are papers and numbers on them lying all over her desk, plus a book with numbers listed in it of all students.

She makes the job look as she talks between calls, the time pushing buttons and giving out numbers without even looking them up.

"Most caller I have are vice, but there have been times when some of the students get kind of smart with me," Ray said. "Some students slam the phone down in my ear and never say thank you or anything. This makes me mad, especially when five or six lines are blinking at the same time and I'm trying to answer them as quickly as I can."

continued on page 224

AS A PART of the wellness program, Mike Sharpe, head of administrative office services, stretches out during an aerobics class. The class was for faculty and staff only.

—Rick Musacchio

SUSAN ADAMS
Project dir./talent project
CHARLES ANDERSON
Assoc. dean/academic services, Dir./media services
RONALD BECK
Asst. dean/student affairs, Dir./university centers
PAUL BUNCH
Dir./public safety

CHERYL CHAMBLESS
Dir./admissions
CARL CHELF
Dean/public services, continuing education
BUDDY CHILDRESS
Dir./university stores
CHANDRA CHRISTIAN
Asst. programmer/university center

LOUIS COOK
Dir./food services
PAUL COOK
Asst. to the president/resources management, Dir./budget
GLEN CRUMB
Dir./sponsored programs
JAMES DAVIS
Vice president/academic affairs

MARJORIE DYE
Coordinator/student employment
BILL EDWARDS
Head/athletic trainer
FREIDA EGLETON
Coordinator/orientation, special projects
NORMAN EHRESMAN
Head/educational services

CHARLES EISON
Asst. dir./sponsored programs
JIMMY FEIX
Head football coach
JOHN FOE
Dir./institutional research
CECILE GARMON
Dir./special services

DEE GIBSON
Dir./community affairs, special events
JAMES GIBSON
Admissions counselor
DAVID GORDON
Staff asst./Downing University Center
ELMER GRAY
Dean/graduate college

RILEY HANDY
Head/library special collections
THOMAS HARMON
Accounts payable supervisor
CLEM HASKINS
Head basketball coach
PATTY HAYDEN
Asst. dir./housing

FRED HENSLEY
Dir./public information
JOHN HOLDER
Staff asst./student financial aid
STEPHEN HOUSE
Registrar
LAWRENCE HOWARD JR.
Dir./purchasing

CAROLE JACKSON
Producer/WKYU-FM
SALLY KOENIG
Head/library public services
OWEN LAWSON
Admin./physical plant
DONNIE McFARLAND
Asst. basketball coach

Administration Faculty and Staff

JOHN MINTON
Vice president/student affairs
WALLACE NAVE
Dir./independent study
JOHN OLDHAM
Dir./athletics
JOHN OSBORNE
Dir./housing

JUANITA PARK
Asst. prof./public service, continuing education
JOHN PETERSON
Asst. vice president/academic affairs
LEE ROBERTSON
Dir./alumni affairs
A. FAYE ROBINSON
Assoc. vice president/academic affairs

N. ALICE ROWE
Dir./developmental studies
MARY SAMPLE
Executive secretary-treasurer/College Heights Foundation
JAMES SANDERS
Assoc. dir./media services
ANN SIMS
Accountant/student financial aid

J. BARRY STEEN
Pharmacist/health services
LEE WATKINS
Dir./student financial aid
EARL WASSON
Dir./library services, Asst. dean/academic services
GARY WEST
Executive Dir./Hilltopper Hundred Club

SUSAN WEST
Admissions counselor
JERRY WILDER
Dir./CAP Center
DAVID WILKINSON
Station manager/WKYU-FM

Connections

cont.

"Although I'm satisfied with my job, there are times when I think I can't stand it another day," Ray said. "Those days are when the switchboard seems to blink and that phone seems to ring continuously."

When Ray is at home, she doesn't talk on the phone much and, not unsurprisingly, has an unlisted phone number.

"If I didn't have an unlisted

ON THE GROUND floor of Wetherby Administration Building, Geneva Ray, campus operator, handles calls from 10 incoming lines. Ray has been the operator for nine years.

number those here on campus who know me would be calling me at home for information when the switchboard closed," Ray said.

Ray, 37, who is a mother of four, wishes at times there were more ahead for her than just a future as campus operator.

"Someday I would like to take some classes and start a new career. But for now I am content being campus operator," Ray said as the phone rang.

"... Business office, may I help you?" ... ring ... "2653 ..."

"Western, this is Western Kentucky University ..."

Key Salter

Honored mentionables

While other campuses spend years working to establish a chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, three intense months were all it took to bring the society here.

Phi Kappa Phi, a major national honor society, arrived on campus last spring, preparing to recognize both students and faculty for outstanding academic achievement.

Albert Peterson, the society's first president and a professor of geography, said the sole criterion for admission was a minimum grade-point average of 3.8.

"There are other organizations that look at other elements," he said. "The problem's when you start getting into whether the student is involved with other elements of the university is that all kinds of value judgments come into play. We avoid all that."

As a member of the eligibility committee, Carol Crowe-Carraco, a history professor, said, "I think in a sense that that is the fair thing. Who am I to say what good moral character is?"

Robert Hoyt, Phi Kappa Phi's secretary-treasurer and a biology professor, said juniors and seniors must have a 3.8 grade-point average to be eligible. Graduate students must have a 3.8 in both graduate and undergraduate work.

Hoyt said the first group of student initiates, invited from all fields of study, were installed in the spring, joining the 21 faculty members who were installed as charter members last year.

There was some interest in establishing a charter some years ago, Hoyt said, but the movement never got going until President Donald Zacharias, himself a Phi Kappa Phi member, took the initiative.

"He was the central driving force that got this renewed interest," Hoyt said. "He felt we needed (a national honor society) that was open to everyone campus-wide."

"I'm just real proud of Western's being awarded this national honor society and that the administration was so supportive."

Hoyt spent several months coordinating the establishment of the society while he was an intern in the office of academic affairs last year. He said the process of application was a two-step procedure.

Once the initial permission to apply was granted, Hoyt said the second step was to show that the "philosophy of the institution was directed toward high academic ideals."

Hoyt prepared a 30-page document detailing the percentage of women and minority faculty members, the percentage of faculty with terminal degrees, faculty publications, and academic support areas, such as the size of the library and the Kentucky Building.

"They wanted to know if we were a well-rounded institution."

Hoyt said he was able to concentrate his efforts into establishing the character, which accounted for the low turnaround time between application and acceptance.

With the character established and the charter members installed, Petersen began anticipating the student's reactions to the first letters of invitation, to be delivered in the spring.

"I really felt honored at Louisiana State University when I got the letter," he said. "It really surprised me. I was married and had two kids. I was not one to get involved in student activities."

Crowe-Carraco, who was initiated at the University of Georgia, said, "It's not like a social sorority or fraternity, but it sure looks good on your resume."

Hoyt said, "We're dealing with a limited clientele. There are only 100 students on the eligibility list."

He said other chapters experience a 55-90 percent acceptance rate on the invitations.

"We're just crossing our fingers here that the students will perceive it as a distinct scholastic honor."

"It's an extreme, extreme honor. I really think Western has done a positive thing here."

Mark Walden

PHI KAPPA PHI — Front row: Jerry Rust, Albert Peterson, Carol Crowe-Carraco, James Becker, David Wilkinson. Second row: John Warren, Carl

Kreiser, Gordon Jones, Mary Ellen Miller, Leroy Metzger, Donna Gosselin, Edward Counts, Julia Roberts.

Richard Miller, Carol Reagles. Back row: Wells Richardson, Donald Zacharias, Doyle Satterthwaite, John Crenshaw, James Davis, F. Dudley Bryant, James Sloan.

the touch of Organizations

Over 100 organizations and 25 fraternities and sororities gave students an outlet for involvement, experience and a chance to make new friends.

The Civil War was recreated by several students who were part of a Civil War Reenactment group.

—Roy Thomas

Members of the Geology Club took advantage of area geology by making a trip to a part of the Mammoth Cave system that had been closed since 1962.

Citizens-action groups formed as fraternities and sororities found the touch of red was not always welcomed by Bowling Green neighbors. By the end of the school year a moratorium had been declared to help solve the problem.

Whether it was a bake sale in Downing or a car wash on the bypass, students were getting in touch through organizations.

Inside:

247 A closer look is taken at the making of the appointment book so many students can't do without.

278 Members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes run a cross track around Smith Stadium.

304 Greeks examine the costs of being greek, from buying T-shirts to financing the spring formal.

MEMBERS OF the Scumettes entertained at Big Red's Roar. They mimed and danced to the song "My Boyfriend's Back."

AT THE break of dawn, members of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority practice for powderpuff football. The sorority won the tournament.

—Mike Healy

Through friendships, workshops and professional experience, students were

Getting in touch

Any accounting major or minor was invited to join the Accounting Club. "We like to bring all the accounting majors together," president Kim Kerley, a Glasgow senior, said.

During the fall semester, the club recruited new members. They put up signs in Grise Hall and had professors talk to students and invite them to their "getting-to-know-you" party.

The 50-member group met once a month. "You learn what to expect from work and the CPA exam," Kerley said.

The Accounting Club went on tours of banks and local industries. During the spring semester, they sponsored a banquet for all members.

Members focused much of their attention on establishing a Beta Alpha Psi chapter at Western. They also attended a seminar about the chapter at Murray State University.

Interest in the advertising field prompted a growth in the membership of the Advertising Club.

There were 45 members in the student organization of the American Advertising Federation.

"Ad club gave members a chance to meet others in the same field and to gain information about the career through outside speakers," Susan Legler, club vice president, said.

Legler, a Louisville senior, said the club sponsored "Creative Expression '83," a seminar held in the fall that featured speakers from Louisville and Nashville advertising agencies.

"The goal of the seminar was to give advertising students a better view of the field," Legler said.

In the spring semester the club sponsored an advertising workshop for members of the Bowling Green business community.

Nine members joined the Afro-American Players during their annual membership drive in the fall.

The club met once a week to discuss upcoming projects.

"We decide what we want to do at our meetings," president Angela Kelso, a Madisonville junior, said. "Maybe we'll decide on a play, and then we'll go out and research it."

Although the club was small, new members were always encouraged to join.

"People are always welcome. We'll take in a new member at any point," Kelso said.

The Afro-American Players tried to bring black culture to Western's campus. "We try to make things true to life in all our performances," Kelso said.

Kelso also said that people who didn't act were also encouraged to join. Members who chose not to act were put to work with the lights or backstage.

In addition to performing other's works, some members wrote and performed their own material. Members practiced in Downing University Center, and often had access to the theater.

Alpha Epsilon Delta had a reputation in Kentucky of having the highest percentage of students getting into medical school.

The pre-med honor society was open to any student in the medical field with a 3.2 overall grade-point average and a 3.0 GPA in the sciences.

"We try to provide the pre-medical student with an outlook of what the student is getting to," president Pat Jenkins, Fordsville senior, said. "We give hands-on experience."

"We placed 80 percent of the senior class last year," Jenkins said. "Two people were accepted at Vanderbilt, four at the University of Kentucky, and four at the University of Louisville."

In March the organization attended the national convention which was held in Birmingham, Ala.

Other activities that the organization participated in included two initiations for new members, a freshman orientation for students entering the field, and trips to medical schools at the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville. Speakers were invited to the meetings to discuss topics in the field of medicine.

Members of AED observed doctors' offices in Bowling Green to get "hands-on" experience and to study the work done by professionals.

A Christmas party and senior graduation party were couple of the activities the group held to give the members chance to relax from their classes.

Alpha Kappa Delta was active for the first time in 15 years.

Louis Beck, AKD's adviser, said it was an "honor society to recognize outstanding achievement in sociology."

Beck, who was sponsor of a "very active" AKD at Texas A&M, successfully reactivated the Beta Chapter last year.

The Beta Chapter was established in 1967. It was the second in the state to become an official chapter.

Graduate students were automatically accepted as AKDs. Undergraduate students had to be a sociology major with at least 60 credit hours and have a grade-point average of 3.0 or better.

Beck said the AKDs met in a "fraternal fashion to communicate sociology."

In April, the AKDs held a luncheon in conjunction with the annual Sociological Conference for its new initiates.

DURING Black History Week, Jessie Wilson, a Hopkinsville junior, performs a dramatic monologue about a Vietnam veteran. Wilson was a member of Afro-American Players.

— T. J. Hamilton

Accounting Club

Front row: Carol Allen, Sara White, Annette Schepers, Rosemary Mann, Billie Hogue, Kim Kerley. Second row: James Duallitt, Sarah Bee, Ruth Young, Ira Smith, Mary Steinhagen, Edna Costa. Back row: Larry Beam, Jeremy Turner, Denise Gregory, Kevin Burris, Don Coffman, Pamela Hagan, Tina Sachleben.

Advertising Club

Front row: Susan Hofack, Susan Legler, Mary Wiloughby, Nina McNeer. Back row: George Newsome, Craig Miller, Lisa Andrews, Ed Ramsey, Ed Farley.

Afro-American Players

Front row: Robin Payne, Angela Kelso. Back row: Archie Beck, Lisa Shirley, Sam Starks.

Alpha Epsilon Delta

Front row: Kelly Tyre, Kristy Ashby, Vernon Pruitt, Leigh Ann Turner, Linda Allard. Second row: Cynthia Rippy, Patricia Russell, Ann Combs, Leslie Shirley, Dante Graves, Jean Thompson. Back row: Ford Threlkeld, Hugh Packett, Grady Parr, Travis Callahan, Patrick Jenkins, Jamie Moore, Timothy Price, Tyrone Beston.

GEOLOGY CLUB members adjust their gear before entering Mammoth Cave. The club explored three and one-half miles of the cave system.

First-hand exploration

Photos by Greg Lovett

In 1925 Floyd Collins entered Mammoth Cave to find a new tour system. But he never returned. In February, 20 members of the Geology Club toured the same area that Collins had discovered 59 years ago.

Collins became trapped in the cave and died of exposure. Members of the club were allowed to see the coffin of Collins, resting in a part of the cave that has not been open to the public since 1962.

"After exploring, we took the Crystal Cave entrance to the cave to see the coffin," Nick Crawford, professor of geology and geography, said.

David Mitchell, a Louisville senior, was the one who originally came up with the idea to tour the cave. Mitchell, president of the Geology Club, was trying to get new ideas for the group. "We had a very good response to the idea," he said. "Many of the students wanted to go, but didn't get to."

Crawford was approached by Mitchell to help with the field trip. "I agreed to do it as long as it was limited to 20 people," Crawford said. Crawford, a member of the Cave Research Foundation, had access to parts of the cave where "virtually no one can go."

The group, which included an assistant to Crawford and a park service employee, entered through the Turner Avenue entrance. There are about 17 entrances to the cave, many of which are not open to the public. The area they explored was discovered about 25 years ago, and is restricted to limited visitation.

Crawford had previously taken students through the cave only during the summer. "It is inconvenient for the park service," Crawford said. "They have the caves locked up and they are concerned with protecting the caves."

The group went into the cave about three and one-half miles. They had to climb over rocks to crawl through the cave about 400 feet. "Some of the students came out with a few bruises," Crawford said.

"We were not interested in caving, but more interested in the formation of the cave," said Mitchell. "The gypsum formations were fantastic."

Other members thought that the experience would be a unique experience, one many people never get the chance to have. "I've been caving before, but never on a tour like that," said Jeff Wallace, a Louisville senior. "It's something that everyone gets to see."

Wallace thought the experience was unique since it provided students with a picture of the caving system. "I saw a lot of formations that I never got to see before, just something from a textbook," he said.

"Dr. Crawford is one of the few people in the country that could take us in the cave like that," John Watson, a Skokie senior, said. Watson thought that the idea of touring the cave would be a good first-hand look at things he learned in classes.

"You just can't get fired up about a photograph in a textbook," he said. "I get to see first hand how solution caves are formed."

Melanie Min

GEOLOGY CLUB members secure their lighting gear and helmets before entering the cave. The area they explored was discovered 25 years ago and is restricted to limited visitation.

AFTER CRAWLING through several miles of Mammoth Cave, the group stops to view the coffin of Floyd Collins. Collins died there in 1925 trying to find a new tour system.

Touch

cont.

For the first time, Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity went co-ed. But the move to go co-ed did not help their declining membership.

The business fraternity required members to have a business major or minor, and have at least a 2.0 grade-point average.

"Because of a lack of interest, we didn't replace members as they graduated," president Charlie Jackson, a Rineyville senior, said.

Other factors contributing to the decline in membership were high fees and numerous other business organizations on campus. "Delta Sigma Pi has always dominated," Jackson said.

Alpha Kappa Psi's main focus throughout the year was to reorganize the chapter. The chapter worked with the national chapter during the year, working to retain the charter.

Alpha Phi Omega was a service fraternity for the campus, community, and nation. To be a member a student had to volunteer at least 25 service hours as a pledge, and then be voted in by the chapter.

"This year we had an extremely large pledge class.

There were 17 pledges. The 25 members went out and worked really hard this year to get the new members," Ford Threlkeld, vice president, said.

This was the first year the club sponsored the Miss Western Pageant. They also worked with the American Red Cross blood drive on campus. They watched the press boxes at football and basketball games, and worked with Boy Scouts and Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

The club had meetings every Sunday night. Some of the members attended the regional convention in Nashville.

"Being in the club, I was able to meet a lot of people. It also gave me a personal satisfaction in helping others," Threlkeld said.

Alpha Psi Omega was a drama honor society which provided a reward for students excelling in college theater production. Membership was based on academic excellence and participation.

Each year the club recognizes a student for outstanding achievement by giving him a scholarship. The members nominate and vote to decide who will receive the scholarship.

"Alpha Psi Omega encouraged further involvement. The members were extra involved in theater," Rhonda Ritchie, president, said.

"We discussed problems people have in the theater department. We're the voice in theater.

"We kept good relationships in the department," Ritchie, a Georgetown junior, said.

The club met once a month. They sold concessions at theater shows, and painted clown faces on children to raise money.

"We recognized the people who take their theater seriously. We wanted to set a high standard for our department," Ritchie said.

"I had a lot of responsibility as president, and I like responsibility," Ritchie said.

WHILE BOWLING for Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Mary Snyder, a Bowling Green sophomore; Jeff Warnecke, a Lexington senior, and Marcia Foe, a Bowling Green sophomore, cheer on Pat Dining, a Bowling Green freshman. The members of Alpha Phi Omega were bowling at Crescent Bowl.

AN Alpha Phi Omega shirt displays the promotion button the service fraternity used for their fund-raising project. They bowled for Big Brothers and Big Sisters in February.

— T. J. Hamilton

— T. J. Hamilton

Alpha Kappa Psi

Front row: Jennifer Catlett, Eugenia Scott, Stacey Potter. Back row: Julie Jones, Garland Page, Joseph Wheeler, Charlie Jackson, Mark Buxton.

Alpha Phi Omega

Front row: Vernon Pruitt, Jean Thompson, Jeff Warnecke, Elizabeth Thompson. Second row: Kerry Metheny, Pat Dining, Lynn Windhorst, Mike Nation, Ford Threlkeld, David Brooks. Back row: Pamela Williams, Paul Burchfield, Alice Hamlet, Jr., Nancy Griggs, Steve Adams, T. W. Jasha, David Threlkeld.

Alpha Phi Omega

Front row: Charlene McDonald, Melanie Mertz, Mary Snyder, Keri Dast, Debbie Medley. Back row: Phyllis Parks, Clarice Rayborn, Mary Snyder, Lynne Webb, Tamberly Collins, Pat Jacob.

Alpha Psi Omega

Front row: Cathleen Calk, Rhonda Ritchie, Lynn Kirkpatrick, Suzette Bowman.

"B EING THERE"

Photos by Bobby Roe

When Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated on March 4, 1861, he forewarned the American people in his inauguration speech by saying, "In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of Civil War. The Government will not assail you. You can have no conflict, without yourselves being the aggressors. You have no oath to register in Heaven to destroy the Government, while I shall have the solemn one to 'preserve, protect and defend' it."

That issue is still alive today, 119 years after Lee surrendered his army at Appomatox, through the effort of the numerous Civil War re-creation groups and enthusiasts around the country.

Western's first Civil War re-creation group was formed last year through the combined efforts of Bob Cull, a freshman from Ithaca, N.Y., and David Heighway, a senior from Zionsville, Ind.

The Western unit is a member of the Confederate First Georgia Infantry.

Western's chapter consisted of five members in its first year, but Cull hoped that the unit would grow during the four years he plans to attend Western, and that it would continue after he's gone.

The members' interest in the Civil War brought the group together with the hope of achieving the ultimate reward of reliving history — the moment of

"being there."

Susan Lyons Johnson, a 1977 Western graduate and secretary/treasurer for the 7th Kentucky unit, said re-creating is a way to escape. It gives one the chance "to have everything so perfect for a fleeting moment that you actually think you're there."

"You get a personal feeling of what it was like," Johnson said. "If Western had a Civil War

SGT. MAJ. Bob Cull, an Ithaca, N.Y., freshman, watches Union soldiers drill. He was carrying a hocky sack, canteen and ammo case, for water and supplies.

program when I was there I would have gone crazy."

The role of women in re-creation has changed. "Until two years ago the women would dress in hooped skirts and just stand around," Johnson said. "Now we are coming into a more accurate role."

Living history is a way to take learning out of the classroom and make it interesting to those who want to know more about history, Cull said.

But the Civil War seems to carry the most glamour over the other re-creations. The Civil War was and still is in some cases a personal conflict as well as a political one.

Two members of Western's unit, Cull and Pat Cunningham, a Stoutsville, Ohio, sophomore, traveled to Frankfort to re-create with the 7th Kentucky Infantry, led by Nicky Hughes, a 1972 Western graduate. Hughes is also the director of the Military History Museum in Frankfort.

Hughes said, "Living history is an excellent learning tool because it takes learning out of the classroom. Even though the men of Western are a Confederate group, we still welcome them. By reliving history, it helps you to understand things so much more."

Cull's reason for attending the Frankfort gathering was to buy some weapons and to compare Western's organization to the others. He said, "It's very refreshing to find fellow enthusiasts. It's nice to know there are so many people with a common interest. These are the people that get more out of history than just reading about it," he said.

Jonathan Newton

AT THE KENTUCKY Old State Capitol Building in Frankfort, the 7th Kentucky Volunteers pose for a group picture. Cull and Heighway, a Zionsville, Ind., senior, participated in the re-enactment.

Touch

cont.

Last year the Amazing Tones of Joy celebrated their 13th anniversary as an organization on Western's campus. And with about 35 members, there was a renewed interest in the group.

The group held a four-week membership drive for prospective members. At the first meeting, officers were introduced and the history of the Amazing Tones of Joy was given.

"We served the Lord through song," president Victoria Sanderson, a Radcliff senior, said. The group sang at various churches throughout the year.

During the first week, while members were learning the new music, practice was held twice a week. Practice was then held once a week at Downing University Center and Garrett Conference Center.

A new project for the Amazing Tones of Joy was a song show, held in February. They hoped to use the show as a fund-raiser to help pay for trips. The only other source of funds for the organization came from donations from various churches.

Providing a way for students to get to know each other and finding out their potential in the economics field was the hope of the American Economics Association, according to historian Karen Young.

A student must have been majoring in one area of home economics. The goal was to promote the field and to learn about such things as job opportunities.

Some of the members attended a fall workshop in Lexington, where a series of lessons in health were taught.

The club had bake sales to raise money. The earnings from one sale went to charity. They sold "little big reds" at a workshop during fall semester.

"A different topic was discussed at each monthly meeting. We had a speaker and worked on crafts," Young, a Bowling Green senior, said.

"I liked being in AEA because I could see what was going on at Western in the department and in the city as well."

The American Home Economics Association was reorganized in 1981 and was open to anyone who had a major in the home economics field, according to Karen Young, a Bowling Green senior.

"We featured a different area of home economics at each monthly meeting," Young said.

The organization was active in events that gave students practical experience in their field.

Members of the organization participated in the state meeting of the Kentucky Home Economics Association in Lexington during March, where they celebrated the association's 50th anniversary and the national association's 75th anniversary.

Business and journalism majors were encouraged to join the American Marketing Association.

"We're not just for business majors. We want to get students involved, to give them an opportunity to work together," president Tammy Brumfield, an Irvington senior, said.

The association had approximately 40 members, about the same as previous years. A grade-point average of at least 2.0 was required for membership.

Each semester the AMA had a membership drive. To get new members, they put up posters and had professors encourage students to join.

"We had a get-acquainted meeting and there was about a six-week deadline for students to join," Brumfield said.

A new project for the AMA was a resume book within the College of Business Administration. The club also sponsored visits by speakers throughout the year.

The Western Affair helped provide funds to be used for the speakers, trips to trade shows, and other projects.

"We shared our funds with the whole college when we had a speaker," Brumfield said.

The American Society of Interior Design worked with the students to show them what the fashion world was like, what they needed to do, and how to be more aware of it.

With over a 100-percent increase in membership, the organization stayed involved with many activities throughout the year.

During the fall the organization sponsored "a home tour of faculty and professors at Western," according to president Valorie Crawford, a Bowling Green senior. In the spring, they participated in the Western Affair where they sold shirts and canvas bags.

The monthly meetings for the organization featured a professional from the field of interior

—Kevin Eams

BROWNSVILLE SOPHOMORE VanMeter transfers a pattern onto cloth with stencils. He was working in a stencils design class.

design as a guest speaker to help members informed.

"We feel like now is the time for our engineering department to be recognized as a leadership group at Western," David Coffman, American Society of Mechanical Engineers president, said.

"We are making a big push to get new members," Coffman said. Membership went from 14 in 1982 last year.

Coffman, who has been a member for four years, said, "It is an opportunity for students to get involved and see what they are about the field they're getting into."

"Younger students can get to know people who have had success and can help them academically."

Three members attended a student leadership conference in Chicago to help them in leadership qualities.

The club was also responsible for High School Technology Day in March. They went to the General Motors Corvette Plant to look at robotics and its effects on worker impact.

Amazing Tones of Joy

Front row: Tina Thomas, Theresa Brown, Zoretta Anders, Teresa D. Brewer, Ramona Pitts. Second row: Monica Mobley, Monica Johnson, Laquita Shanks, Stacey M. Boyd, Cheryl Peterson, Portia Moore. Back row: Sharen Y. Tompkins, Portia L. Willis, Stacia E. Johnson, Anthony R. Sanders, Frederick D. Shanks, David L. Sanders, Alisa D. White.

American Home Economics Association

Front row: Annette Bolland, Jo Payne, Lora Ann Fox. Back row: Ellie S. Shaw, Karen E. Young, Jan B. Holiday.

American Marketing Association

Front row: Tammy Brumfield, Mary Jo Mayes, Phyllis K. Packer. Second row: Gary Elliott, Ben Livingston, Cindy Hammers, Debra Cecil. Back row: Tim Sloan, Steve Frey, Ric Crittenden, Keith McDonald, Bill Godwin.

American Society of Interior Design

Front row: Linda Sturgis, Dolores Woods, Ronda Dee Woodley, Lisa Flinn. Back row: Kimberly Thompson, John Wozniak, Jennifer Liptak, Valerie Crawford, Michael Violante.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers

Front row: William J. Kral, Kenneth Daniel, David Coffman. Back row: Mark Hagen, Philip Cuddy, James Blanford, Vladimir Aleksee, Hong Liu.

Art Education

Front row: Lynn Baker, Cynthia Loy, Jill Johnson, Jo Strain, Neil Peters.

Art Guild

Front row: Dave Reneau, Barry Fleming, Margaret McClarnon. Back row: Lisa Cabhand, Jerry Williams, Lynn Baker.

Associated Student Government

Front Row: Dorcas Holloway, Kathy Ruklefer, Cindy Sinner, Teresa Anthony. Second row: Lori Burchett, Alex Bell, Jeff Feltz, Bob Shultz, Stacey Ragan. Back row: Johnny Ragan, Sean Peck, Jack Smith, Tony Visk, Delmar Esters, Anthony Rhea.

Associated Student Government

Front row: Jane Reid, Sheila Waininger, Kimberly Hink, Anne Bryn, Suzanne Dupaty. Second row: Jessica Rappaport, Mitchell McKinney, Sandra Hill, Lisa Ferguson, Tony Whalen, Happy Chandler. Back row: Allen Kujala, Chris Watkins, Traci Turner, Claire Grooming, Danny Braderick, Brian Maddox, Michael Tolbert.

Association for Computing Machinery

Front row: Marty C. Lindsey, Janice K. Yount, Kathy L. Brown, Belinda LaGrange, Pamela Buling. Second row: Scott Starkey, Bruce Dale, Kim Daugherty, Henry Meadows, Lynn Windhorst, Ronnie McCamish. Back row: Kevin Cundiff, Pam Holcomb, Don Hughes, Leslie Houk, Brad Wilson, David Holliday.

Touch

cont.

With only four members, the Art Education Club was one of the smallest clubs on campus. Darl Peterie, adviser to the club, invited students to be in the club.

"It mainly promotes support for art," said Cynthia Loy, a Fairplay freshman.

The club met on the first Monday of every month. During the meetings, members looked at techniques of teaching art.

An art show at the public library highlighted the year for the Art Guild.

"The club gave a chance to go different places and view art," Margaret McClarnon, a Gallatin, Tenn., senior, said.

All members were either art majors or minors. They met once a month to organize art shows. Throughout the year, members sold their works, either through the Art Guild or on their own.

During the fall, members took a trip to an art show in Louisville. To help fund the trip, members had bake sales.

In an attempt to improve their

—T.J. Hamilton

image, the Associated Student Government made an extensive effort to give students a voice in campus affairs.

Vice president Tony Whalen, a Louisville senior, said the '84 congress was extremely successful in improving ASG's image.

"We tried to get the opinions of students through polls and open forums," Whalen said. "By getting more people involved, we've raised our credibility and succeeded in getting some major bills passed."

Among those were co-ed housing, a spotlight at University and Normal drives, and a series of theft-prevention workshops.

Those successes had not alleviated all of ASG's problems. They still suffered from a lack of funding and were petitioning to get their state allotment increased.

Two of ASG's bills which were not passed were a proposed grade-scale change that included a retroactive implementation of pluses and minuses to the current four-point scale, and a proposal for on-campus alcohol sales.

Optimism was the keynote of ASG this past congress. Whalen said, "We've definitely bettered our image, and done more on a positive note than in the past. As long as ASG and the students keep working toward a common goal, we'll be successful."

With approximately 60 members, the Association of Computing Machinery hoped to "promote an interest and understanding in computers and computing sciences," according to David Holliday, president.

Prospective members were encouraged to attend an introductory meeting at the beginning of the semester. Any student with a computer science major or minor was eligible for membership.

"The student chapter is part of a much larger chapter," Holliday, a Fort Mitchell junior, said. "It gives you contacts within the industry."

Members met once a month and usually listened to a speaker for part of the meeting.

In February, the senior members attended the ACM National Convention in Philadelphia. While there, members interviewed for jobs from companies all over the country. They also listened to lectures and attended meetings.

LONG STROKES of paint cover the canvas as Doris Sizemore, a graduate student from Cadiz, works on her art project. Sizemore was painting the project for an art class.

To help their budget, ACM collected paper from the computer center at Ogden College to be recycled.

The main project of the Association of Christian Communicators to Serve was a weekly series on Hebrews they taped for the Western Cable Station.

Wendy Wilder, president of ACCTS, said a crew of six to eight people rotated every Sunday for an entire semester to produce the series.

ACCTS was founded two years ago and grew in membership. Most members were broadcasting majors with an interest in religion, but anyone could join, according to Wilder, a Louisville junior.

"It is a Christian organization that gives students with television experience a chance to work," she said.

Touch cont.

A minor or major in social work was all that was required to join the Association of Student Social Workers, an organization designed to get social work students involved in their field of study.

According to Liz Trent, president of ASSW, the main purpose of the organization was to "bring social workers together to learn more about their profession." The organization stressed the importance of being aware of who was in the profession and knowing the laws currently in effect and the changes which have been made in them, Trent, a Bowling Green senior, said.

"We went to unemployment offices and food stamp offices to get people registered so things will change and government programs will continue," Trent said.

Fund-raising projects were important to ASSW. They had several bake sales and a raffle.

Funds from these projects went to finance convention trips and to give a party for a volunteer organization in the community. There was also a banquet for all the social workers in the community.

The Baptist Student Union attempted to provide a variety of ways for a Christian to use his talents and abilities in helping other Christians as well as himself to grow and mature spiritually, according to David Lyninger.

"The BSU attempts to help the person grow as a Christian as well as a person. It does this by providing Bible studies and ministry groups such as a clown team, puppet team, drama team, and choir," Lyninger, Discipleship Committee chairman, said.

This year some of the BSU members went to New York for mission projects during Christmas and spring break.

"It not only helped those who were ministered to in New York but it also provided spiritual growth for those who went," Lyninger, a Louisville junior, said.

Some of the activities that the BSU participated in this year included prayer partners, small group Bible studies, prayer breakfasts, secret friends, and movie lock-in.

Undergraduate research scholarship, and disseminating biological knowledge to the general public were the three main goals of the Gamma Chapter of Beta Beta Beta.

Tri-Beta, a national biological society, required a 3.0 grade point average in at least nine hours of biology and an overall GPA of 2.75 for membership, according to president Jeff Warnecke, a Lexington senior.

Each meeting featured a guest speaker who was experienced in the biological field.

The benefits from being in Tri-Beta were numerous. "It helps in student research and it aids in getting scholarships," Warnecke said.

All of their time was not spent in the classroom or doing research. In November, the club sponsored a Halloween hayride and in December a Christmas party was held. In April, members attended the national convention, where two students presented papers on research they had done.

At the Baptist Student Union, Angela McIntosh, an Olmstead sophomore, prepares popcorn for friends. About 40 students came to the house to watch movies all night.

— Greg Lovett

The Association for Student Social Workers

Front row: Liz Trent, Judy Rosacker, Cindy Ralston, Karen Winterheimer, Joy L. Hopkins. Back row: Ginger E. Morse, Anita F. Smith, Sue Hagan, Linda Degehhardt, Susan Sexton, Patty Parent.

Baptist Student Union

Front row: Becky Leopard, Ruth Ann Hudson, Tammy McIntosh, Sherry Thurman, Libby Brown, Vivian Daugherty, Paula Paris. Second row: Scott Shouse, Diane Hines, JoNell Hackley, Amy Thompson, Kim Saylor, Carol Goin, Susan Quisenberry, Jeff Lewis. Back row: Brad Watkins, Thomas Mills, Tim Lucas, David Lyninger, Troy Birdwell, Jim Ruby, Steve Owen, Greg Maddox, LeBane Hall.

Baptist Student Union

Front row: Kathy Hardin, Angela McIntosh, Anna Murphy, Kimberly Staples, Katrina Patterson, Kim Patterson, Susan Nininger. Second row: Karen Lanham, Jeanie Claypool, Jennifer Hill, Mindy Delfert, Bonnie Brown, Charlene Shepherd, Sharon Gosh, Sharon Waggoner. Back row: Rev. Clay Mulford, Bryan Cannon, Scott Bees, Mike Lewis, George Marshall, Van Harper, Tim Hardin, Art Hardin, Mark Beldau.

Baptist Student Union

Front row: Lisa Hightough, Kevin Norris, Vivian Lake, Judy Robbins, Ramona Willis. Second row: Charlene Cole, Jenna Riddle, Kate Pappas, James Masterson, Kim Schmitt, Derek Staples, Brian Brate. Back row: Carla Mackey, Melvin Howard, Dwayne Miller, Stephen Maddox, Charlotte Williams, DeWayne GoLightly, Tommy Phelps.

Beta Beta Beta

Front row: Charlene McDonald, Laura Day, Vernon Pratt, Kim Duet, Jeff Warnecke. Second row: Kelly Tyne, Edward Rothchild, Mary Lindsey, Leslie Hook, Susan Morgan, Beth Fogle. Back row: Kenneth A. Bell, Joy Dawn Thomas, Babi Linn Thomas, Ann Jenkins, Greg Black, Ford Threlkeld, Alice Hamlet.

Black Scholastic Achievers

Front row: Robin Payne, June Baker. Second row: David Davis, Rita Toliver, Lisa McKee, Sam Upshaw.

Block and Bridle

Front row: Jodi McNemar, Karen Ross, Dana Isbell. Second row: Robin White, Jennifer Montgomery, Liz McGuire, Sherri Bartos. Back row: Margie Baker, Kelly Greenwell, Tom Sandifer, Jody Seconides, Rayette McGuffin.

Block and Bridle

Front row: Ellen Humphries, Ann M. Combs, Gretchen Meiers, Melinda Perkins. Second row: Pam Forrest, Mike Bryant, David Brown, Dennis Drake, Greg Grey. Back row: Chuck Speck, Clark Hammers, Gil Ray Cowles, Tim Gordon, Bruce Currie, Luke D. Jessup.

Chemistry Club

Front row: Marcia Fox, Pat Dinning, Patti Wheeler, Anne Soepp. Back row: Kay Graham, Darrell Miller, Doug Kimbler, Greg Powell, Edie Edmondson.

Civil Engineering Technology Club

Front row: Dawn M. Fenwick, Jeff Bland, Dan Porter. Back row: H. H. Martin, Phil Dickens, Mitchell Stewart, Deck Shaver, Don Lawson.

MEMBERS of the Block and Bridle Club, Jon Koella, a White Pine, Tenn. senior; Terry Burks, a Glasgow sophomore, and Gil Cowles, a Bowling Green junior, participate in the Block and Bridle College Bowl. The bowl was held in the fall.

A club that sought to spark interest in students was the Black Scholastic Achievers. The group was open to black students with a grade-point average of 2.8 or above.

"We wanted to give students a chance to be recognized," Rita Toliver, a Russellville senior, said. The club worked a lot of public relations and promoting their group last year.

The club, with about 10 active members, met about once a week. During the meeting members discussed study habits and ways to help other students.

The club took a trip to the University of Kentucky Law School. In the spring the club also sponsored activities for Black History Week.

One of the fastest growing organizations was the Block and Bridle Club.

"We had a record membership of 60 — up about one-third from last year's," Clark Hammers, club vice president, said.

— T. J. Hamilton

Hammers, a Morgantown senior, said the reason for the increase was due to a steady increase in agriculture majors as a whole.

"The club was open to anyone interested in animal science although most involved were agriculture majors," Hammers said.

For the first year the club sponsored a Block and Bridle Day at the Agriculture Exposition Center. The event was held in conjunction with the membership drive.

For the first time since the club was organized in 1976, the club sponsored the Southeast Region Livestock Judging. Students from 16-20 universities in the southeast region attended the event which was also held at the expo center.

The focus of Campus Crusade for Christ was to "win, build and send," according to Daisley Gordon, a Louisville junior.

"We see our whole purpose to be the fulfillment of the Great Commission as recorded in Matthew 28:19-20," Gordon said.

He said the non-denominational organization had several Bible studies in the dorms and large group meetings each Thursday night.

Campus Crusade was heavily involved in "KC '83" during the fall semester. "KC '83" was a nation-wide convention of crusaders held in Kansas City, Mo., during the Christmas break. Gordon said about 75 Western students attended the event which attracted more than 17,000 students from across the nation.

During the spring semester Campus Crusade sponsored a three-day seminar by Dick Purnell, a well-known Christian speaker. The seminar focused on love. Gordon said the average attendance was about 300.

It was a year of transition for the Chamber Singers.

The group's director, Charles Hausmann, resigned at the beginning of the fall semester and Jim Davis was chosen as the interim director. Due to health problems, Davis had to step down from the position. While applications were being taken for the position, Wayne Hobbs, music department head, directed the 28-member chorus.

"The group learned to be very versatile," Lisa Boley, a Madison, Ind., junior, said.

"With so many directors we had to learn to adapt to what each expected of us."

The highlight of the year was a trip to St. Moritz, Switzerland, during the summer of '83 for a performance with the Hungarian Philharmonic in the St. Moritz Festival.

The St. Moritz Festival has been a part of the European music scene since 1973 when it began combining top American college choirs which were competitively selected to perform with a major European orchestra and an international group of soloists.

"Being recognized as one of the top choral groups in the nation is a definite drawing card for Western," Boley said.

The Chemistry Club felt chemistry was important, and wanted others to know it too, according to club president Jamie Monroe.

"We'd like to raise the awareness of chemistry and the sciences to students, particularly to the science students," Monroe, a Bowling Green senior, said.

Monroe said that this year's membership was low, but they were trying to build up the club.

"We want to make it an

Touch cont.

organization the members will be proud to be in," she said.

The club members had bake sales to raise money. They also sold T-shirts that had "I'm suffering from a Thompson Complex" printed on them.

The club had speakers, pizza parties, a fall picnic, a spring picnic, and an annual spring banquet.

Buying a new slide projector for the civil engineering department was one of the Civil Engineering Technology Club's projects.

According to Arthur Bush, adviser to the club, its purpose was to "expose the civil engineering profession to students interested in it."

Like most departmental clubs, CETC members met fairly regularly and often had guest speakers or went on field trips.

"Occasionally recent graduates came in to speak about their first few years in the field," Bush said.

"The major benefit of being in CETC is the exposure the student gets," Bush said. "The classroom is somewhat restricted, and a departmental club can offer what the classroom can't."

—Kevin East

Collegiate 4-H

Front row: Michelle Thompson, Cristl Wilson, Lydia Heady. Back row: Kelly E. Dossey, Craig Browning, Barry S. Pruitt, Jeff Morris.

Dairy Science

Front row: Kazun Nation, Brian Hornback, Brenda Willoughby. Second row: Kevin Lyons, Margie Baker, Jana Scott, Barry Hornback. Back row: John Shirley, Michael Tooley, Joe Whittill, Doug Morgan, Charles Jones.

Touch cont.

Most of the members of Collegiate 4-H began when they were young, but still others did not join until they arrived on Western's campus.

Collegiate 4-H is a fairly new organization with 30 members. Most of them were former 4-H'ers but not all of them, according to president Lydia Heady, a Maceo junior.

"We work with surrounding counties for 4-H community work," Heady said.

The 4-H organization hosted a 4-H council at Western and also volunteered for Special Olympics.

"We would like to do more work on the farm," Heady said.

For those interested in the dairy industry, the club to join was Dairy Science. The club was open to dairy science majors, or anyone interested in the field.

"Students learn more about the dairy industry and what's going on in the industry," Mark Scott, a Shelbyville senior, said.

Last year members helped to build fences at the WKU farm.

BEFORE THEIR spring recital, Vicki Taylor, a Bowling Green senior, sings, and Jeanie Osborne, a Springfield, Tenn., senior, plays the piano. The two were members of Delta Omicron.

They also donated funds to send the dairy judging team to the national contest.

For their fund-raising projects, members helped with the jersey sale. They also worked at the holstein-heifer sale.

Although the Data Processing Management Association was geared specifically to students with data processing majors and minors, management minors could also join since there were no clubs designed specifically for them.

The 30-member club usually met once a month, sometimes twice depending on upcoming activities. At the meetings, members listened to various speakers from the management field.

"We try to give students an idea what's out there," president Charlie Jackson, a Rineyville senior, said. "We want students to know what to expect in terms of jobs when you get out."

The association had a raffle and a bake sale to raise money. One of their fundraisers was recycling scrap paper and cards.

Developing a greater appreciation for music and encouraging good musicianship was the focus of Delta Omicron, the professional music fraternity for women.

According to Vicki Taylor, a Bowling Green senior, the group had 27 members, which was an increase over last year's membership. The chapter limits its membership to students in the music field.

The chapter sponsored "A Night of Unusual Music" and a faculty recital during the fall semester. The faculty recital was a new event for the group.

"A lot of times students don't get to see the music faculty perform since some only teach lecture classes," Taylor said.

"We were pleased with the good attendance for the recital," she said. "We are hoping it will become an annual event."

The group assisted with high school music contests held on campus and produced phone books for students in the music department.

The chapter sold concessions at music events and used the money to purchase a tape deck for the music listening library.

Delta Omicron is an organization that, in Taylor's words, "allows you to have a common bond with people who are the same yet different."

Data Processing Management Association

Front row: Pat Lilly, Laura Haymaker, Jenny Johnson, Ruth Ann Hudson, Kim Harlow. Back row: Charles Jackson, Diane Witter, Christy Tobin, David Brooks, Chris Peake, Marvin Allen.

Delta Omicron

Front row: Susan Simandle, Billie Hogue, Sheila DeJarnette. Second row: Sherri Phelps, Elizabeth Ritter, Sarah Cavin, Pamela Galloway, Ruth Oliver. Back row: Chrystal Corley, Debbie Estes, Beth Tucker, Vicki Taylor, Brenda Carter, Charlotte Bradley.

Touch cont.

Students enrolled in German courses at the 300 level or above and who had maintained at least a 3.0 grade-point average, overall and in German, were eligible to become members of Delta Phi Alpha.

Initiation for new members was at the beginning of each semester, according to Andy Hedges, a Bowling Green senior.

Members had an opportunity for fellowship and professional growth, as well as a deeper understanding of German thought and culture. It is also evidence of academic excellence. The club was started at Western in 1964.

"It's an honor to be a member," Hedges said.

In addition to producing the Abacus, Delta Sigma Pi, a co-ed business fraternity, distributed credit card applications from Sears, Roebuck and Co. and Zales as fund raisers. For each approved application, Sears and Zales reimbursed the organization.

Any business major, enrolled for at least one semester, was eligible for membership. A grade-point average of 2.5 was also required for membership.

"We apply what you learn in the classroom to the business world," said Vivian Parker, a Goodlettsville, Tenn., senior. "We try to bring the two together."

There were about 30 active members, although many were graduating seniors. The chapter had a large pledge class in the spring. Pledges went through a seven- to eight-week pledgship, and were required to attend meetings and other club functions.

For their community service project, members worked on the Phonathon, raising money for Western. In the spring they held a recognition banquet to honor a local businessperson.

As part of their professional activities program, members listened to speakers and went on tours. In the fall they toured both the General Motors Corvette Plant and the Union Underwear Plant.

Working with high school students was the main focus for the Distributive Education Clubs of America.

"We taught high school and college students the idea of free enterprise," Connie Tucker, a Campbellsville sophomore, said.

The club was open to any business major or minor, and most members were involved with DECA in high school. There were about 15 active members in the club.

"It gives you a chance to work with others," Tucker said. "You get used to what it will be like after you get out of school."

The club hosted the Leadership Conference, and orientation for high school students, in October. All regional activities for DECA were held at Western, Tucker said.

One of the best ways to stay in contact with graduates in the environmental field was to join the Environmental Technology Club, according to Kim Menke, president.

He said the purpose of the club was to further the education of the environmental technology student and provide an opportunity for participation in the evaluation and control of current problems.

Activities included films, field trips, guest lecturers, sports activities, picnics, and parties.

They cleaned up along Barren River during "Operation City Beautiful" and had a drive to recycle cans.

"One of our major projects this year was updating the list of graduates," Menke, an Evansville, Ind., junior, said.

"We received professional journals which we can learn a lot from," Menke said.

Being involved in community services as well as sponsoring some campus activities kept Eta Sigma Gamma, the health honor society, active.

The club sponsored the "Great American Smoke-Out" day, and participated in the Health Fair at Greenwood Mall. Scott Davis, the Eta Sigma Gamma president, said.

To be a member, a student must have been studying in the health area and have had a minimum grade-point average of 2.5.

"This has been a year of groundwork. We are setting the foundation to help build the society," Davis, a Bowling Green graduate student, said.

"This year we hosted the National School Health Education Conference in Louisville. According to the national president, we provided the best banquet ever for the most people to ever attend the conference," Davis said.

There was usually a speaker at the monthly meeting to give the members information about the health field.

"If you are a member, you will be recognized as an outstanding student in your field. It gives students a chance to write articles and have them published in the society's national magazine, also," Davis said.

Photo illustration by Kevin Ears

The little red book

Western students have found a new friend. It is a friend that can keep track of all their plans, test dates, special days, parties and things to do. It is a friend that can tell them at a glance where they will be, what they will be doing and when they are doing it. This friend keeps them organized and can turn their life of chaos into one of peaceful tranquility.

This trusty and dependable friend is the Abacus.

Delta Sigma Pi, a business fraternity, came up with the idea of making a school planner as a fund-raising project.

After the idea had been initiated, the bookstore agreed to buy the planner, foregoing the sale of any other planner.

Making its first appearance on WKU's campus in the fall of 1979, the Abacus has grown to be the largest fund-raiser for Delta Sigma Pi, and has won honors from Delta Sigma Pi's national office.

The Abacus is unequalled in style and detail by other school planners. It includes all the necessary information students at Western will need to know.

Melinda Cornell, president of Delta Sigma Pi, feels one reason for the success of the Abacus is because of its direction towards the WKU student.

"The Abacus gives a personal feeling as if it were made especially for each individual student," Cornell, a Central City senior, said.

"If I didn't have my Abacus I couldn't survive. It's my bible," Sarah Hein, a senior from Indianapolis, Ind., said.

The Abacus is working — this year alone 5,500 copies were sold.

Cornell sees room for improvement and hopes more organizations will include their events and information vital to WKU students.

"We would like to see all students use an Abacus, not to make more money, but as an honor that we have helped students get organized," Cornell said.

Carolyn Gay

Delta Phi Alpha

Front row: Janice Nantz, Jim Wayne Miller, Eva Sutton.

Delta Sigma Pi

Front row: Billie Hogue, Carla Wachner, Melinda Cornell, Patti Bogusko, Carol Evans, Susan Ross, Lisa Vandiver. Second row: Patricia Dotson, Diana Powell, Rita Parker, Lisa Sawyers, Joseph Garst, JuNell Mackley, Tammy Brumfield, Chris Abel, Bob row: Steven Harrod, Donnie Gregory, Kathy Jones, Garth Wheeler, Laura Daugherty, Amy Blawie, Steve Higdon, Scott Morgan, Ronnie Gregory.

Delta Sigma Pi

Front row: Alex Rodriguez, Julie Pleasant, Laurel Johnson, Joyce Brewer. Second row: Teresa Keen, Tina Fowler, Sharon Waggoner, Kimberlie Turner, James L. Pozze Jr. Back row: Steve Rappell, Van Andrew Hoy, Edmond Travis, Jeremy Turner, Vivian Parker, Martin Lautner, Lawrence Finley.

Eta Sigma Gamma

Front row: Coretha Skaggs, Aletha Pollock, Cheri England.

Touch

cont.

The purpose of Fashion Inc. was to get people aware of fashions and to get them involved in fashion, according to Lynne Dickerson.

This new club, which has only been at Western for five years, was open to any student with a major or minor in textiles and clothing, Dickerson, a Goodlettsville, Tenn., junior, said.

In March, the club took a trip to the Atlanta Apparel Mart and their meetings became host to prominent people like William Embry, president of Embry's.

Closer to home, Fashion Inc. hosted a career day during the fall for high school and Western students. Speakers discussed the topic of climbing the career ladder.

Fashion Inc. also worked with Western by participating in the Phonathon, and Western Affair in the spring.

"We relate to the fashion industry," Dickerson said.

Every Thursday night the cellar of West Hall filled with close to 200 people as the members gathered for their weekly meeting.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes was a Christian organization that was open to any student at Western.

"Everyone is so friendly and open. You can really meet a lot of people," Steve Wigginton, FCA president, said.

The organization "presented to athletes and coaches and all whom they influence, the challenge and adventure of receiving Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, serving him in their relationships and in the fellowship of the church," Wigginton, a Louisville senior, said.

The Thursday-night meetings involved many guest speakers and featured many Western students in skits and testimonies.

FCA stayed busy in activities during the year. In September, the group sponsored a 100-hour Jog-a-thon and in October they hosted an outdoor concert. Other activities they had included a Valentine dance, a generic party, and prayer breakfasts.

This year a lot of new people were involved. "We don't want to become a clique," Wigginton said.

Most members of the FFA Alumni first started in high school as being members of Future Farmers of America, but now they are helping to promote other local chapters of FFA.

"FFA Alumni is for students who have been in Future Farmers of America in high school and for students who have an interest in supporting it," said J. E. McGuire, faculty adviser.

FFA Alumni worked with the farm in giving tours and shows for area schools and organizations. They also helped promote and support local chapters of FFA.

During March the organization sponsored "Food for Farm" with area elementary schools to acquaint the children with the farm.

Last year, Western's chapter of the Financial Management Association was in the process of becoming a student chartered chapter. The association was part of a larger, nationally chartered group.

"We try to increase people's awareness in a finance major," Charlie Jackson, a Rineyville senior, said. "And we help those already in the major."

"The group is for anyone interested in financial affairs," Kelly Ferguson, a Louisville senior, said. The 30-member group was open to anyone.

At the meetings, members often listened to a speaker. "We tried to have a speaker at the meetings, where people could talk to us," Jackson said.

For a fund-raising project, members sold Halloween suckers, and delivered them around campus.

Gamma Sigma Sigma p in many hours to help others.

The service sorority was based on three ideas: service, friendship, and equality.

Any college woman could be a member. Members volunteered at least 25 hours of service during a nine-week pledge period.

Lucindy McCubbins, a semester president, had been a member for eight semesters.

"It helps you meet lots of others. It helped get me out of my shell. I used to be real shy, have more confidence now."

"I'm really glad I joined. It has helped me a lot," McCubbins, a Munfordville senior, said.

The club had many activities. This year they did volunteer work with Med-Care, ushered at concerts, and worked with Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

Last June the Gamma Sigma Sigma national convention was held at Western.

"There were so many people here from all over. It was really exciting. One day we went to the airport in Nashville three times to pick up people," McCubbins said.

FASHION INC. member Debbie McBride, a Leitchfield senior, models wedding dress in a bridal fashion show. The Kentucky Museum co-sponsored the event with the Bride's House of Bowling Green.

— Bobby Roe

Fashion Inc.

Front row: Lynn Dickerson, Lois Schnur, Mardell Shupp. Back row: Debbie McBride, Anya Maria Best, Gwendolyn R. Perry.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

Front row: Cheryl Williams, Angela Wilcoxson, Kimberly Blake, Debbie Lane. Second row: Laura Thessen, Kim Snider, Dionne Milam, Angele Badger, Jo Nell Hackley, Mike Das. Back row: William Staugh, David Drummond, Steve Gander, Mike Newman, Steve Biven, Alex Shields.

Financial Management Association

Front row: Kelly Ferguson, Sharon Bumgarner, Jonathan Jones, Robert Shaver.

Gamma Sigma Sigma

Front row: Missy Brodsky, Judith Maddox. Second row: Cheryl Watkins, Kendra Jones, Dana Edwards, Janice Bryant. Back row: Laurie Bryan, Sharon Bailey, Yolanda Robinson, Lucindy McCubbins, Lisa Burgett.

Touch cont.

Gamma Theta Upsilon offered its members good experience and recognition.

"Gamma Theta Upsilon is an honor society for geography majors that are either a junior, senior, or graduate student," Steve Dale, a Horse Cave graduate student, said.

The requirement for membership, according to Conrad Moore, adviser of the organization, was a B average in geography.

With only seven members, membership last year was down compared to previous years, but their activities were still held.

In the spring, the organization hosted a photography and cartography contest which was open to any student.

The annual hog roast for the geography and geology department was held in the fall for students to get to know the faculty and other students with the same major.

A good relationship between faculty and students was one of the biggest benefits to being a member of the Geo Club, according to president Judy Pill, a Bowling Green senior.

"This club brings together students so that they get to know each other," Pill said. "It's more like a social organization."

Membership ranged between

25 and 30 people with geography backgrounds. The yearly membership fee was only $2.

The main project the club sponsored was a photography and cartography contest. The annual spring picnic also attracted many members.

"The uniqueness of this club is bringing everyone closer together. It's self-satisfaction," Pill said.

With the help of a new president, Geology Club joined the list of active clubs.

The new president was David Mitchell, a Louisville senior. He said he asked the adviser, Jack McGregor, about the Geology Club last year.

"He told me I was just then appointed president and to get it going. So I did," Mitchell said.

"The club was inactive in 1983 because no one cared enough to get it going," Mitchell said.

Anyone interested in geology could be a member. There were no dues. At the bi-weekly meetings, the club had slide shows.

"We shared gas to take long trips. A lot of places wouldn't let us explore if we weren't a group."

"We got to see the things we talk about in class," Mitchell said.

Some of the members made a weekend trip to the Appalachian Mountains during the fall semester. Spring semester they made a trip to Mammoth Cave.

The club also cleaned up the preparation room, where equipment for polishing rocks is kept.

"The machines were in pretty bad shape. Now every one of them works," Mitchell said.

An interest in the horticulture industry was the only requirement for membership in the Horticulture Club, according to Kim Sage-Sowder, club president.

Sage-Sowder, a Morgantown senior, wanted to take learning and fun and mix them together.

"The group is like a family and we get a wide range of exposure," Sage-Sowder said.

The members of the Horticulture Club had no membership fee but they "did a lot of work," she said.

In the spring, the Horticulture Club sponsored a plant sale in the Environmental Science and Technology Building.

WHILE IN horticulture class, Ed Smith, a Fort Thomas sophomore, and John Schaffrick, an Elizabethtown senior, check the quality of poinsettias in the greenhouse. The Horticulture Club sold the plants in EST in November.

— Ron Bell

Gamma Theta Upsilon

Front row: Clovis C. Perry Jr., Kerry Metheny. Back row: Teresa Irwin, Kevin Mays, Conrad Moore

Geo Club

Front row: Vince Volkerding, Judy Piel, Joe Burris, Elaine Culron. Back row: Conrad Moore, David Brown, Kevin Mays, José B. Villegas, Kerry Metheny

Geology Club

Front row: Kerry Metheny, David Mitchell. Back row: Dallas McLoon, John Watson

Horticulture Club

Front row: Ellen Seles, Kimberly Sage-Sowder, Ellen Justiss, Ed Smith. Second row: Jim Martin, Dennis Drake, Tina Marie Bertscheiger, Javier Salteras. Back row: Richard Beckert, David Hull, Carl Pitchford, Steven Bown, Nick Kipper

Touch cont.

For the tenth consecutive year, the Industrial Education and Technology Club won an award in the homecoming float competition — this time it was the first-place award.

IETC was open to all students in the industrial education department and was affiliated with the Kentucky Industrial Education Association.

Terry Leeper, adviser of the club, said its purpose was "to develop leadership and responsible roles for the students."

The club sponsored a speaker's program, departmental newsletter and started building a scholarship fund.

"Being a member of IETC gives industrial education majors an opportunity to learn more about their field," Leeper said.

The Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers provided students with an extracurricular activity in technology skills through lectures, field trips, and service to local industries.

"We had speakers tell us what it's like to be out there on the job," Byron Watkins, a Morgantown junior and club vice president, said.

"At one meeting, a representative from General Motors came and told us what goes into making Corvettes," Watkins, a member of the club for three years, said.

Meetings were every two weeks.

"It's a lot of fun," Watkins said.

With approximately 25 members, the Institution Administration Society grew from the previous year. "We've really tried to push people to join, especially underclassmen," president Karen Cirulli said. In the past, most members had been upperclassmen.

Members had to be hotel-motel management or dietetics majors. Instructors helped to promote the group and recruit new members.

The club met every four weeks, and usually listened to a speaker at the meetings. "We try to further the student's knowledge in the hospitality and nutrition fields," Cirulli, a Painted Plains, N.Y., senior, said.

The club sponsored fund raisers throughout the year, and used the money for the cost of transportation to shows and other activities.

About 25 people attended a restaurant show held in Louisville during the fall semester.

For those students interested in horses, the Intercollegiate Horseman Association was the group in which they were probably involved.

Although most members were agriculture or pre-vet majors, the club was open to anyone. "The organization is open to anyone with an interest in horses," Kelly Greenwell, a Rineyville freshman, said. "It's a great opportunity to get out and meet people in the area."

The association, which had about 20 members, promoted horse sales and horse shows in the area. The club met about twice a month to organize shows and assign duties.

In the fall, some of the members of the group attended the Quarterhorse Congress meeting in Lexington. The group also planned to take a trip to the race track.

"The group opens a lot of horizons and opportunities in the field," Greenwell said.

HOOF FLEX is applied by Fran Bjalobok, a Bowling Green graduate student, and Jody Secondino, a junior from Terre Haute, Ind. They were learning the technique in basic equestrian class.

— Ray Thomas

Industrial Education and Technology Club

Front row: Ann Lester, Anita Murphy, Dolores Woods. Back row: Bryant Medley, Scott Stumbo, Mark Wooten, Jerry Gensheimer.

Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers

Front row: William C. Brutsche, Jerry Arlen Howard, Byron Watkins. Back row: Terry Shoulders, Terry Rose, David Bastien.

Institution Administration Society

Front row: Karen Strange, Karen M. Cirulli, Teresa Nissit, Kimberly Elbert. Back row: Beth Calvert, Dwayne Miller, Bobby Southerland, Angela L. Scott, Dr. Lou Elzacke.

Intercollegiate Horseman Association

Front row: Fernando Gonzalez, Mimi Maxson, Kelly Johnson, Dallas Melson. Back row: Gregory M. Wells, Donna M. Greenwell.

Touch cont.

Continuing a tradition of fraternity leadership and guidance, Inter-Fraternity Council logged what one member termed "another typical year."

Lee Grace, IFC academic vice president, said the year was uneventful for the organization.

"We sponsored a greek symposium and a leadership conference that was attended by over 200 greeks from across the state," Grace, a Southgate junior, said.

One change in the year was IFC's institution of an 11 p.m. curfew on fraternity rush parties, a move that was designed to reduce the complaints from neighbors of the greeks while helping to raise chapter grade-point averages.

A proposal to outlaw alcohol at rush parties was tabled until a study was completed on the feasibility of enforcing such a rule.

An alcohol awareness program was also implemented in an effort to increase the responsibility in alcohol use among the greeks, Grace said.

Planning programs for students in residence halls and serving as a mediator between campus residents and the administration were just two of the ideas behind Inter-Hall Council.

The group also sponsored Vegas Night which served as the main fund raiser for the year. According to Sandy Hill, a Muldraugh senior, the money made from the event was put back into the budget for more student programming.

"Together with Associated Student Government, we were able to get the administrative approval for a co-ed dorm on campus," Hill said.

Two new events for the campus were also introduced by IHC. Spirit Week was held dur-the University of Alabama-Birmingham basketball game. Hill, who served as the group's secretary, said she hoped it would become an annual event.

Western Affair, a street carnival-like event, was also sponsored during the spring semester.

"Several civic groups and campus organizations worked hard to make Western Affair a reality," Hill said.

International Graphics Inc. was an organization planned to help graphic students.

"It's a chance to get to know others in your field," Steve Finlay, a Tell City, Ind., junior, said.

The organization was open to any student in commercial art, architectural drafting, or technical illustration. The names of the members were printed in a book that was distributed by professionals in the field.

IN A CONCERT in the Ivan Wilson amphitheater, Beau Haddock, a Pembroke native, performs during Parents' Weekend. The concert was sponsored by Inter-Hall Council.

Inter-Fraternity Council

Front row: Dexter Castelli, William Chandler. Back row: David Davis, Paul Wellander, Jack Nunnally.

Inter-Hall Council

Front row: Jill Lytle, Neil Withers, Angela Badger, Sandra Hill, Deborah Skacim, Laurie Bryan. Back row: Allen Charlotte, Steve Stanley, Bryant Medley, Traci Turner, Renee Claypool, Danny Brad, Doug Beck, Mark Harritt.

Inter-Hall Council

Front row: Pamela Cummins, Melinda Milby, Donna Lindsey, Debra Anderson, Julianne Moore, Connie Toler. Back row: Carl Whitmer, Stanley Reagan, Ron Menard, Sheila Stockler, William Harrison, Rex Hunt, Delmer Esters, Melanie Alvey.

International Graphics Incorporated

Front row: Anna Roberts, Anita Murphy, Patricia Lowday, Ann Lester. Second row: Karen Copas, Teresa Towery, Chris Abell, Todd Thomas, Steve Finlay. Back row: Wanda Dye, Jerry Williams, Jim Hoffmann, Jon Payne, Mark Dayberry, Keith Briggs.

Touch cont.

With trips to Mammoth Cave and ball games, students in the International Student Organization became involved with life in Kentucky and at Western.

Last year there were over 200 international students at Western, although only about 20 were active in the organization.

Anyone with a "willingness to learn" was invited to join the group, according to Liz McGuire, a Bowling Green junior. "We want to get the international students involved in the campus," she said.

In the spring, members devoted much of their time to the International Exhibit held at the Garrett Conference Center. Articles from different countries were on display. In the evening there was a speaker from each country represented.

McGuire said the planning of the exhibit took time. "It takes a lot of time to find a good representative from each country who's willing to take the time," she said.

Their fund raising projects usually involved toothbrush sales; anything that helped to fight tooth decay.

They were the Junior Kentucky Dental Hygienist Association.

"It's an opportunity for hygienists to get together to talk about different points of view and talk about their profession," Donna Greer, a senior from Hendersonville, Tenn., said.

Members were students in the dental hygiene program.

"It's a way to learn about the benefits from your job," Greer said. "Members also get special insurance rates."

An oral presentation of research on table clinics won a first, second, and third-place award for the chapter. During the spring the chapter did the presentation again to the Kentucky Educational Dental Hygienists' Association in Louisville.

After graduation, members had the opportunity to join the American Dental Hygienists' Association.

For the 15 members of Kappa Tau Alpha, being in an honor society was more than just getting an honor.

Harry Allen, adviser to the journalism honor society, said,

"We don't just hand out an award and leave it at that. We try to perform some kind of service for students."

This service usually took the form of tutoring basic reporting students, which is a core class that all majors in the journalism department must take.

To be eligible for membership in KTA, one must have been a junior or senior, with a major in the journalism department and a 3.5 grade-point average.

KTA met three or four times a year and its new members were inducted in the spring.

"We notify the students who are eligible and encourage them to join," Allen said. "Tutoring offers the members of KTA a chance to improve their skills as well as help the basic reporting students."

Formerly the Kenpo-Karate Club, the Kenpo-Karate-Jujitsu-Brotherhood reorganized at Western under a new name that reflected the national reorganization of this unique branch of martial arts.

"The master of the original club in Hawaii decided it was time for the mainland clubs to develop some autonomy," head instructor Mike Shacklette said.

"A new hierarchy of leaders was formed on the continental and regional clubs were created."

Western's brotherhood belonged to the South Eastern Kenpo-Karate-Jujitsu-Brotherhood.

Brotherhoods don't formally compete with one another, they meet and train together. This gives the individual chapters an opportunity to view other brotherhoods' training methods.

The brotherhood was open to all students and faculty, and its 200 members ranked it among the larger campus clubs in the south.

Benefits were many for the club members that stuck with the strictly regimented training.

"Through our studies we gain an understanding of body, mind, and health," Shacklette said. "People who stay are unique, and are rewarded with a self confidence that make you look at your life as an accomplishment."

Better health, sharpened coordination, and a growth in self confidence were all cited by Shacklette.

About 50 members were active in the Kentucky Association of Nursing Students last year. Any nursing students at Western were invited to join the association.

"It's a club where you help each other out," said Lisa Higdon, an Owensboro junior. "It gets students together and gets you ready for the state wards."

Members paid $17 to become members of the KANS and for more, they were able to join the National Association of Nursing Students.

The club met twice a month to discuss events and listen to speakers. In February, members attended the Kentucky Association of Nursing Clubs Convention. There they viewed exhibits and listened to lectures.

A successful fund raiser for the group was selling T-shirts. The shirts were printed with "I'm WKU Nursing" on the front.

WARM February day gives Kenpo-Karate-Jujitsu-Brotherhood Club a place to practice outside. Head instructor Mike Shacklette, a Louisville senior, and Larry Boulard, a Scottsville senior, were teaching Sylvia Young, a Louisville junior, to throw a punch.

— Bobby Roe

International Student Organization

Front row: Rebecca Appenfelder, Liz McGuire. Second row: Guillermo Arbelaz, Mario Villegas, Nobuhiko Koyama, Ivan Puentes. Back row: Danny Rodriguez, Kathy McLaughlin, Leonardo Avier, Orlando Rangel, Jose Diaz.

Junior Kentucky Dental Hygienist Association

Front row: Elizabeth Pindexter, Kim Riggs, Jacklyn Caldwell, Sandra Clark, Sherry Peilgo, Cindy Huff, Kristi Varot. Second row: Marianne Keach, Liz Kinser, Niki Rorer, Pam Duncan, Mary Bray, Alison Cummings, Valerie Veler, Mary Higdon. Back row: Amy McDonald, Mary Ellen Wickham, Jenni Tarter, Beth Terrell, Angie Smith, Julie Frigo, Bill Kelly, Dianna Anderson, Diane Nash.

Kenpo Karate Jujitsu-Brotherhood

Front row: Bob Wurster, Mike Shacklette, Sylvia Young. Back row: Kelly Lawson, Teresa Towery, Scott Harris, Kenneth Lambin.

Kentucky Association of Nursing Students

Front row: Janice Ranger, Joan Adams, Lisa Higdon.

Touch cont.

Although the fate of Western's chapter of the Kentucky Intercollegiate Student Legislature was in limbo at the end of the year, "the group managed to draft more legislation than the other 10-member schools combined," according to Barbara Boling, KISL president.

"KISL is an organization that establishes legislation that is presented to the Kentucky State Legislature," Bill Veneman, a Louisville senior, said.

About 25 students, most of whom were government majors, were involved in the organization.

"The main benefit from KISL is obtaining a better understanding of the legislative process," Boling, a Gallatin, Tenn., senior, said.

The chapter traveled to Frankfort during the fall where all 10-member schools debated, amended and defeated or passed the student-authored legislation. The bills signed by the student governor were presented to the Kentucky General Assembly for their consideration.

KISL faced some financial difficulty toward the end of the year. A proposal to become a standing committee of Associated Student Government was tabled until further questions could be answered.

"A growing organization making itself known to Western," was the way Alecia Pollock described the Kentucky Public Health Association.

Pollock, a Hopkinsville graduate student, was president of the 35-member organization.

"The organization is designed to educate students on issues in health, both in Kentucky and in the nation, and to present changes occurring in the health field to students," Pollock said.

Most of the members were either community health or health care administration majors, but membership was open to all students majoring in the allied health professions.

Members of the organization were involved in the homecoming festivities and Western Affair.

"Representatives from the CAP Center, Warren County Health Department and various health professions spoke at the club meetings," Pollock said.

Members also attended the state convention which was held in Louisville in April.

From football games to an inaugural parade, the Marching Band entertained its audiences.

The band's most visible performances were the halftime shows for the home football games.

"Each halftime show began with 'Artistry and Rhythm.' Then we altered each show to give a little variety," Lolita Yates, drum major, said.

Yates, a Franklin sophomore, said they usually had a week between performances to learn the workings of the new show.

The band traveled to Louisville and Richmond to play for the football games at the University of Louisville and Eastern Kentucky. In December the band played in the governor's inaugural parade for Martha Layne Collins.

The band members arrived in Bowling Green before the start of the fall semester to begin practicing music and formations, Yates said.

Students who were secretarial or business education majors were invited to join the National Collegiate Association for Secretaries.

There were about 25 members, an increase over previous years. "We had a good turnout this year. There was a lot of interest," Mechelle Thompson, a Rineyville junior, said.

The association was a branch of the Professional Secretaries International at the college level.

"Being in the organization looks good on a resume. Many secretaries are required to be in the organization," Thompson said.

Members sold candy bars to help finance a trip to a convention. At the convention members attended seminars and found the latest news on computers and word processors.

Helping students understand what is happening in the field of speech pathology was what the National Student Speech Language and Hearing Association was all about.

"Membership in the organization was up about 25 percent over last year," Maria Noe, chapter president, said.

The Lexington junior said the increase was largely due to an increase in the speech pathology program.

"Funds raised from a raffle were used to buy supplies for the speech pathology clinic on campus," she said.

There were 30 members who represented the local group at the national convention which was held in Cincinnati.

The group also attended the state convention in Louisville during the spring semester.

A LAST-MINUTE rehearsal gives Ma Cleavinger, a Bowling Green sophomore, and Jim Apple, a Nashville, Tenn., freshman, a chance to practice their music. They were practicing before the start of the University of Louisville game.

— Ron Bell

Kentucky Intercollegiate State Legislature

Front row: Tamara Branstetter, Barbara Boling, Penny Gilbert. Second row: Sandra K. Carroll, Jeffrey B. Woodley, Kimberly A. Winkenhof. Back row: Allan Kujala, Garth Whicker, Michael J. Sweeney, David V. Salyers.

Kentucky Public Health Association

Front row: Cynthia Hanken, Alecia Pollock, Lory Palmer, Becky Shopp. Second row: Laurie Hodges, Coretha Skaggs, Dr. Ray Biggerstaff, Jay Film, Luann Hughes.

National Collegiate Assoc. for Secretaries

Front row: Lori Mellow, Patricia Foley, Debra Hank, Laura Braun. Second row: Nancy Madison, Veronica Long, Patricia Doolin, Shannon Smith, Lettie Pike.

National Student Speech and Hearing Association

Front row: Vanessa Kelly, Beverly Littlejohn, Terri McClure. Back row: Julie Rusey, Tammy Dorris, Maria Weston, Maria Noe.

—Tony Kiser

Navigators

Front row: Anne Snapp, Deanna Peters, Caryl Boatman. Second row: Lou Bloss, Art Bryson, Jennifer Gibson, Kenny Lesley. Back row: Mark Payne, Jim Henderson, Pam Denney, Ann Borgending, Harold Loyd, Gary Baker.

Omicron Delta Kappa

Front row: Vernon Pruitt, Carol Vanlibber, Carla Wuchner, Kimberly Wickenhafer. Second row: Ford Threlkeld, David Major, Patrick Jenkins Jr., Sally Ann Koenig, Jerry Wilder.

Touch

cont.

Graduation took its toll on the National Press Photographers Association.

In 1984 the majority of NPPA's officers left to assume professional positions.

"The club hasn't been able to maintain the level of activity that it has in the past," member John Tayman, Littleton, Colo., senior, said, "mainly due to the lack of executive officers — we just haven't had the opportunity to elect new ones."

Despite these problems, NPPA managed to bring in several noted speakers, like Louisville Courier-Journal photographer Bill Luster and Pittsburgh Press graphics editor J. Bruce Baumann.

NPPA also took 20 of its members to a national convention and seminar in Atlanta.

The three-day affair brought together some of the best photographers in the nation, and allowed students to ask the professionals for advice and to show their student portfolios.

Discipline was the main thing

AT A photojournalism workshop, Kevin Eans, an Owensboro junior, empties chemicals in a temporary darkroom. The workshop was held in September in Morgantown.

stressed by the Navigators, according to Lou Bloss, president.

"If a person isn't sure where he's standing with the Lord, we try to help him find out," he said.

The Navigators was a Christian organization that held regular Bible studies and other events. "Every other Thursday we had a rally and on the other Thursday, we had a fun night," Pam Denney, a member of the Navigators, said.

Last year the Navigators received new representatives. Mike and Jenny Cunningham from Knoxville, Tenn., worked along with Ann Butler, who has helped the Navigators for several years, as representatives to the Navigators.

There were approximately 25 to 30 members.

The Navigators turn out quality people," Bloss said. "People get foundations for the rest of their lives. They build their own characters."

With one small step they doubled enrollment, increased their funding and "brought the circle to life," Omicron Delta Kappa vice president David Major said.

The organization had previously been open to seniors with at least a 3.5 grade-point average who had exhibited a "conspicuous achievement in life." That was amended to include juniors, and the minimum GPA was lowered to 3.3.

"This year has been the jumping off point of ODK," Major, a Hopkinsville senior, said. "We've broadened ourselves from a paper organization to one that can become a factor in expressing campus opinions."

The circle, as ODK is known, provides students with reference services and scholarship opportunities, along with the chance to interact with ODK alumni, like President Donald Zacharias, on a more personal level.

Major summed up the thrust of the new movement in the circle: "We want to act as an organization of leaders, not as a leader organization."

Recognizing students who had a high standard of leadership in greek activities, encouraging them to continue along that line, and inspiring others to strive for similar attainment, was the philosophy of the Order of Omega.

"You need to have at least a junior standing and a minimum grade-point average of 3.0. The society selected its members based on point standings which the greek members accumulated through academics and leadership," Susan Albert, president, said.

"There were approximately 20 members — 3 percent of the greek population. It's an honor and you acquire recognition," Albert, a Paducah junior, said.

The society brought the most representative fraternity and sorority members together and created an organization which will help to mold the institution on questions of local and inter-collegiate affairs, she said.

In their first year on campus, the Organization of the Red Knights made a name for themselves.

Formally the Society of Pershing Rifles, the group tried to reform as the Red Knights.

The purpose of the organization was to emphasize precision drill and rifle handling in drill and ceremony.

Under the direction of William Cavin, they performed as the color guard at all football and basketball games and at homecoming.

Order of Omega

Front row: Sue Long, Carla Wuchner, Brett Ballard, Dave Greening. Back row: Susan Albert, Bill Booth, John Cahalia, Kevin Atwood.

Organizations of Red Knights

Front row: Kevin Neal, Patrick Belanger, Lisa Cossey, K. D. Neal, Brock Peterson. Back row: Kyle Phillips, Dorothy Metzmeier, Jeff Johnson, Trudy Elliot, James Schell, Leonard Gilbert.

Writing their future

Photos by Bobby Roe

They keep Western's news pulse. They preserve slices of life. They freeze reality forever on the printed page.

They are the 50 or so students staffing Western's newspaper, the College Heights Herald, and yearbook, the Talisman.

The Herald provides a running account of life at Western. Between 29 and 30 issues are published on Tuesdays and Thursdays each spring and fall. The advertising staff sells ads and composes them on Sunday and Tuesday nights. The editorial staff puts the news together on Monday and Wednesday nights. The paper is distributed on campus and in Bowling Green.

The Talisman, unlike the Herald, is a year-long project. Staff meetings are held at the beginning of the fall semester and a theme is chosen. Assignments are given throughout the year, photos are taken, layouts are designed, stories are written and edited, and the final product arrives off the press in September.

But, while the Herald and Talisman give the news to students, the students on staff give a lot of themselves.

And they get a lot in return. "The Herald made me decide to do what I'm doing now," said Dan Lynch, editorial cartoonist for the Journal-Gazette in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Lynch enrolled at Western in 1968 as a mass communications and psychology double major. He drew cartoons in 1968, 1969 and 1972.

"I was doing two cartoons a week for the Herald when I left," Lynch said. "That paved the way for doing five cartoons a week for the Indiana Daily Student at Bloomington. I never enrolled as a student at IU; I just worked for the student newspaper for three years."

Lynch began working at the Journal-Gazette in 1975 and went to work for the Kansas City Star in 1978. He moved back to Fort Wayne in 1981, he said, "because Fort Wayne is really home."

People who work for the Herald, as well as the paper itself, provide staffers with the initiative to pursue journalism as a career.

Scott Appelwhite is an Associated Press White House photographer. His office is in the White House, he flies on Air Force One and he travels to Camp David with the president.

But Appelwhite wouldn't even be a photographer if another student, George Wedding, hadn't gotten him interested in photography.

Appelwhite and Wedding enrolled in a photography class, but Appelwhite couldn't get in because it was full. Wedding and David Sutherland, an instructor in the journalism department, encouraged Appelwhite to take pictures anyway. They helped him learn to process and print the film he shot.

"I would go out and shoot my film around campus, and when the advanced class was in the darkroom, I'd go in and keep a low profile and pretend I was in a beginning class."

"I began to disappear from classes because I was in the darkroom all the time," he said.

"The Herald was good because it gave me a practical start in the work place," Appelwhite said. "I wouldn't be doing now what I'm doing if I hadn't got the practical experience."

"I got lots of support from Mr. A. (Herald adviser Bob Adams) and other staffers," he said. "They would take an interest in nurturing what energy you had."

Adams says that motivating staffers is part of his job, and that the Herald is a tool for students to use their creative energies in a positive way.

"The Herald serves two purposes," Adams said. "One is to keep people informed about Western. I think we do that better than anyone else around. The other is to provide invaluable experience toward students' career goals."

There are some things the Herald could do to make the work experience even more realistic. One of the worst things the Herald does, he said, is not enforce deadlines. Missing a deadline on a professional paper would mean the writer's story wouldn't be printed, and a wire service story would probably run instead. Doing that would teach the importance of deadlines, Adams said, but would also be a disservice to the readers.

"Nobody has yet gotten used to the idea of putting out a paper that is not the best that we could possibly do," he said. "We try to put out a perfect paper, but we haven't done it yet. But the people here care about the Herald."

"The advertising people are down here to get some practical experience in advertising," Jo Ann Thompson, publications advertising adviser, said. "They get experience with selling ads, doing paste up and taking care of accounts. It gives them contact with a lot of local and national businesses and helps get them that first interview."

Pam Ralston, a Glasgow senior and Herald ad manager for the spring semester, said that she has learned what newspaper ad work is like.

"It's given me a lot of opportunities to meet people," she said. "You get to meet a lot of people in Bowling Green and you learn how to sell both the Herald and yourself."

Terry Vander Heyden is in his third year of advising the staff of the Talisman. He also feels that students on his staff put in an extra effort to produce a yearbook that is for the readers.

"Their main responsibility," he said, "is to publish a book that accurately reflects the school year. They try to be responsible to the readers and not put things in for their own interest. I think they do an excellent job of it."

Staff members need to have a special attitude to work for the Talisman, Vander Heyden said.

"Are they committed? Are they conscientious? Do they have an optimistic outlook? If they have that, they can learn the skills," he said.

He hopes Talisman staffers learn the technical skills associated with publishing and management.

"I think that just learning to work with others under pressure, organizing oneself, putting a person's creative skills to full use and developing things from imagination to the final product are major benefits."

—Greg Lovitt

Vander Heyden said. "I see that developed most throughout the year."

"I've learned a lot about time management," Roger Cunningham, a Cadiz senior and this year's Talisman editor, said. "By doing this and classwork, you find you need to set priorities or you'll never get anything done."

"It's also improved my writing skills, mainly by editing copy," Cunningham said. "It becomes easy after awhile to look at someone else's copy and edit it. You learn from other's mistakes."

Margaret Shirley has been a copy editor at the Dallas Times Herald for the past two years. She has also been editor of both the Talisman and the College Heights Herald. She learned to work better with people at Western, she said.

"It taught me how not to panic and how to deal with reporters who don't always know what to do," Shirley said. "The Talisman gave me more rapport with reporters. I did more rewriting. I can tell when a paragraph is really badly written. I learned to put information together fast."

She didn't learn how to deal with more experienced people, he said, and in Dallas she has had to get used to telling a 15-year veteran reporter to change a lead paragraph, or tell an older editor to write a better headline.

Ron Bell, a Bowling Green senior, said he learned a lot about people while he was Herald photo editor in the spring.

"People generally get by with just what they can," Bell said.

"I'm more aware of people's motives."

"It's also helped me to realize problems my bosses have: motivating a staff, organizing and handling responsibilities. I can see how easily someone can have a nervous breakdown," he said.

Bob Skipper works as a reporter and photographer at the Park City Daily News. Skipper was a Herald photographer and Talisman co-editor. His first job after graduating from Western in 1982 was as an assistant editor and photographer at the weekly Franklin Favorite in Franklin.

"Working on the Talisman taught me how to meet a deadline," he said. "I got a taste of all the different facets of the job before I went down to Franklin."

Tommy Newton, a McQuady senior, was Herald editor in the fall of 1983, managing editor in the spring of 1983 and has spent six semesters on the Herald staff.

"The biggest pain in working for the Herald," he said, "is going to class while you're doing it — try to learn something you don't really care about."

It's the practical knowledge and personal growth that make the publications' staffers different from their peers and make them better prepared for the workplace.

That's what motivates them to go on to other places like Fort Wayne, the White House and Dallas, and continue to do the same thing: take the news pulse, preserve slices of life and freeze reality on the printed page.

Lou Bloss

AT THE Northern Kentucky women's game, publications photographers T. J. Hamilton, a Philpot junior, and Bobby Roe, an Isom senior, shoot from under a press table. The two were taking pictures there after a referee made them move out of the players' way.

WHILE HE studies his notes, Mark Edelen, a Springfield sophomore, prepares to type a story on the video display terminal. Edelen was a reporter for the Herald.

—Bobby Roe

IN THE Talisman office, Gary Briggs, a Goodlettsville, Tenn., junior, types outlines for the 1984 book. Briggs was the classes editor.

—Bobby Roe

Touch

cont.

The olympics were a success, but they weren't the ones held in Los Angeles. These olympics were held at Lampkin Park in Bowling Green, and the olympians were all greeks from Western's fraternities and sororities.

The fourth annual Pledge Olympics were sponsored by the Panhellenic Association and were, in the words of secretary Claire Groemling, a Louisville junior, "an overwhelming success."

Adding to Panhellenic's successes for the year was a spring sorority rush sponsored by the group. It was the first year for spring rush, formal rush being previously limited to the fall.

In January, Panhellenic sponsored a weekend leadership seminar that was open to faculty, greek representatives and consultants from five Kentucky universities.

"It was an all-day affair," Groemling said. "With programs from 9 to 5, it was a wonderful learning experience."

Phi Alpha Theta was the international honor society in history. To be a member, a student must have completed 12 hours in history, have a 3.2 grade-point average in history and a 3.0 overall GPA.

Richard Stone, the adviser for the Eta Pi chapter, said the honor society had about 25 members.

"We had a fairly full program for an honor society," Stone said. The group's biggest event was their college bowl, in which the chapter played against faculty.

"It's a really big deal for us. Some members even come dressed in historical costumes," Stone said.

Phi Alpha Theta also sponsored "The Student Researcher" — a publication of research done by history students.

The Eta Pi chapter also held an end-of-the-year banquet. "It's a social occasion in which we had off-campus speakers come. Most of the speakers were historians of some prominence in the area," Stone said.

Phi Alpha Theta also held a Christmas party, went on several field trips and attended a regional meeting at the University of Kentucky.

Stone said that the history department encouraged them to be an active honor society. "We really let the students decide what they want to do, though."

Club historian Nathan Yoder, a Bowling Green senior, said the society "promoted camaraderie among history students and faculty."

Their meetings usually consisted of student of faculty presentations or research.

Phi Beta Lambda tried to involve students with the business community, president Doug Mefford said. Any business student could join the professional business association.

The group met once a month. "We tried to have a business person speak for at least part of the meeting," Mefford, a Bowling Green junior, said. The other half of the meeting covered general business.

About five members attended the state-wide Fall Leadership Conference which was held in Louisville. Another leadership conference was attended in February. Members were involved in contests and had a chance to compete at the national level.

The group tried to incorporate some social activity with the business aspect. "We tried to allow some social time at the end of each meeting," Mefford said.

About 30 students were involved in the organization. Mefford said that was about the same as the previous year.

At the beginning of each semester the group sent notices to dorms and received recommendations from teachers

Freshmen with high academic achievement were invited to join Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman honor society.

"The society rewards students for high academic achievement," Brian Peters, a Bowling Green senior, said.

The club only met once during the year to initiate new members. Officers held regular meetings before initiation.

Having a grade-point average over 3.5 was the only requirement for membership. About 20 were initiated into the society last year.

URING THE PLEDGE OLYMPICS, Phi Tau Delta members Billy Lester, a Bertsville junior; Bill Booth, a Benton senior; Steve Kiehn, a Stockton, Calif., freshman; and Steve Wilke, a Ft. Thomas freshman, participate in a pledge educator carry race. They placed first in the event, which was sponsored by the Panhellenic Association.

— Bobby Roe

Panhellenic Assoc.

Front row: Jane Purcell, Esi Smith. Second row: Karen Himes, Lori Knight, Claire Groemling, Susan Albert. Back row: Toni Flowers, Angie Schieman, Dana Chapman, Eva Sutton, Janice Halsey.

Phi Alpha Theta

Front row: Tamara Branstetter, Kim Schmitt, Mary Lindsey. Back row: Nate Yoder, Alan Gibson, David Gray, Christy Spurlock.

Phi Beta Lambda

Front row: Sue Spino, Patty Cottrell. Second row: David Leath, Tracy Holman, Lesley Shelton. Back row: Doug Mefford, Lee Carter, David Mendeth, Bob Jenkins.

Phi Eta Sigma

Front row: Cynthia Faust, Susan May, Bonnie Burden, Barbie Hulsey. Back row: David Gray, David Lunsford, Debra Harris, Ronnie McCamish.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia

Front row: Scott Eaves, Andy Reynolds, Kevin Jackson, Kevin Briley, Scott Majors, Brian Cross, David Smith. Second row: Eric Marlow, Charles Curry, Brett Bolland, Jay Steele, Timothy Hudnall, Mark Eblen, Jeff Mallyson, Steve Ragland. Back row: James Clark, Tommy Hines, Robert Casdill, Robert Bryant, John Leffert, Kyle Cothron, James Apple, Darryl Dockery, Fred Smith.

Phi Upsilon Omicron

Front row: Robin Payne, Ann Jenkins. Second row: Kim Snider, Angela Scott, Lora Morrow. Back row: Dr. Joyce Rasdall, Deborah McBride, Terri Carrier, Jan Holliday, Alice Coop.

Physical Education Majors Club

Front row: Michelle Myers, Leisa Jo Cotton, LeiLani Sledge. Back row: Lorinda Matson, Todd Steward, Burch Ogebbey, Kandi Profitt.

Pi Delta Phi

Front row: Mindy DeBert, Susan Ross. Back row: James Babcock, Janette Rodriguez, Ben Markham.

Pi Omega Pi

Front row: Joan Dupont, Libby Downs, Sandra Shultz. Back row: Marsha Chatham, Mary Crisp, Mary Holman, Kenneth Utley.

Touch

cont.

Playing an active part in campus activities as well as conducting activities of its own kept the members of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia involved.

The 33-member professional music fraternity was open for membership to anyone with a background in music.

"We ranked third in the nation for the chapter with the most pledge recruits," Tim Hudnall, public relations director, said.

The group participated in Phonothon, Kentucky Music Educators Association's solo and ensemble festival, and sponsored an all-greek Christmas caroling event throughout campus.

"Although we are not a member of Inter-Fraternity Council, we try to involve ourselves with the social greeks," Hudnall, an Owensboro senior, said.

"Phi Mu Alpha brings people that have an interest in music together in a brotherhood bond," he said.

"It's an honor to be in the club and meet a lot of new people. I gained a lot of friends with the same background and same interests as myself," Melissa Marsch, a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron, said.

—Tammie Wilson

In order to be a member of this home economics honor society, a student had to have been in the home economics department at least three semesters and have a minimum grade-point average of 3.4.

The fall semester they did volunteer work at the Girls' Club. They were also involved in a program called "Eyes for Elderly" where they collected old eye glasses and gave them to the elderly.

This was the first year they went to local high schools to promote the home economics department at Western.

"We wanted to promote each area of home economics and show that we're one unit," Marsch, a Lewisport senior, said.

Members of the Physical Education Majors Club kept clock time for the Wendy's Classic and numerous bike races. They also sponsored a jump-a-thon to raise money, according to Kandi Profitt, secretary of the club.

"We try to get more ac-quanted with physical education majors and we like to get out and have fun," Profitt, a Winchester sophomore said.

A major in physical education and a $5 fee are the only requirements for membership in the club. In February, some of the members attended a national convention in Biloxi, Miss.

Pi Delta Phi, the French honor society, sponsored a dinner opened to students and faculty in all the languages. Guests were to bring a dish traditional to their respective language.

"It was a way to give Pi Delta Phi more identity," Mindy DeBert, president, said.

To be a member, a student must have had a grade-point average of 3.0, both in French and in overall university work. To become members, students also must have had recommendations by the three French professors.

The members participated in scholarly and social activities.

"I really enjoyed getting with people. You see a different view on life by learning from other students who have gotten a chance to go to France," DeBert, an Atlanta senior, said.

STUDENTS sing in the All-Greek Christmas Carol sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia. The group started caroling at Potter Hall and ended at President Zacharias' house.

"I also liked getting to know the French professors better," she said.

Students with at least a 3.0 grade-point average and a business education major were eligible for membership in Pi Omega Pi.

The seven-member club met once a month, and had a member-elect meeting at the beginning of the fall. Members were chosen from a list of eligible business education majors.

"We try to give students an opportunity to see what's going on in business education," president Joan Dupont, an Elizabethtown senior, said. "We professionally prepare students for teaching."

Some members attended the National Business Association convention in October. They also helped with the Automation Conference held on campus.

Pompon Squad

Front row: Sheila Bartlett, Lisa Poole, Mary Green, Lisa Burgett. Back row: Linda Hudson, Darlene Ralph, Shari Dutton, Maria Crow, Donna McLemore.

Psi Chi

Front row: Ruth Miller, Lori Rone, Kelly Smith, Tina Thomas, Melissa Overstreet. Back row: John Houston, Kelly Tyre, John O'Connor, Paul Secore, Doug Bradley, Loretta McBride.

Public Administration Club

Front row: Shelby Stuart, Geneva Wells. Back row: Alan Kujala, Barbara Biling, Gregory Baldwin, Glenn Sargent.

Public Relations Student Society of America

Front row: Dr. Robert Blann, Barbara Dunn, Kathy Manford, Tina Combs, Mona Dever, Elizabeth Clarke. Back row: Molly Bogdan, Patricia Sharp, George Morris, Laura Nagy, Patti Loizzo, Mark Galvin.

Recreation Majors Clubs

Front row: Cindy Strine, Sue McGowan, Jo Verner. Second row: Darinda Ramey, Valerie Jiritseno, Beth Nord, Lu Trent. Back row: Janice Huffines, Woody Tichenor, Jill Lasher, Charlotte Williams, Mel Andrews.

Touch

cont

Although they were a hit with the crowd, the new uniforms for the Pompon Squad failed to get total approval from members of the club.

"We lost about eight girls over the uniforms," member Mary Green said. "They thought they were too skimpy and were uncomfortable wearing them."

The squad, whose number fluctuates between 10 and 20, performed at select home basketball games.

In preparation for their performances, the squad practiced three nights a week for about two hours. Their work was paid off with the fan support and response at the games.

Being a member gave students some advantages.

Green, a Gamaliel freshman, said, "I've gotten a lot more dates this year."

Anyone interested in pre-law was invited to join the Pre-Law Club.

"We familiarize members with law schools and the deans," Cathy Holley, a Cincinnati junior, said.

Members met every two weeks. During the meeting members listened to various speakers, including law school deans and admissions officers.

During the fall, members went to the University of Kentucky Law School and to Vanderbilt in the spring.

"I was able to get more exposure to the admissions procedure and the full curriculum by being a member of the club," Holley said.

Psi Chi gave students an opportunity to meet a lot of people and get exposure in the field of psychology. Kelly Tyre, president of the organization, said.

Psi Chi was reinstated in 1981 after folding in 1978. The membership was about 30 members.

To be a member of Psi Chi, students had to have an interest in psychology. For membership in the national organization, the student had to have at least a 3.3 grade-point average and 12 hours in the department of psychology, according to Tyre, a Shepherdsville junior.

The group sold doughnuts and coffee in the Psi Chi room for their fund-raising project.

During the spring, Psi Chi sent a delegate to the national convention in New Orleans.

With about 12 members, the Public Administration Club found itself in a transition period at year.

"We're so small, we're mainly trying to keep going," Glenn Sargent, a Carlisle graduate student, said.

Anyone interested in the fields of government or business was invited to join the club. Meetings were held once a month. During the fall, Napoleon Avery of the Internal Revenue Service in Cincinnati spoke to the group.

"We cover things that aren't covered in class," Sargent said. The club gives experience to people that are already in the field.

Interaction with people is a complicated business. Learning the ins and outs of public relations is a never-ending process.

The Public Relations Student Society of America was dedicated to giving the student practical experience in public relations.

Interaction with professionals was at the heart of the PRSSA program. The PRSSA "Partners" program teamed members with local professionals in the field of public relations, according to member Barbara Dunn.

An internship program with Public Relation Society, the parent organization of PRSSA, linked students seeking internships in public relations with work. The PRIDE, Public Relations Internships to Develop Expertise, program selected applicants and linked them with an employer.

PRSSA brought guest speakers to Western to speak to its members. National conventions provided workshops to keep students informed in new trends in public relations and to help them meet professionals.

"We build professionalism and give experience," Dunn, a Centerville, Ohio, senior, said. "Sure, looking good on a resume is one thing, but being a member shows you've done something."

With the national slogan of "Life, be in it," in mind, the Recreation Majors Club added its own twist: "Rec Club, be in it."

Membership shot from 10 students to over 45 as the club increased its involvement in the National Recreation and Park Association's campaign to increase awareness in personal health and recreation.

"Life, be in it," was the official slogan of the national campaign," Darinda Ramey, club president, said. "And our club sold buttons with the phrase on it to help raise money so we could attend national workshops."

Along with the buttons, decals and T-shirts emblazoned with the slogan also were sold.

Marketing techniques for the items were taught at the Kentucky Recreation and Park Association conference held in Owensboro during December.

"About 15 of our members attended," Ramey, a Morehead senior, said. "It was really beneficial. You just couldn't lose, experience wise."

DURING halftime of the University South Alabama game, Heather Duncan, a Newburgh, Ind., junior, performs to "Beat It." It was Duncan's first year on the Pompon Squad.

— Bobby Rose

Touch

cont.

In the modern language department, the Russian Club worked to inform the students about the aspects of the Russian language and culture.

Mania Ritter, faculty adviser, worked with the students to help them better understand the attitudes of the Russians.

"Many Americans don't understand Russian culture," Ritter said. "By informing students, our goal is to alleviate that problem."

The work of C-Company, the 11th regiment of Scabbard and Blade, is designed to further the leadership of the cadets in ROTC.

Scabbard and Blade is an honorary organization for ROTC students. Members must be at least sophomores and have a minimum grade-point average of 2.5. The cadets must also have leadership potential and high moral standards.

The society was responsible for the planning of the Military Ball in November. They were also involved with the Special Olympics, and sang Christmas carols for the elderly.

Scabbard and Blade also sponsored guest speakers. During the fall semester Dwight Pounds, a major in the Air Force reserves, showed slides from his experiences in Germany in the early 1960s and gave a lecture titled "Berlin before the Wall."

"The benefits are not just something that jump out at you and you know they're there," Don Davis, an Russellville senior, said.

"Through the work we do we hope to build character and leadership abilities," Davis said.

"Scabbard and Blade gives us a chance to get together and work on leadership," Bruce Kieta, executive officer of the society said. "It's given me more experience than I ever expected."

"Anything that encourages academics benefits Western," Karen McDonald, Sigma Tau Delta president, said. "And honor societies certainly encourage academics."

The English honor society promoted an interest in the study of literature through programs and social functions designed to bring students and English faculty members together.

The society merged with an English honors forum last year. Faculty members lectured during these meetings, which were held bi-weekly. The theme for the fall semester was "Women in Literature," and "Humor in Literature" was the theme for the spring semester.

"Since we've merged there are a lot more active members," McDonald said.

A 3.0 grade-point average was required to be a member.

Some of the members attended the national convention in Athens, Ala., where author James Dickey spoke about his novel "Deliverance."

"The biggest benefit of being a member is getting to know faculty members and other students with similar interests," McDonald said.

Think of Kentucky and one picture bluegrass, horses, and Kentucky Fried Chicken — but skiing?

"Sure," Ski Club present

Mike Willett said. "We've one of the strongest chapters in the nation. Kentucky is country."

About 60 people agreed him. That was the enrollment this growing club.

"Last year we had about members," Willett said, "organized a membership, and we got it up to about 60."

Planning ski trips in tucky's southern weather be difficult, but the club spur-of-the-moment trips to areas such as Paoli Peaks Ski Butler.

One trip that wasn't spur-of-the-moment was a Christmas vacation journey to Steam Springs, Colo.

"We had about 40 people go," Willett said. "We to chartered bus out and stay condominiums once we there. It was, in a word, incredible."

IN THE Garrett Ballroom, Mark P man, an Alexandria senior, and Sacksteder, his finance from Alexandria, danced at the Military Ball. At the President Donald Zacharias was cioned as First Colonel.

— T. J. Hamilton

Russian Club

Front row: Annetta Haywood, Michael Paul Luster, Lisa Bean, Mania Ritter. Second row: James Hood, Beverly Bow, Amy Decker, Douglas Pickett, Kim Schmitt.

Scabbard and Blade

Front row: Harold Baldwin, John Keeney, Leslie Stewart, Marsha Bullfin, Lisa Cooney. Second row: John Shupp, Michael Brantley, Max Moss, Michael Berry, Mark Pfaffman, Bruce Kieta. Back row: Payne, Mark Ford, Timothy Fowlkes, Wes Paul Ashby, Roy Hanson, Jim Cuntney, Don

Phi Alpha Theta

Front row: Joan Flora, Kimberly Houk. Back row: Chris Summers, Terri Pullen, David Major.

Ski Club

Front row: Gayle Kindred, Katty Davidson, Suzanne Boone, Fulton Ray, Jim Langston. Second row: Michael Willett, Bob Masley, Betsy DeKoster, Danny Metzger, Page Duker, Marty Stephens. Back row: Tim Nichol, Tim Doyle, John Jones, David Lee, Woody Tichenor, David Scharlotte, Adam Bolinger, Drew Brahes.

Touch cont.

Achieving advanced knowledge and promoting education in the field of manufacturing technology were two of the ideas behind the Society of Manufacturing Engineers.

"We went on plant tours to see what kind of manufacturing technology is being used to give us different ideas about the field," Phil Bieber, a Radcliff senior and the society's recorder, said.

The members got a free SME monthly magazine. Bieber said that they could learn a lot from the publication.

The club sponsored Technology Honors Day for high school students. Booths were set up to show different technological processes, such as woodworking and steel.

The Society of Physics Students switched presidents in the middle of the semester but the organization kept up their regular pace of work.

According to Jeff Warnecke, the membership this year was larger compared to previous years.

A $10 annual fee and an interest in physics were the only requirements for membership.

Under the direction of adviser Frank Six, the members were the key benefactors in running the physics labs.

"We prepared the lab packages that came from the bookstore for the students," Warnecke said.

During the spring, the society held a special meeting with guest speakers discussing the topic of black holes.

Some members of the organization went to the national convention in New Orleans during the spring semester.

The Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, was interested in improving the skills of its members and promoting the journalism program by exposing student journalists to professionals, Jamie Morton, president, said.

SDX sponsored an employment seminar during the spring semester, bringing in professional journalists to teach classes on how students should go about getting summer jobs and internships.

Western's SDX chapter had representatives at their national convention in San Francisco, where the chapter was recognized as one of the outstanding chapters in the region.

"Members received valuable experience from meeting professionals, but SDX also helped students interact with faculty and other student journalists, not just through publications," Morton said.

"We're a professionally oriented group," Morton, a Bowling Green junior, said. Through the organization, students were exposed to what journalism is like in the 'real world,' she said.

Members of Sigma Delta Chi

— Mary Ann Lyons

ANCHOR WOMAN Jackie Hays, of Channel 11 — WHAS-TV, talks with Brian Foote, a Louisville senior, and Barry Rose, a Bowling Green senior, after a Sigma Delta Chi meeting.

were journalism, photojournalism, or public relations majors.

Special Forces was a military organization attached to the ROTC department.

The organization was open to selected military science students who received training in mountaineering techniques, weapons, physical training, river training, survival, orienteering and small unit tactics, Maj. Mark Ford, an Alexandria, La., junior, said.

"People don't know much about the military, and a good positive image is what we want to present," Ford said.

"We also served Western by ushering ball games and concerts," he said.

Special Forces members also ran in company formation in the Wendy's Classic.

Society of Manufacturing Engineers

Front row: Dolores Woods, Jerry Gensheimer, Ann Lester. Back row: Norman Tomasic, Philip Bieber, Mark Wooten, Scott Stumba.

Society of Physics Students

Front row: Danny Hisek, Keith Thomas, Richard Morris, Garry Taylor, Christy Keith, Jeff Warnecke, Michael Dennis. Back row: David Atkinson, William Backman, Todd Harper, Randall Lytle, Dudley Bryant, Clarence Wolf.

Society of Professional Journalists

Front row: Louise Hennigan, Tami Peerman. Back row: Jim Highland, Pamela Embry, Barry Rose, Ray Thomas.

Special Forces

Front row: Donald R. Davis, Mark Ford, David Norwood, Tim Cravens, Suzanne Wilcox. Back row: Bruce Kleis, Mark Pfeifferman, Danny Post, Scott Williams, Tim Porter, David Cannon.

Special Forces

Front row: Phyllis Hayes, Valerie Jiretano, Tim Johnson, Julie Strader, Colette Macon, Steve Tucker, Cynthia Burnett. Second row: Jakus P. Jones, Kirsten Y. Moore, Philip D. Johnson, Jeff Chilton, Yvette Greenwald, Michael W. McDougal, Frederick Shewke, Tim Slatery. Back row: Kevin Neal, Michael Berry, Jim Ombey, John Williams, Thomas Kelley, Tyler Nelson, Puentes Ivanov, Jack L. Thomaon.

Touch cont.

Each Wednesday the Speculative Fiction Society met to discuss science fiction, fantasy, comic books and movies.

"We met and got together with people who express the same interest in speculative fiction," Marie Guthrie, a Bowling Green senior, said.

The club, which ranged in membership between 12 and 15, attended conventions in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Members attended the conventions with other similar clubs to discuss literature, to relax, and to have a good time, according to Guthrie.

Knowing everything there is to know about Western is just one of the many aspects of being a Spirit Master.

The 22 student ambassadors spent about 5-10 hours each week working to promote Western, according to Scott Vick, a Springfield, Ill., junior.

"Among other things, Spirit Masters host VIP events, and work with the admissions office in recruiting students," Vick said.

"We each have a log book that has everything we need to know about the campus and the community in it," Vick said.

About 60 students applied to be a part of the organization that began in the spring semester of 1982.

The program is the only one of its kind in the state. Vick said the only program he knew of that was comparable to Spirit Masters was at the University of Alabama.

"I consider it an honor to be a part of such a worthwhile program," Vick said.

The local chapter of the Student Council for Exceptional Children had one of the largest chapters in the region. Although several members left to student teach, membership was around 40.

Anyone interested in working with exceptional children was invited to join. "We work and do activities with children in the community," Debbie Medley, a Loretto senior, said.

Meetings were held twice a month, and upcoming events were planned and discussed. The Association for Retarded Citizens of Bowling Green was one group the chapter worked with throughout the year.

In October, members attended the Bureau for Early Exceptional Children Convention, held in Louisville. In the fall, members participated in the Reading Retreat, held at the Red Carpet Inn.

Education majors and minors were provided with opportunities to understand the teaching profession through leadership meetings and activities in the Student National Education Association.

"It helped all education majors to become the best they could be in their fields," Stacy Westray, publicity chairman, said.

"It helped me in knowing what is going on in the profession and letting me have a say," the La Grange sophomore said.

The members participated in American Education Week last November. They also worked at the coat checks at Western's ballgames.

Members of United Black Students brought the organization into the public eye when they sponsored a series of events during Black History Week.

"We tried to bring all the different black students together," president Angela Kels, Madisonville junior, said. "We're an organization of organizations; we accept students, Greek or not."

The 25-member group sponsored the events beginning Feb. 19. The week began with a freedom march starting in front of the Downing University Center.

"We focused most of our attention on this one week," said.

Other events held during Black History Week included a workshop on United Students, films on black history and an African display in the Downing University Center.

The organization provided a variety of events for the students, sometimes working with the University Center Board to bring speakers or entertainers to campus.

AT A BOOTH in Downing University Center, Teri Hazard, a Paris sophomore, registers for the primary election. United Black Students and the Y. Jesse Jackson in Kentucky set table.

— Greg Louder

Speculative Fiction Society

Front row: Kara Guthrie, Annette Carrico, Kelli Yuge. Second row: Dominic Flanery, Kishandra Rse, John Reasoner. Back row: Rick Sheppard, Ed Geiss, Mary Robinson, Randall Fox.

Student Council for Exceptional Children

Front row: Carolyn Rowan, Robin White, Debbie Medley. Back row: Ann Jurek, Wanda Chandler, Brenda Lush.

Student National Education Association

Front row: Dena Black, Meredith Wilk, Tammy Hixson, Mary Bellflower, Tina Wright, Lucinda McCubbin. Back row: Greg Black, Kim Myers, Andy Drexler, Maria Miller, Darrell Ray, Richard Watt.

United Black Students

Front row: Anthony Wilkerson, Nedra Brown, Robin Brown, Nora Edwards, Angela T. Kelso. Back row: Arthur Tompkins, Pam Cunningham, Carl A. Mason, Carrie White, Teressa R. Johnson.

Touch cont.

Providing entertainment to a small group of people at an informal party can be very difficult.

Providing entertainment to 14,000 students of varying tastes can be an exercise in futility. The University Center Board got its share of exercise last year.

UCB was in charge of booking and promoting entertainers on the campus and in the community.

"We try to provide a cross-section of entertainments to please all of the students and faculty," Jeff Woolsey, arts chairman for UCB, said.

Along with annual events such as the Hanging of the Green and Halloween, UCB presented speakers G. Gordon Liddy and Timothy Leary. The booking of Watergate felon Liddy and drug guru Leary touched off a debate over exactly the type of speaker that should be brought to Western's campus.

UCB chose their performers at regional conferences that showcased performers and allowed their agents to book nation-wide tours.

Nationally known groups like Loverboy and Producers gave concerts sponsored by UCB. Artistically balancing the rock acts were country performers Alabama and Hank Williams Jr.

"They (the conventions) are really spectacular," Woolsey, a Bowling Green senior, said. "You get groups that are looking for national exposure and they play their hearts out to impress the colleges."

Each year the Vocational Agriculture Club attended the FFA leadership Institute to listen to speakers discuss many topics about the agriculture field.

"The club is for anyone interested in teaching agriculture in high school," David Coffey, faculty adviser, said.

At different meetings, the club sponsored speakers in the profession to give talks about the aspects of the field of vocational agriculture.

During November, the Vocational Agriculture Club attended a national convention in Kansas City, Mo.

The members of the Wesley Foundation were more than students at Western.

According to president Jeff Rice, "It gets to be like a family."

"The benefits from being around Christians is really supportive," Rice, a Scottsville junior, said.

The members of the Wesley Foundation have grown closer to each other and, "It has increased the values of the students," Rice said.

The Wesley Foundation stayed busy year-round with a retreat during the fall at Camp Decker, caroling during Christmas, and a marriage-preparation workshop held at the end of March.

March 25 was a special day for the foundation members. The members of this Methodist organization performed the re-enactment of Exodus with Moses crossing the Red Sea.

From campus Bible studies to supporting an orphan in Haiti, Western Christian Student Fellowship had an active semester.

The group, which was supported by independent Christian churches, spent a lot of their time at "His House" on 14th street.

According to Mark Walden, a Lexington junior, His House was used for recreational activities as well as Bible studies.

In the fall the group sponsored a concert by John Elliot and Dawn Rodgers, two contemporary Christian music performers. Walden said about 150 attended the concert which was held on campus.

The group had weekly Bible studies in the dorms, in which about 30 students attended.

In addition, the group sponsored an Haitian orphan named Nathan.

The thing that stood out most in Walden's mind was the group's realization of the power of prayer. The group had a "Prayer Assault" in early January at Camp Joy in Brownsville.

"Through that experience we learned how powerful prayer can be, especially when you pray for specific things," he said.

WATERGATE felon G. Gordon Liddy signs autographs after his lecture Nov. 16. The speech, one of several sponsored by UCB, drew 2200 people to Diddle Arena.

University Center Board

Front row: Annette Carroll, Diane Stanfield, Carol Kraemer, Jill Joseph, Karen Moore, Gina Brown. Second row: Jeffrey Woolsey, Rex Hurt, Happy Chandler, Antonia Flowers, David Davis, Mike Randolph, Lynne Webb, Mitchell McKinney. Back row: Delmer Eakins, Tracy Turner, Jack Smith, Danny Broderick, Ray Abell, Carl Whitmer, Tom Allen.

Wesley Foundation

Front row: Sandy Landrum, Robin James, Lisa Shartzler, Anne Snapp, Shan Simpson, Ann Lester. Second row: Elizabeth Strain, Jeff Rice, Sarah Bee, Laurie Bryan, Paula Taylor, Eric Sipes, Donna Harrell, Lisa Shively. Back row: Margie Baker, Martin Villegas, Mark Hawk, Ken Smith, Steve Finley, Henry Sinclair, Karen Richardson, Terry Swan.

Western Christian Student Fellowship

Front row: Carl Wilson, Marla Vetschegger, Heidi Hayden, Ashlie Hook, Kay Mouser, Robyn Murphy. Second row: Denise Eastridge, Cindy Trovelli, Steve Powell, Melissa Larkin, Becky Bush, Mark Walden, Teresa Stovall, Daniel Stovall, Steve Stovall, Heather Stovall. Back row: Mark White, Carolyn Steele, Robert Kirby, Rob Dye, Scott Majors, Larry Small, Richard Waller, Rebecca Norene.

— Kevin Egan

Fund run

Photos by Tammie Wilson

Bright Christian music played through Smith Stadium as a small group of people gathered at the track to watch Patti Byram jog and hand the baton-sized wooden cross to one of her teammates.

In late September, Byram, a Russell County junior, and 125 other members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes carried the cross around the track for 100 hours to raise money for a new stereo system and retreats.

"The idea behind the event was to help bring FCA members closer together," FCA president Steve Wigginton, a Louisville senior, said.

"It was a subtle way to make people feel the Christian presence on campus," Mike Sarkozi, a Bowling Green senior, said.

The cheerful music, played on a borrowed stereo, was a constant background encouraging the runners.

"The music really kept you going when you or your partner were getting tired," Florence Moreno, an Owensboro sophomore, said.

Hundreds of names were scribbled on a yellow sign up sheet which leaned against a railing near the track. The runners signed up to run hour shifts in groups of five or six. Each runner collected pledges for the overall jog-a-thon.

FCA is a non-denominational group open to anyone "who has an interest in sports and in God," Wigginton said.

The organization sponsored a 50-hour jog-a-thon last year and decided to expand this year. Mary Hall, a Louisville sophomore, said, "FCA began organizing the event in late August when school started. By the time the jog-a-thon was to begin everybody wanted to run."

The runners began the jog-a-thon on a Sunday afternoon and ran until the following Thursday night. As the final hour drew near, about 100 members of FCA gathered at the stadium for their weekly meeting. After a few prayers and announcements, the group took the track and ran the final lap.

The jog-a-thon raised $1,200 but it was much more the money-making event. "It was a chance to tell people about Christ," Wigginton said.

"People were coming and asking about the music asking about what we were doing," he said.

"On one hand we got so much attention. We got people talking about Jesus and asking about FCA. On the other hand, it was fun," Moreno said.

Mary Meehan

AT 6 A.M., Dolores Woods, a Scott senior, runs in front of an empty stadium. Woods ran eight laps to raise money for FCA.

BEFORE he runs, Danny Monroe, a Dawson Springs senior, stretches while Steve Biven, a Louisville graduate student, reads his Bible.

ON THE LAST day of the run, Steve Garden, a Bowling Green freshman, reads the schedule of the five-day jog-a-thon.

JOG-A-THON

— Mary Ann L.

Western Players

Front row: Lynn Kirkpatrick, Cathleen Calk, Linda Torres, Kevin Alvey, Julie Kreslens, Beth Blackburn, Stacey Ford. Second row: Jeff Collins, Suzette Beaman, Laurie Stream, Chris Baumister, John Broyles, Jonathan Ellers, Lisa Hayes, Vickie Golden.

Back row: Diane Himes, Lisa Hensley, Nancy Haukins, Charles Osborne, Wesley Young, Charles Luckett, Alisa L. Clancy, Jim Beshires, Ken Tonks.

Western Sociological Society

Front row: Rene King, Elaine Wilson, Cathy Robertson. Back row: Sherry Cunningham, Marc Roberts, John Wyatt, Darrell Baker.

Touch

cont.

As anyone acquainted with theater knows, the work of the production crew can easily equal that of the actors. The Western Players worked to facilitate the production of theater endeavors," and provided valuable help to the theater department, according to Jonathan Ellers, president.

"We're a catalyst rather than a sponsoring organization," Ellers said. The Western Players act as backstage crew for many department productions.

In addition to the five or six productions in which the players were involved, the club also produced a Children's Theater. The theater, staged during the fall semester, was directed by members of the Western Players.

The Southeastern Theater Conference, a convention attended by members of the players, provided an efficient way for theater people to meet professionals. In addition to classes and workshops at the conference, college students and professionals came to audition for summer work.

THE Children's Theater production Aesop's Fables, D. J. Salisbury, a Louisville junior, plays the part of the tick-in-the-box. Salisbury was a member of the Western Players.

The only requirement for membership in the Western Players was an interest in the theater and participation in at least one theatrical endeavor.

The Western Sociological Society was an active organization on campus encouraging student participation.

"We tried to promote student interest in sociology," said Craig Taylor, faculty adviser. "It's a format for students to get together with faculty in the department."

The organization, which was opened to any student, was a "way of integrating the members into the department," Taylor said.

The monthly programs included guest speakers from different departments and some speakers from off campus.

The activities provided for the organization were varied with one activity being a weekend campout for the members.

In the fall, some members attended the regional convention that was held in Birmingham, Ala.

During February, the club sold T-shirts with the club's logo on them to raise money.

A new organization was formed which attracted 50 to 80 members.

Young Bankers of Kentucky met once a month to discuss different aspects of the banking world. From being a member, "You get an idea of what banking is about," Kim Staples, a Glasgow freshman, said.

To be a member, a minimum grade-point average of 2.0 had to be met. Most members were in the two-year banking program, although some were general business majors.

For a fund raiser, members sold doughnuts during the fall semester.

While the merits of both political parties continued to be debated on a national level during the election year, the Young Democrats sought to bring a touch of that debate home to Western.

The club tried to stage a debate with the College Republicans on the presidential election, vice president David Goodwill said.

The Democrats used the election year to set up voter registration booths and information tables highlighting particular candidates. A registration drive co-sponsored with the Warren County Young Democrats registered over 400 new voters on campus.

"Generally people are apathetic about politics," Goodwill said. "By involving voters we make them understand the political process better." □

Young Bankers of Kentucky

Front row: Kimberly Staples, Janet Brown, Gena Miller, Teresa Reece. Second row: Danny Brown, Alan White, Mary Phillips, Sharon Hartford, Susan Graham. Back row: Mike Litchfield, Jeff Pate, Kelly Ferguson, Charles Duckett, Carol Khatir, David Matherly, Myrl Brashear.

Young Democrats

Front row: Kimberly A. Winkenhof, Sandra K. Carroll, Doug Melford. Back row: Jeffrey B. Wootley, Jim Moorman, Mark Newman.

Too S.O.O.N. for change

Illustrations by Bobby Roe

Tensions from a generation of greek housing in neighborhoods put Bowling Green residents at odds with greeks and university and city officials throughout 1983.

Things had settled some by spring, but questions over the future of greek housing at Western lingered.

“People get emotional about this kind of issue rather than look at the facts. — President Zacharias”

Spring found those involved looking to an ad hoc committee formed by Bowling Green Mayor Charles Hardcastle. The committee worked at hammering out a solution acceptable to all while keeping a low profile to put politics and tempers at a distance.

Maintaining a much higher profile, members of Save Our Old Neighborhood (SOON) worked to make known their frustrations with having greeks as neighbors. The group sprang up early in '83 to represent residents in an area with greek housing.

During the year, the university looked into establishing a fraternity row on campus property off Creason Drive and a sorority row on campus property off Normal Drive.

Conflicts seemed to begin peaking in the summer of '83 when two fraternities seeking zoning approval for moving were successful despite efforts by SOON and others.

Then late in August the City/County Planning Commission requested a moratorium barring fraternities and sororities from applying for the special exception zoning permits they needed to move anywhere off campus. Hardcastle said he chose for the group only those he felt had remained unpolarized on the issue.

Western, greek housing organizations, SOON, and another group opposing the Creason Drive plan, were all represented in the group, Hardcastle said. Aug. 1 was the set deadline for having a plan to present.

The group tried to attack problems and not generalities, Hardcastle said, adding they were not looking to do away with greeks or relegate them to a reservation.

“We ask for objections and try to work around them,” Hardcastle said, citing as an example having the entrance to the proposed Creason Drive development come off Robinson Lane near the Hardee's on Russellville Road. This would alleviate traffic problems in the neighborhood, one objection of Creason Drive area residents, he said.

The Board of Adjustments urged the Zoning Commission to propose a moratorium so they could complete that work and consider a study of greek systems across the country, a Zoning Commission official said.

John Matheney, director of the City/County Planning Commission of Warren County, said the study they used was completed by Hardcastle's ad hoc committee after looking at 35 cities with successful greek rows. National fraternities and sororities were consulted on how others regulated greek housing in residential areas. They looked at greek systems similar to Western's, he said.

Final authority rested with city and county government, Matheney said. The City Commission passed the ordinance Feb. 7 and the county scheduled final reading for Feb. 24, according to Brenda Duncan, secretary for Judge Basil W. Griffin.

The moratorium, even if passed, would last less than four months.

Charles Stewart, president of SOON, said the group representing the neighborhood bounded by Center and Chestnut streets and 12th and 15th streets wanted to “maintain the integrity of the neighborhood as a residential area.”

Stewart said fraternities had been the neighbor's biggest problem, citing noise, misconduct and theft of property, and said he saw a lack of interest by anyone in maintaining order.

“People got fed up,” Stewart said.

SOON, chartered in the state, would last as long as problems remained, Stewart said. The group was incorporated to give it prominence and a continuing operation, according to Stewart.

They didn't expect to free themselves of fraternities immediately. “We don't expect that fraternities here now would be on campus in a year,” he said. “We're asking that any new fraternities be restricted to a greek row.”

Stewart, once a member of Phi Kappa Psi at Vanderbilt, said fraternities at Western hadn't had the supervision they had when he went to school. He thought more supervision would help.

He moved to College Street in 1958 and said the noise and theft began when greeks started locating there in the early and mid-'60s.

Stewart put SOON's membership at about 100 and said members had to pay $10 yearly, although some had given more.

The future of the proposed fraternity row hung on the outcome of an engineering study just getting underway in early February, according to Harry Largen, vice president for business affairs.

The university met with Central Associated Engineers Inc. and reviewed the site, Largen said. The firm was instructed to look at drainage and utility services and to do a survey to discover what would be required to meet planning and zoning specifications, Largen said, and to lay out the property for six to eight lots.

Final approval for the sale had to come from the State Financial Director in Frankfort, Largen said. But he expected getting that since approval had been given at every step until then.

The Board of Regents approved the study and subsequent sale of the land if the study was positive, but only because they saw no other use for the Creason Drive property, according to Regent Joseph Cook. “It's not the Regents' problem to provide property (for a greek row),” he said. The land was available and they saw no other use for it, Cook said.

The property was evaluated and ready to be sold, according to Dean of Student Affairs Charles Keown. But the moratorium prevented the university from applying for necessary zoning changes, he said.

A 30-to-40-man fraternity house would run about $250,000 at current construction costs, according to Scott Taylor, director of student organizations. But he expects the row will be built. “We don't expect it to materialize in five years,” he said. “Five years is a short time when you're talking about building a quarter-million dollar structure. But we'd like to think in five years all the lots will be purchased.”

A member of the Creason area group who opposed the plan gave reasons she and her neighbors were worried.

Ann Goetting, of 330 Gatewood Ave., an associate professor of sociology at Western, said, “Residents feel the nature of the neighborhood would change. People chose this neighborhood because it's quiet. People might not want to let their children run as freely as they might.”

“As long as you have fraternities next to residents you're going to have trouble. — Billie Adams”

Late-night noise and traffic also worried them, she said. “The street would probably have to be broadened.”

“I think the greek organizations, if closer together, would identify with one another and organize together and it would be a positive thing,” John Karay, of 1408 College St., said.

Billy Adams, who owns property next to the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity house on Kentucky Street, agreed there would be a fraternity row.

“I don't have anything against fraternities, but noise (from them) is natural,” he said. “As long as you have fraternities next to residents you're going to have trouble.”

But Capt. Edward Word of the Bowling Green Police

continued on page 284

Too S.O.O.N. cont.

Department wasn't sure if fraternity row would mean fewer complaints against greeks.

"It would help us if it were on campus because we wouldn't answer calls," Sgt. J. R. Brown said.

University police handle calls about on-campus problems.

In the summer of '83, Delta Tau Delta and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternities succeeded in obtaining permits for new locations. Sigma Chi fraternity, however, backed out of their attempt to locate on State Street, opting instead to renovate their College Street accommodations.

The renovation was complete by spring of '84 and Sigma Chi president Bob Dillard said they were "very happy" with the results.

The Sigma Chis had signed a $112,000 contract for a house at 1324 State St., Dillard said. But it was tied to their obtaining zoning approval and when their hearing was delayed a month the contract ran out and they decided to renovate their house at 1215 College.

Dillard said they decided to withdraw their zoning application for several reasons. Delta Tau Delta had succeeded earlier that summer but with difficulty, Dillard said. Other reasons were the nature of the State Street neighborhood and the fact that the house at 1324 was a Kentucky landmark, he said.

The Sigma Chis rented a house at 1438 Chestnut St., from alumni of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, for the fall of '82 and spring of '83, Dillard said.

The fraternity was without housing during the fall of '83 while the $96,000 renovation project was completed, he said. They purchased some materials at less than cost from alumni, he added.

Delta Tau Delta moved from 125 Dishman Lane to 1415 College early in the summer to "get closer to campus," according to vice president Lee Grace.

"Opposition from community groups," was the biggest difficulty in the move, Grace said. But they are pleased with their new location and "neighbors have come to realize we're not as bad as they thought we were," he said.

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity moved from 1366 College St. to 1321 Kentucky St. in late August of '83, according to president Tom Neth.

He said there were difficulties involved. "Zoning it, finances — getting up the loans — those were the two major ones."

He added that there were also disadvantages to the new location. "It's off the beaten “ Conditions on College Street are not as difficult as 10 years ago.

— Dean Keown ” path; not the best for rush. Vandalism is greater in this neighborhood," he said. The Pike's firetruck had been vandalized the previous weekend and gasoline had been poured in the cab, apparently to set it on fire, Neth said.

The Sigma Kappa sorority had their first taste of home life during the fall.

The sorority moved from the first floor of Gilbert Hall to 1438 Chestnut between the AGRs and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. They are renting from AGR alumni, according to Sigma Kappa president Maria Tori.

"We love it here," Tori said. "Everybody's pitched in and working on it," she added, speaking of repairs for the building.

"It's home."

The sorority had no plans for a move to Normal Drive property if a sorority row were established there.

Residents' complaints against greeks were varied but most centered on noise, traffic, littering and late-night disturbances.

Wandel Dye, of 1304 Kentucky, had Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Phi Epsilon for neighbors. Dye, an assistant professor in the industrial technology department, spoke at the Pike's zoning hearing, opposing the move.

He said problems with the Pikes were just what he'd expected since he'd had similar problems with the Sig Eps before.

He cited "parking and noise factors" and said he'd had to call the police several times because of noise from late-night parties.

"I hate to leave if I get a parking spot late in the day," Dye said, "because it gets filled up." He said that littering by the fraternities was worse some times than others, but that parking was a constant problem.

Elizabeth Elliot, of 1330 Kentucky, said she hadn't been bothered by the two fraternities through the winter but expected noise to be a problem in spring when windows were open.

The only problems she'd experienced over the winter were late at night when members were outside hollering at each other and, she said, occasionally paper cups littered the area.

The Rev. William Allard, of 1403 College St., said he thought relations with the fraternities near him had improved over the past year and that the fraternities were trying to be good neighbors.

"They are trying to courteous," the pastor of Newman Center said, adding the noise level hasn't bothered him.

Allard said he thought the Pikes' move from the area had helped improve things for some but that they had never really bothered him.

"Others had been bothered by their being obnoxious," he said, but added that he continued to let them use the Newman Center's facilities because he thought that was part of being a good neighbor.

Karay was a neighbor of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity before the group moved to Kentucky Street. The Karays purchased the Pikes' former house.

"While at the College Street location they were quite noisy," Karay said. "We quite often heard obscenities."

Adams, who owns property next to the Pikes on Kentucky Street, was withholding his judgement until spring. "Time will tell," he said. "In wintertime things are slow."

Adams, a former Alpha Gamma Rho and alumni adviser for Western's AGR chapter during the '60s, said he had nothing against greeks but felt they needed more supervision. Adams said he thought having house mothers for the chapters would help.

Stewart, a neighbor of Sigma Chi fraternity on College Street, said, "In the last few months there has been some improvement." He added that he hasn't had any problems with the Sigma Chis since they moved back in.

Charles Bunch, of 1928 Grider Pond Road, was an Alpha Tau Omega from 1964 to 1968. The ATOs were disbanded at Western in 1975, according to Bunch.

Bunch said one thing that helped previous relations was that the greeks used to keep parties inside rather than allowing them to spill out into the front yards.

But he added that today, as then, probably one or two fraternities were more to blame for problems with neighbors than greeks as a whole.

Bunch said he thought the university should be more involved in maintaining control of fraternities.

Tom Hart, of 604 Eastwood Ave., remembered things differently. Hart was a Sigma Nu from 1967 to 1971.

According to Hart, the recent actions of city government stemmed from one or two influential people stirring up the City Commission about a problem that's been the same for 20 years.

David Towell, of 1551 Chestnut, said he doesn't think greeks do anything now they didn't do when he was a student at Western. Towell was an SAE from 1965 to 1967.

Police were occasionally called, Towell said, but said that happens all the time, not just at parties. Towell remembers the SAEs having live bands without anyone calling police about noise.

He added that noise from greek organizations didn't originate when they began living in houses. "Everybody had an informal house even before national fraternities and official houses."

George Gleitz, of 918 Elm St., has similar memories.

Gleitz said the overall noise level, other than during rush, was not significantly greater than before fraternities had houses. Gleitz remembers police being called on greeks and independents alike for noise and drinking.

Gleitz was a founding member of Lambda Sigma Epsilon in 1961, the predecessor to Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

"Keown used to show up at parties," Gleitz said. "People used to call him rather than the police."

University policy for greeks has changed considerably since the early '60s when Western first recognized the locally affiliated predecessors to today's fraternities and sororities.

The problem is how to control greeks and yet still treat them as they would any other student living off campus.

Keown said that, from the beginning, the university was for greeks having houses since they believed it made the greek system stronger.

He said there was some thought about a fraternity row 20 years ago but that the university was expanding rapidly and no one knew what land would be needed for university structures.

Part of the problem in establishing a greek row is the youth of Western's greek system. Most well developed systems are 50 to 60 years old, Keown said.

President Donald Zacharias agreed, saying Western's greek system was "extremely young." He said that about 25 years ago at Indiana University a row such “ Our neighbors have come to realize we're not as bad as they thought we were.

— Lee Grace ”

as Western is proposing was begun and that even today development is not complete.

Anyone with a persistent problem with greeks could call police as they would for any other neighbor, Keown said.

But patrolman Eddie Mills said the last thing the Bowling Green police wanted to do was answer a call about a fraternity house.

Asked if he would like the university to take more control over greeks, Mills replies, "Absolutely! That would probably be unanimous among the police department, too."

Police have no set standard for dealing with complaints about fraternities. It depended on the shift commander, the work load at the time, the party complained of, the people at the party and many other things, according to Mills.

A recent Inter-Fraternity Council rule ending rush parties at 11 p.m. had helped some, according to Sgt. J. R. Brown.

"Everything was pretty quiet by 11," Brown said.

"Conditions on College are not as difficult as 10 years ago when they (residents) weren't complaining," Keown said.

"I'm satisfied with the year we've had on College, with the level of leadership," Keown said.

Keown said he can see the university working closer with house corporations, active chapters, and neighbors but not exerting more control. Chapter leadership will have to impose standards of conduct for members, he said.

"That's the way it has to work," Keown said, adding that if a chapter doesn't decide to improve its standards, nothing will get done. Changes must come from within, he said.

Zacharias said many problems between greeks and residents stemmed from misperceptions.

"People get emotional about this kind of issue rather than look at the facts," he said.

He said his biggest concern for greeks was that some greek organizations didn't put enough emphasis on studies. He added that grades were more of a problem among fraternities than sororities.

He felt that some fraternities overburdened their members with university and social functions, distracting them from academics.

As May 1 loomed and proposals and studies neared completion, residents and the university seemed to be holding their judgments. The moratorium was winding through its final readings with little fanfare. No one was saying much of anything, at least not publicly.

Matt Emery

Sororities and fraternities fought housing problems,
strived to raise GPAs,
and still preserved

The greek touch

Winning four national awards was the highlight of the year for Alpha Delta Pi.

At their national convention in West Palm Beach, Fla., the chapter received awards for scholarship, finance, correspondence, and philanthropy.

The ADPis won the scholarship award by stressing the importance of academics to their pledges. For the 1983 school year, the ADPis had the second-highest overall sorority grade-point average.

The philanthropy award was won by the ADPis' donations to the Ronald McDonald Houses for terminally ill children and their families. Every spring they host the ADPi 500 in which they raise money for their philanthropies.

ADPi president Joan Leibfreid, a Bowling Green junior, said, "We try to participate in everything — greek and campus-wide activities like the Wendy's Classic and the Phonathon. In October we got second place in KD Washboard."

Rush went well for ADPi. "We were really prepared for rush," Leibfreid said. "We had a rush workshop during the summer and then came back a week before school started. Our work paid off because we had an excellent rush."

At the beginning of the fall semester, the ADPis had a speaker on self-defense at one of their meetings. Ron Boyd, a karate expert, talked to the ADPis about the importance of being able to defend themselves.

"Overall, we had a very successful semester," Leibfreid said. "We filled our quota, and represented ourselves well at the university and in the community."

A common background helped the members of Alpha Gamma Rho a lot, according to president Mark Shoulders, an Adairville sophomore.

"About 90 percent of our chapter are agriculture majors," Shoulders said. "Of course there are a few guys who aren't, but we learn a lot from them too."

"We contribute to the university as well as the agriculture department," Shoulders said.

The AGRs were proud to say they participated in all greek activities and all intramurals, with the exception of volleyball.

Having a successful rush was a big plus for the AGRs.

"We got the second-most pledges on campus," Shoulders said.

The AGR pledge program lasted about five to seven weeks.

"We tried to be constructive," Shoulders said. "Pledging is mainly a time to get to know AGR and what it stands for."

The American Cancer Society was the AGR's philanthropy. They raised money for it by having their annual basketball tournament.

Sponsoring the Miss Black

Western pageant was Alpha Kappa Alpha's main activity last year.

AKA president Cathy Brents, a Louisville senior, said, "We sponsor the pageant to give black girls a chance at a scholarship. The winner gets $200 and the rest goes to the NCAA."

AKA had several philanthropies. Among them was the NAACP, Job Corps for Women, and the United Negro College Fund.

"We have several dances and parties to raise money for our philanthropies," Brents said. "We also gave food baskets to the needy families of Bowling Green at Christmas and visited several nursing homes."

The main goal for AKA was to "sit back and work on our grade-point averages," Brents said. "We just couldn't afford to be put on probation because of academics, so we really concentrated in the fall and decided not to take any pledges."

The hard work paid off, because by spring the AKAs had

— Todd Burtis
BRING Sigma Chi Derby events day, plus Delta Pi members Deana Davenport, a Bowling Green freshman, and Jerry Mays, a Hodgenville sophomore, compete in the caterpillar race. The PIs won the Sigma Chi Derby and the first award.

used their grade-point average to pledge several girls.

In the spring, the AKAs sponsored a campus-wide health clinic and offered blood pressure check-ups free. They also held a special week of events in April to highlight AKA and make the university more aware of us," Brents said.

AKA emphasized doing things as a chapter and in March the whole chapter, about 15 girls, went to their regional convention in Chicago.

Brents said, "AKA offers long friendships and the opportunity to mingle with women with the same backgrounds and with those who are different from you. By doing this we try to project an image that will help the university and the community come together."

A • Δ • Π

Front row: Carol Gibson, Deana Davenport, Jill Capps, Jennifer Slaughter, Carmen Shore, Jody Calhoun, Jennifer Keltner. Second row: Cheryl Smith, Diane Watson, Teresa Simpson, Gail Johnston, Jenny Gerben, Sherry Kuntz, Joan Leibfreid. Back row: Laura McClain, Amy Kruse, Christy Capps, Lisa Weller, Michele Dillard, Caryn Wilson, Dawnelle Marshall, Kellie Thomas.

A • Δ • Π

Front row: Carol Guernsey, Mary Jane Thomas, Julie Sims, Lee Murray, Suzanne Deputy, Joy Testa. Second row: Natalie Wilkins, Deborah Dunn, Cheri Cunningham, Julie Pack, Jayne Frymire, Gina Wilks, Tana Demunbrun. Back row: Laura Gary, Gwen Dunbar, Sheri Brown, Joy Beasley, Debbie Rutland, Kim Lowe, Lee Anne Murray, Lori Davenport.

A • Γ • P

Front row: Neil Richards, Mark Shoulders, Jimmy Reecer. Second row: Alan Woodburn, Bobby Shown, Jackie Monday, David Popham. Back row: Ben Livingston, Jeffrey Riggs, Thomas Eckman, Bruce Westerfield, James Maly, Byron Thompson.

A • Γ • P

Front row: William Eckman, Gary Bickett, Donald Bratcher, Jim Hollis. Second row: David Chamberlin, James Bell, Joey Thayer, Mike Robinson, Jerome Taylor. Back row: Scott Kindervater, Kevin O'Brien, Merrill Zimmer, Jeff Turner, Billy Bob Walker.

A • K • A

Front row: Stephanie Blair, Cheryl Catron, Therese Middleton. Second row: Monica Mobley, Mardell Shipp, Lise McKee, Sheila Barfield. Back row: Lynn Scruggs, Portia Willis, Kimberley Lawrence, Dawn Fenwick, Cathy Brents, Pamela Dixon.

Touch cont.

For the second year, Alpha Omicron Pi won both the Sigma Nu Powderpuff Football Tournament and placed first in Kappa Delta Washboard Jamboree.

The AOPis also had a chapter grade-point average of 2.8, the highest among all sororities on campus.

AOPi president Susan Albert, a Paducah senior, said, "We really stress study hours and try not to monopolize more than one weekend a month for AOPi activities. This gives us more time to study."

"Our scholarship program is not taken for granted any more. Our grade-point average showed that," Albert said.

The AOPis liked to joke that they got the Triple Crown when they won Washboard, Powderpuff and got the highest GPA.

Philanthropic work also kept the AOPis busy. For the second year they sponsored a Rock-a-thon for the Arthritis Foundation. Members of Delta Tau Delta helped them in the fund-raiser, which was held at the Greenwood Mall. They also helped supervise a Girl Scout slumber party at the Greenwood Mall.

"Girl Scouts and Brownies from all the surrounding counties participated in the sleep-in and we stayed over to play games with them and help out," Albert said.

The AOPis had 36 pledges and initiated 26 of them. Pledging AOPi consisted of sorority education, pledge projects, and conferences with the members.

Part of AOPi's success last year was due to a supportive adviser, Karen Towell, Albert said.

"Karen is really a plus for us. She's always there and she takes care of a lot of things in the background, making my job a lot easier."

Hard work and good grades paid off for the AOPis. They were recognized among the top 15 percent of all AOPi chapters.

Being "almost the only black fraternity on the field" didn't hurt Alpha Phi Alpha, according to their president, Danny Anderson, a Pittsburgh senior.

"Because there were only two black fraternities on the hill, we really had to rely on our brotherhood to hang in there," Anderson said.

The goals of Alpha Phi Alpha's Eta Rho Chapter were to get a higher percentage of pledges and increase their community services.

"We're lucky to get two to three pledges each year," Anderson said. "The black population here has a very different concept of fraternities, and pledging often doesn't fit in with their goals."

Alpha Phi Alpha increased their community services by taking kids from the Carver Orphanage to movies and ballgames.

"We also tried to get Bowling Green active in the NAACP," Anderson said. "It encourages the community when they see a younger generation doing things for the NAACP."

The Alpha Phi Alphas participated in the homecoming step show and the Martin Luther King Jr. march.

"Supporting the march was really important to us because Martin Luther King was an Alpha Phi Alpha," Anderson said.

Rebuilding was the main objective for Alpha Xi Delta.

Alpha Xi president Ginny Carroll, a Louisville senior, said "Our motivation is so high. We have changed so much as a chapter and we're looking for more changes in the future. Someone has thrown us the ball and now we're running with it."

"We know that the rebuilding process may be a slow one, but we're prepared. We've got some really enthusiastic girls who can deal with anything."

The Alpha Xis began their rebuilding process with a successful rush. "It was about 200 times better than before," Carroll said.

"We have a very strong sisterhood. It's noticed the minute you walk in our house. I really think this helped us a lot in rush. The rushees noticed our closeness," Carroll said.

Having a house is definitely an asset for the Alpha Xis. "It's a place off campus where we can all be together," Carroll said.

Despite the negative attitudes the community may have had about Greeks, the Alpha Xis maintained good relations with their neighbors.

"We gave presents to our neighbors at Christmas and in return they shoveled our sidewalk for us. We make nice gestures and they return them. Neighbor relations have never been a problem for us," Carroll said.

Another step in the Alpha Xi rebuilding process was to raise their overall grade-point average. Carroll said, "We raised it to 2.36, which is a great improvement."

Scholarship was stressed to the Alpha Xi pledges. "Basically a lot of pledge programs are the same; however, we really stress scholarship — probably more than most sororities," Carroll said.

Last fall the Alpha Xis started a new project to raise money for their philanthropy, the American Lung Association. They had a 48-hour Swing-a-thon and raised over $350.

"One of the major benefits of being an Alpha Xi is the leadership opportunities available," Carroll said. In Alpha Xi everyone has a chance to be a leader."

A memorial service, Dallas Terry, a senior, and Gerald Harrison, a sophomore, bow their heads in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. The service was at Main Square.

—Rick Moseley

A • O • Π

Front row: Anne Wortham, Darragh Moffat, Pam Purman, Lisa Eselstyn, Joan Beyerle, Jennifer Drury, Leigh Ann Bristol. Second row: Tracy Mattingly, Sue Wanner, Lori Mattingly, Lynn Baker, Mary

Whitfield, Karen Plummer, Ann Hancock. Back row: Beth Kinlow, LeeAnn Toye, Beth James, Kim Welborn, Linda Moraja, Kim Barnes, Susan Albert, Mary Beth Hancock, Lelia Keith.

A • O • Π

Front row: Tammy Elam, Michelle Martin, Laura Simmons, Sue Roark, Debbie Weimar, Angela Schieren, Toni Flowers. Second row: Robyn Rab- uth, Nancy Severnys, Allison Fortwendel, Pam Edwards, Jennifer Williamson, Melinda Withers, Laurie

Downey, Kente Blackford. Back row: Amy Wells, Ronnah Bowles, Anne Williams, Astrid Hoffman, Michelle McConnell, Becky Johnson, Barb Koehler, Nancy Caudill, Cindy Hines.

A • Φ • Α

Front row: Brett Caldwell, Gary Hayden. Back row: Anderson, Gerald Harrison, Vernon Conway.

Anthony Rhea.

A • Ξ • Δ

Front row: Julie Eskew, Carol Griffin, Lisa Kula, Nancy Lebkuecher. Second row: Laurie Layman, Ginny Carroll, Sandra Eakins, Nancy Schulte, Karen

Evans. Back row: Janice Holsey, Liz Bell, Nini Webb, Anita Lamar, Lynn Deese, Susan King.

X • Ω

Front row: Joan Bacha, Jenny Johnson, Kelly Glasscock, Christie Banks, Barbara Rowland, Allison Clark, Eki Smith. Second row: Lynne Holiday, Ann Cain, Becky Bergman, Kim Bosley, Louise Gilchrist, Dawn Decker, Lori Hinton, Anita West. Back row: Jennifer Yeher, Linda Thompson, Mylene Hanley, Tracy Moriarty, Elizabeth Price, Donna Doss, Terri Carrier, Ashley DePriest.

X • Ω

Front row: Susan Long, Tracy Tucker, Becky Barker, Terri Rice, Jan West, Lisa Wilkins, Carolyn Conroy. Second row: Lisa Ring, Delta Thompson, Becky Fraw, Teresa Anthony, Brigitte Brown, Monica Anthony, Anne Bryson, Donna Webb. Back row: Caroline Miller, Jane Hasbachtman, Tracy Hoffmeyer, Cindy Kay, Susan Wilkins, Ricki Richmond, Julie Lip-pert, Caroline Colby, Tammy Rowland.

Δ • T • Δ

Front row: Stephen Kiehn, O'Brian McKinley, Angie Schuman, Lewis Egnor. Second row: Dave Hull-man, Rob Little, Lee Grace, Greg Bush, Billy Lester. Back row: Mark Fredrick, Michael Sprouse, Thomas Allen, John Talbot, Derek Tracy, Depp Resner.

Δ • T • Δ

Front row: Glenn Thompson, Bill Booth, Edward Fern, Steve Wilke. Second row: Tony Martin, David Jones, Ray Abell, Wayne Halbig, Ricky Fitzgerald, Dave Hoffmann. Back row: Jeff Himes, Sam Abell, Gil Cowles, Ewan Leslie, Bobby Lancaster, Michael Gilliam.

Δ • Σ • Θ

Front row: Timoti Hodge, Carla Pinkston, Tony Dale.

Touch cont.

A good rush was the key to Chi Omega's success last year.

According to Chi O president Linda Thompson, a Bowling Green junior, they pledged 37 girls, two above quota.

"Pledging is a very important part of sorority life," Thompson said. "It is mainly a time for everyone to become sisters."

The Chi O pledges did several pledge projects, took clothes and food to the Bowling Green Girls' Club and were required to have study buddies.

"We really try to emphasize academics," Thompson said. "It's easy to get over-scheduled, so that it's hard to find study time. I think the study buddies really helped our pledges."

The Chi Os had the third-best overall sorority grade-point average.

In the fall the Chi Os sponsored November Nonsense to raise money for a philanthropy. They chose the Child Protection Agency and raised $1300 for it.

"We try to participate in

CHI OMEGA Nicole Gritton, a Har-rodsburg freshman, gets a hug from Linda Thompson, a Shawnee junior.
Gritton had just received a Chi O bid.

—Bobby Rice

everything we possibly can, without jeopardizing our studies too much," Thompson said.

Last year the Chi Os won the homecoming float competition with Kappa Alpha and participated in everything from Kappa Delta Washboard to the Student Development Foundation Phonathon.

"We encourage our members to get involved with activities outside Chi O," Thompson said. Chi O had members on the University Center Board, Panhellenic and the Associated Student Government.

Thompson said, "Being a Chi O gives girls many leadership opportunities — things you wouldn't normally get to do."

After being away from the hill for over three years, Delta Tau Delta moved into their new house on College Street last year.

The Deltas spent the summer completely renovating their new house. They started from scratch, according to Delt President Sammy Abell, a Wickliffe junior.

Lee Grace, a Southgate junior, said, "Our main concern was to improve our community relations, since we were the new kid on the block."

Aside from improving community relations, the Deltas wanted to increase their membership. At 37 members, Abell said, "Our membership is rising and will continue to do so."

According to Grace, the fraternity more than doubled its membership during rush. "Both of our rushes were very successful. We got some great pledges."

Abell said, "Basically pledgship is a discovery experience for each individual — a pledge really learns a lot about himself."

Pledging for the Deltas consisted of fraternity history and pledge projects. "Last year they remodeled the kitchen," Grace said.

The Deltas tried to participate in everything and last year they took third place in the Kappa Delta Washboard Jamboree and won the Red Towel award in the homecoming house decorations competition.

The Deltas also had the second-highest fraternity grade-point average — a 2.5. This entitled them to the Outstanding Scholastic Achievement Award of the Southern division of Delta Tau Delta.

The Arthritis Foundation was the Deltas' philanthropy. In March they participated in the Alpha Omicron Pi Rock-a-thon at the Greenwood Mall.

According to Grace, "Being a Delt helps you to get along better with other people and you learn many skills that help later in life."

A major cause in Delta Sigma Theta's pledge program helped to increase their numbers, according to former vice president Gala Cunningham, a Radcliffe senior.

Unlike most sororities, the Deltas required a pledge to have a grade-point average of 2.5.

"Our requirements are considerably more stringent than other sororities," Cunningham said. "Sometimes this poses a problem, but we still expect our members to keep up a high caliber of school work."

The Deltas had a variety of philanthropies. Each month they were required to do one community service.

"We took food to several nursing homes and we also took children from Potter Christian to visit the planetarium," Cunningham said.

Aside from being active with the community, the Deltas also participated in the homecoming step show.

The step show was a big event for the Deltas. They spent numerous hours practicing and even had special costumes made.

Touch cont.

For Kappa Alpha Order, their fourth year on the hill was their most successful.

The order placed second in Kappa Delta Washboard, third in November Nonsense, were recognized as one of the top-15 KA chapters nationally, and had the second-highest fraternity grade-point averages. Their pledges had the highest GPA of all fraternity pledges.

"We accomplished a lot for a young fraternity," president Ben Wathen, a Bardstown junior, said.

"Much of our success is because of our principles," Wathen said. "Kappa Alpha Order is based on chivalry and we stress to our pledges the importance of being a perfect southern gentleman."

"Our pledge program is mainly to teach the guys about the order and chivalry," Wathen said. "During pledgship they are all well prepared for their national test. They also have a pledge retreat, a get-tight night, to get to know their pledge brothers better."

The KAs had 13 pledges in the spring, more than any other fraternity.

Muscular Dystrophy was the order's philanthropy, and during the fall semester, they raised $300 for it.

They also took orphans to see Snow White and bused tables for the Hilltopper 100 Club at the Red Carpet Inn.

"We try to make our presence at the university known," Wathen said.

For the seven members of Kappa Alpha Psi, it was a year "to concentrate on grades and community services," Kappa Alpha Psi president Mike Willis, a Hopkinsville junior, said.

Kappa Alpha Psi raised their overall grade-point average to 2.2, a "real improvement," Willis said.

The fraternity increased their community involvement by sponsoring the Kappa League. Members of the league were high school students, many of whom didn't have a father.

"We tried to find the kids who would benefit most from having a friend," Willis said. "We tried to be that friend and taught them various things, like parliamentary procedure."

"We participated in the homecoming step show and also had a Parents Appreciation Day," Willis said. "I'm sure all parents are interested in what their children are doing in school, so we tried to explain the purpose of Kappa Alpha Psi to them."

Another goal for Kappa Alpha Psi was to "try to be greeks, rather than just black greeks," Willis said.

For the sixth year, Kappa Delta won Chi Omega November Nonsense.

"It's become quite a tradition for us," KD president Kim Eisert, a New Albany, Ind., junior, said.

"We're a very consistent chapter and usually place in whatever we compete in," Eisert said. "We always seem to pull together in the end."

The KDs really pulled together during fall rush. "This was our year," Eisert said. "About 60 girls suicided KD (they put KD for all their choices on their bid card). We wish we could have had all of them."

"Because we all get along well, we work well together, and the rushees noticed that. We had a great rush."

Pledging Kappa Delta consisted of KD education, activities with other pledges, community services, and conferences with the collegians.

The KDs had three philanthropies. In October, they sponsored their annual Kappa Delta Washboard Jamboree and raised $500 for the Child Protection Agency. They also raised money for the American Heart Fund and their national philanthropy, Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Va.

Chapter education was a big part of KD. Guest speakers were often brought in to speak to the chapter on various topics. In the fall the KDs had chapter education meetings on alcohol awareness, the CAP Center, rituals, philanthropies, anorexia, and tire-changing.

"There are many advantages to being a KD," Stockton said. "Just being in a sorority makes you more involved in campus activities. KDs also have the opportunity to live in the house, which helps us to be so close. Anytime you have 30 girls living under one roof, you really become sisters, in the true sense of the word."

URING a spring rush party, members of Kappa Delta sing to rushees Karen Ann, a Brentwood, Tenn., freshman, and Lisa Tindle, a Cloverport sophomore. The party was held at the Phi house.

— Greg Lovett

K • A

Front row: Derek Vincent, Kenny Ray, Denise Donnelly, Eric Robinson, Tim Hester, Greg Helson. Second row: Cam Bivens, Mark Deeth, Mark Miller, Ben Wathen, Kevin Mays, Aaron Patterson, Edwin Cox. Back row: Gus Clarke, Thomas Hood, Doug Ford, Bill Garrison, Kristian Sexton, Knowles Shaw, Jeff Bowles, Jerry Hicks.

K • A

Front row: Greg Fuchs, Scott Higdon, Michael Tummons, Barry Bilingsley, Derek Davis, Brent Baxter. Second row: Trey Whitley, Jim Hubbs, Greg Sauls, Carl Smith, Martin Dayoub, Steve Daniels, Jack Murphree. Back row: David Wolff, Tate West, Scott Bourne, Barry Douglas, Jeff Werner, Scott Sipes, Dan Stewart.

K • A • Ψ

Front row: John Carter, Edward Williams. Back row: David Jones, Jimmy Wheeler, Reginald Rucker.

K • Δ

Front row: Donna Cardwell, Libby Dean, Jane Purcell, Chandler Fowler, Barbara Neal, Leslie Roby, Susan Stockton. Second row: Joey Dean, Kim Adams, Laurie Lipscomb, Diane Himes, Melissa Smith, Suzie Boyd, Janet Byrd. Back row: Kim Eisert, Elizabeth Ford, Beth Page, Susan Henry, Debbie Oakley, Dia Booth, Julie Poeking, Karen Neeley.

K • Δ

Front row: Robin Battis, Sheron Kay Gillem, Dana Head, Julie Free, Tanya Hall, Beth Clark, LuAnn Duquid. Second row: Sara Solb, Patty Padgett, Cheryl Cates, Debbie Dougherty, Wendy Combs, Melanie Purcell, Allyson Rowles. Back row: Beth Calvert, Kim Kissel, Codi Patterson, Carla Pendley, Kristen Reeder, Melissa Scott, Lisa Andrews, Tracie Thomas.

K • Σ

Front row: Jay Murphy, Joe Burnette, Brad Ballard, Greg Poole. Second row: Bernard O'Nan, Greg Donaldson, Michael Bollinger, Blaine Whitmer, Richard Watkins. Back row: David Baulch, Steve Nicholson, Timothy Bourdon, Obie Byram, Mitchell Tiller, Rodney Thomas.

K • Σ

Front row: James Douthett, Jody Bingham, Henry Meadows, Mitch Meyer. Second row: Jeff Sasse, Phem Doolley, Tim Perkins, Darrell Stewart, George Bowen. Back row: Craig Keith, Ray Goff, David Morgan, Mike Goff, Jeff Pate.

Λ • X • Α

Front row: Kelly Dossey, Steve Dehler, Doug Robertson, Steve Bailey. Second row: Jerry Jones, Bill Beranek, Jim Brewer, Frank Self. Back row: Mark Pichwa, John Dunham, Jonathan Norris, Eric Wolf, Thomas Pope.

Λ • X • Α

Front row: Kelly Taber, Mike Voss, Paul Wellander, Timothy Hudnall, Lyman Beck. Second row: Jon Vaden, Scott Sexton, Gary Smith, Jere Dee Hopson, Denny Acree, John Reeves. Back row: Alex Baird, Van Oliver, Darrell Hitt, Alan Silis, Bill Dunham, Scott Strunk.

Φ • Δ • Θ

Front row: Andy Hollifield, Chris Meyer, Steve Schroeder, John Welch, James Nelson, Todd Gipson. Second row: Joe Elder, Tim Hartman, David Stuart, Allen Smith, Michael Prather, Nathan Gilbert, David Braswell, Mark Lewis. Back row: David Barker, Eric Starks, James Watkins, John Lawless, Cecil Shipley, Jeff Carver, Joseph Conhill, Mac Crabtree, Robert Morrison.

Touch cont.

With all the greek housing problems, the Kappa Sigmas considered themselves lucky to have a nice house away from residential areas, Kappa Sig president Jeff Pate, a Cloverport senior, said.

"Because we are set away, we have virtually no neighbor-relation problems; however, we may consider moving to greek row if that ever materializes," Pate said.

Last fall the Kappa Sigs had their first Kappa Sig football run to the Middle Tennessee State University game. They raised $500 for Camp Happy Days, a local program for the physically and mentally retarded.

The Kappa Sigs also put out their annual calendar. The calendar featured girls chosen at the Kappa Sig calendar-girl parties.

The Kappa Sigs distribute the calendar at no cost and rarely break even, according to Pate.

The Kappa Sigs returned to school last fall with a smaller chapter because so many members graduated. The solution to this was a good rush, which the Kappa Sigs accomplished.

"Pledging is basically a time for pledges to get to know Kappa Sigma. We have a demerit system for them — not to punish them — but if you don't make a good pledge, it's unlikely that you will make a good brother," Pate said.

The Kappa Sigs tried to participate in everything, greek and university, he said. "We may not always win, but we always participate, which counts for more."

The Kappa Sigs received a national Chapter Standard award and were recognized as one of the top-30 chapters nationally.

Good pledge retention was one of the assets that helped Lambda Chi Alpha do well last year.

"We had 26 pledges and initiated 25 of them," Lambda Chi Alpha president Paul Wellander, a Glen Ellyn, Ill., senior, said. "That shows we have a very strong fraternity education program."

"Our pledges are called associates, and are involved in all facets of Lambda Chi Alpha," Wellander said. "There is much less distinction between our associates and actives as there is in other fraternities. For example, our associates get to vote on chapter matters."

The Lambda Chis won the homecoming house decoration award and placed first in fraternity football and second in campus-wide football.

They also participated in Kappa Delta Washboard and Chi Omega November Nonsense. Their homecoming candidate, Julie Lippert, a Boaz senior, was elected homecoming queen.

Community service was stressed by Lambda Chi.

"We worked closely with the Warren River Mental Health Association, and took senior citizens to the grocery store, and got their hair cut — we assisted in many ways," Wellander said.

The Lambda Chis also kidnapped Coach Clem Haskins, Jim Holten of WBKO and several city commissioners to raise $3000 for the United Way and the Big Brothers of Bowling Green.

"Every year we try to excel in the same things and better ourselves in others," Wellander said.

Being a small fraternity can have many advantages, according to Phi Delta Theta president Andy Hollifield, a Louisville sophomore.

"We fit in fine with the neighborhood we're in," Hollifield said. "We're small so we don't cause many problems."

With 26 active members, the Phi Delt often got beat in intramurals, Hollifield said. "That's OK, though; we always have fun."

The Phi Delt helped with the Special Olympics and were planning a fund-raiser for their new national philanthropy, the prevention of Lou Gehrig's Disease.

"Because our nationals just announced the new philanthropy, we really didn't have a chance to raise money for it during the fall semester," Hollifield said.

One of the major goals for the Phi Delt was to continue to increase in numbers. "Lately we've shown a lot of improvement," Hollifield said.

"Pledging a fraternity like Phi Delt definitely gives you a good reason for staying in school," Hollifield said. "The Phi Delt has a lot of brotherhood, and although we may not be extremely active, there is always something to do at the house."

Last year the Phi Delt received an improvement citation from their nationals, and their adviser, Billy T. Edwards, got runner-up for the best Phi Delt adviser.

IN PREPARATION for the homecoming parade, Cheryl Wormington, a Saudie Arabia junior; David Baulch, a Nashville, Tenn., senior, and Lynn Stone, an Owensboro freshman, mold a globe for the float. They were working at the Lambda Chi house.

—Greg Lovett

Over the border run

Photos by Rick Musacchio

Thanks to the Kappa Sigma fraternity running 100 miles to Middle Tennessee State University on Nov. 5, more physically and mentally handicapped children may be able to attend Camp Happy Days this summer.

Fifteen members of the Western chapter alternated running and driving to the Western-MTSU football game after getting pledges by local businesses and individuals.

"We tried to think of a different fund-raiser this year, one that would be more profitable and less time consuming than the haunted houses that we tried in the last two years," Jeff Pate, president of the local Kappa Sig chapter, said.

Pate estimated that the run would generate $750 for Camp Happy Days, a free summer camp offered to any eligible disabled child in the area. Camp Happy days is the only camp of this kind within a 200-mile radius.

The Kappa Sigs, who have no national philanthropy, were approached several years ago by Charles Daniel, who helps coordinate the program.

Daniel, who was a neighbor to the fraternity house, showed the group slides and presentations about the good work that Camp Happy Days does. Daniel works for Western in the Physical Education and Recreation Department.

Camp Happy Days is sponsored by the Association for Retarded Citizens with Western's Recreation Department co-sponsoring the event, Daniel said. Western provides the facilities free for the use of the camp.

According to Daniel, the camp has been held on Western's campus for the last four years. It is free to any disabled child between the ages of 3 and 21. Disabilities can include mental, physical, learning and emotional. The camp is held in two three-week sessions.

Children are provided with transportation to the camp when possible, and with lunch, Daniel said. The camp runs daily from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Pate said that the fraternity will choose a similar fund-raiser next fall and that the money would again go to benefit the children who attend the camp.

"The Kappa Sigma fraternity has been very good to us. They have tried in every fashion and form to help in direct service to the direct community," Daniel said.

Candace Roberts T

BEGINNING the Kappa Sigma football run, head football coach Jimmy Fiex tosses the ball to Dalton Maples, a Dundee sophomore. Maples was in front of L. T. Smith Stadium.

CLUTCHING the football, Jeff Sasse, a Henderson sophomore, runs for Kappa Sigma's philanthropy, Camp Happy Days. He was on his way to the MTSU football stadium.

ON THEIR WAY to MTSU, Kappa Sigma members Rodney Thomas, a Henderson junior; Ray Goff, a Hartford senior; Sasse, and Steve Nicholson, a Portland, Ind., senior, stop to stretch. They were running to raise money for their philanthropy.

KAPPA SIGMA members Richard Watkins, a Hopkinsville freshman; Bernard Onan, a Henderson junior, and Dave Morgan, a Dawson Springs senior, arrive at MTSU. The run generated about $750 for their philanthropy.

Touch cont.

— Alan Warr

Φ • M

Front row: Cindy Strine, Julie Gremier, Susan Brown, Heidi Kjellmark, Cheryl Warrington, Sheila Warrington, Tammy Crowlford. Second row: Karen Karsch, Gayle Kindred, Karen Revell, Kimberly Logan, Melissa Cox, Sandy Morrison, Bev Ruffie. Back row: Felicia Eberhard, Karla Young, Jennifer Brown, Perry Johnson, Robin Hall, Dorothy Canada, Audrey Dillmann, Jill Johnson.

Φ • M

Front row: Lori Campbell, Kim Jent, Dawn Simms, Manly Blum, Jessica Brunley, Amy Houston, Karen Strange. Second row: Lori Burdett, Laura Ray, Lisa Bahcock, Lynn Stone, Ken Ann Patton, Lisa Neumann, Harriet Carter, Mary Keilman. Back row: Karen Riedel, Tracey Andrews, Janet Wee, Holly Fetherlin, Jessica Rappaport, Marian Loomis, Ciri Ware, Becky Nixon.

The Phi Mu sorority increased their membership by nearly 100 percent last year. They now have about 60 members.

According to Karen Revell, an Anchorage junior and president of Phi Mu, their increase was due to a bittersweet rush.

"Kerrie Stewart, a sister of ours, died over the summer. When we came back to school we were so much closer. It was like we were doing it for Kerrie. We really pulled together and the rushees noticed our closeness," Revell said.

The main goal for the Phi Mu was to "promote our relations with other sororities and the community, as well as the university," Revell said.

"When Western needs something done, they usually come to the greeks, and we do everything we can."

The Phi Mu had a winning year. They won the Pledge Olympics and Spirit Award, placed third in Kappa Delta Washboard, first in intramural football and second in intramural basketball.

PI KAPPA ALPHA member Steve Smith, an Evansville, Ind., junior, tries to get away from Lambda Chi Alpha member Steve Dehler, a Crestwood junior. The Lambda Chis won the flag football game 24-0 and went on to win the fraternity football tournament.

Revell said that much of their success last year was due to the "tremendous improvement in their overall spirit."

The Phi Mu spirit showed in their philanthropy fund-raiser — a greek spirit chain. For 10 cents, greeks could buy links for the chain which began at Downing University Center. The sorority or fraternity with the most links won a trophy. The Phi Mu raised $200 for Project Hope, a foundation that trains people in the medical field to help underprivileged countries.

Leadership was emphasized to the Phi Mu, Revell said. They had several special speakers on goals and leadership, including President Donald Zacharias.

During the fall semester, Pi Kappa Alpha moved from their house on College Street to a new one on 13th Street.

"Moving was the biggest thing that happened to us last year," Pike president Tom Neth, an Evansville, Ind., sophomore, said. "The new house is much better. It's structurally sound, which worried us when we were living on College. We also have good neighbor relations — after all, the Sig Eps are next door."

Aside from re-establishing themselves in a new neighborhood, the Pikes wanted to concentrate on academics, Neth said.

The Pike pledges got third highest of all fraternity grade-point averages.

"Pike pledges have to carry a conference book with them at all times," Neth said. "They also sell programs at football games and are required to join a campus organization."

"By participating in activities outside the fraternity, we represent the university as well as Pi Kappa Alpha," Neth said.

The Pikes participated in the Kappa Delta Washboard Jam-boree and intramurals.

Being in a small fraternity has many advantages, according to Pi Kappa Phi president Darrell Miller, a Summer Shade sophomore.

"Members of Pi Kappa Phi have more say than they would in larger fraternities," Miller said. "There are more opportunities for leadership and more chances to make things happen."

Pi Kappa Phi was still trying to re-establish, which may have hurt them during rush, Miller said. "But we're working on it."

Not having a house also posed a rushing problem for Pi Kappa Phi, the fastest-growing fraternity in the nation.

"A house would be a definite improvement in rush," Miller said. "We're looking at the possibility of renting a house. It's always a possibility."

Attending the Greek Symposium gave the fraternity "many ideas for a more effective rush," Miller said. "It's uphill from now on."

The Pi Kappa Phi maintained a high overall grade-point average of 2.6 and placed second in Chi Omega November Nonsense.

"A very unique aspect of Pi Kappa Phi is that we have our own national philanthropy, PUSH, which stands for Play Units for the Severely Handicapped," Miller said.

Aside from their own philanthropy, Pi Kappa Phi also raised $900 by sponsoring a haunted house with the Greenwood Optimist Club. Some of the proceeds were donated to PUSH, although the event was held for the Optimist Club.

The Pi Kappa Phi were also active with the Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Bowling Green and contributed to the American Heart Association.

Π • K • Α

Front row: Thomas Williams, Philip Hodges, David Smith, Chad Warren. Second row: Todd Johnson, Robert Shels, Scott Duncan, Thomas Nawak, Matt Emery, Thomas Neth. Back row: Stephen Smith, Jeff Greder, Jeff Rogers, Steven Lackert, John Piskotoff, Mark Blakett, Todd Duncan.

Π • K • Φ

Front row: Ben Auclair, Darrell Miller, Donnie Turner. Second row: Lonnie Sauer, Anthony Riter, Matthew Helton. Back row: Jerry Withersow, Harold Kearney, Norman Wells, Jeff Gish.

Touch cont.

A new fund-raiser for their philanthropy was a big event for Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

In February they held the Close-Up Kissing Games at the Jaycee Pavilion in Lampkin Park to raise money for Easter Seals. They sponsored the event in cooperation with Close-Up toothpaste.

The SAEs also had another philanthropy, Muscular Dystrophy, which they raised money for in the fall.

"Our main goal was to pull our grade-point average above the all-men's average," SAE president Dave Takacs, a Stevensville, Mich., junior, said.

With a GPA of 2.69, the highest of all fraternities, the SAEs reached their goal.

Although the SAEs didn't place in Kappa Delta Washboard or Chi Omega November Nonsense, Takacs said, "We had fun anyway."

The SAEs also received a national honorable mention award for their pledge program.

"It's more or less a probational period for pledges," Takacs said. "Everything is done with a constructive purpose, though."

Takacs said that being an SAE had lifelong benefits.

"It will help you on campus, plus in the future," he said. "There are great leadership opportunities in SAE."

Last February, the Sigma Chis moved back to their original house at 1215 College St. For the past two years the fraternity had been renting a house from the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity.

The Sigma Chi spent $96,000 to have a general contractor and an interior decorator renovate their home.

Bob Dillard, a Bowling Green senior and Sigma Chi president, said, "The house is really like a home. It doesn't even look like a fraternity house. You have to see it to really believe it."

Dillard said the fraternity had a successful fall rush, but because they had not moved in to their new house in time for spring rush, they decided not to have any pledges.

All Sigma Chi pledges had to complete the same tasks, Dillard said. Some of these were pledge projects, conferences with the brothers, community services, and a national test.

The Sigma Chi were one of the few fraternities that had its own philanthropy.

The Wallace Village in Broomfield, Colo., was set up by Sigma Chi for brain-damaged children.

Every year the fraternity has hosted the Sigma Chi Derby to raise money for the Wallace Village and a local philanthropy. Part of the Derby was the Coaches Ransom. In this event, sororities asked local businesses for ransom for a kidnapped coach. The sororities received 30 percent of the ransom money for their own philanthropies, the Sigma Chi gave 10 percent to Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Bowling Green, and the rest, about $2000, went to the Wallace Village.

Although the Derby was Sigma Chi's big event, they tried to participate in everything, Dillard said. The Sigma Chi placed second in greek football.

There were many benefits in being a Sigma Chi, Dillard said. "You run a fraternity like you do a business. You really learn a lot about real life."

Being the only sorority with a little sister club added a different dimension to Sigma Gamma Rho.

According to former president Eula Farmer, a Vine Grove senior, "Sigma Gamma Rho sponsors a club, the Gammettes, for freshman girls."

Members of the Gammette Club were introduced into greek life, but they were not obligated to pledge Sigma Gamma Rho.

"Most of our pledges do come out of the Gammette Club," Farmer said. "But we're just as happy for them if they decide to go to another sorority."

Sigma Gamma Rho received a national letter of recognition for their community services in the fall.

The sorority raised money for the Parker Bennett and High Street Community Centers by having dances there.

"Kappa Alpha Psi helped us a lot. They provided music and transportation," Farmer said.

The Sigmas also set up a scholarship fund. "It is awarded to a high school senior who is needy, but also has good grades," Farmer said.

A tradition was continued for the Sigmas by participating in the homecoming step show.

AT THE Greenwood Mall, Sigma Chi members Steve Cline, a Bowling Green sophomore, and Todd Burris, a Vienna, Va., sophomore, solicit drivers to have their cars washed. They were raising money for muscular dystrophy on Labor Day.

—Greg Lovett

Σ • A • E

Front row: Kevin Lammons, David Fowler, David Takacs, Matt Fines. Second row: William West, Scott Hourigan, Louis Browne, Mark Quarles, Tony Willen. Back row: Frank Miller, Brent Thomson, Jack Nunnally, Andrew Lano, Jay Rogers, Jeff Shelton.

Σ • A • E

Front row: Kyle Phillips, Jeff Moorefield, Robert Iturrary, Eric Walker, Chuck Newton. Second row: Jeffery Hayes, Tom Johnson, Ron Walbridge, Glenn Sargent, Mark Gardner. Back row: Shawn Backley, William Dew, Scott Harstock, Doug Gatt, Kevin Atwood, Thomas Petersen.

Σ • X

Front row: Greg Coker, Dan Spinelli, Billy Brantley, Stan Williams. Second row: Reid Poland, David Newman, Barry McIntosh, Bob Dillard, Jerry Heese. Back row: Philip Crews, Tommy Bray, Keith McDonald, Clay Moody, Jim Robinson.

Σ • X

Front row: John Taylor, B. J. Burton, Edward Rothschild, Marty Lack. Second row: Mark McCormack, Kevin Stronson, Dennis Stovall, Allen Knight, Scott Lucas. Back row: Bart White, Jeff Neal, David Deaton, Kevin Rueff, Jerry Pile.

Σ • Γ • P

Front row: Gwendolyn Perry, Bola Fashola, Regina Jones.

Σ • K

Front row: Daphne Wingo, Leigh DeWeese, Michael Wolf, Martha Logsdon. Second row: Jennie McClelland, Carol Young, Karen Himes, LaRenda Rudolph, Kim Jones. Back row: Moira Nicholson, Lisa Sublett, Emily Giltner, Dena Chapman, Eva Sutton, Robin Bullock.

Σ • K

Front row: Leigh Anne Wise, Connie Hagan, Jean Ruby. Second row: Charlee Stradtner, Sandra Wingate, Vickie Golden, Paula Willard. Back row: Beth Eaton, Linda Hargett, Janis Bridges, Lisa Powell.

Σ • N

Front row: Juergen Pfeiffer, Mark Cravens, Danny James, John G. Erskine. Second row: Daniel J. Meyer, Jackie Young, Kurt Crenshaw, Kenneth Rush, Thomas Hancock, Daniel Quire. Back row: Mark Thomas, Jamie Spurlock, Jeff Natcher, Royce Deaton, Robbie Huffman, Don Meadows, Mark High.

Σ • N

Front row: Russell Calhoun, Mark Hildreth, Brad Davis, Dave Hemingway, Rob Jones. Second row: Philip Cuppy, James Gardner, Jimmy DeBolt, Roger Smith, David Manwaring, Wes Reed, Stan Dawson, Steve Morgan. Third row: Jeff Lacy, Kevin Morgan, Tod Hancock, Franklin Brown, Ken Wilson, Keith Wellman, Steve Francis.

Σ • Φ • E

Front row: Mike Hinds, Kurt Steier, Colin Kelly, Brian O'Keefe, Kenneth McGhee, Darwin Colston, Robert Hagan. Second row: Kelly Brent, Scott Willis, Kenneth Flaherty, Edward Carnes, Michael Dennis, Michael Parrish, Dennis Dunville, Cary Hall. Back row: Barry Peterson, Ken Parrish, Michael Bailey, Steve Haffner, Scott Bailey, Rob Tudor, Keith Milby, Jerry Bode, Mike Lister.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON member, Richard Bansemer, a Hendersonville, Tenn., senior, holds their trophy winning Kappa Delta Washboard skit was called "Thelma's Restaurant."

The Sigma Kappas made a big jump last year—moved into the old Sigma house on Chestnut Street.

"It was a big decision to house, and it's been hard, but it's all been worth it," Sigma Kappa president Dena Chapman, a Tompkinsville senior, said.

The house hasn't been recognized as an official Sigma Kappa house yet, but "it's a place where we can all be together," Chapman said. "We feel like we're all a lot better now."

Having a house helped the Sigma Kappas in rush. They got 12 pledges in the spring.

"We felt that was really good because it's harder to get pledges in the spring," Chapman said.

The Sigma Kappas put a lot of emphasis on grades.

"Instead of getting involved in activities, we tried to concentrate on academics," Chapman said. "We paid off—we had the second highest grade-point average."

The Sigma Kappas p

— Alan Warren

second in Kappa Delta Washboard and won a national philanthropy award for giving the most to the American Farm School in Greece.

Sigma Kappa also supported gerontology and visited several nursing homes, including Medco. Another of Sigma Kappa's philanthropies was the Maine Seacoast Mission. Sigma Kappa was founded in Maine.

Chapman said, "Sigma Kappa is a place where a girl can be herself, but still fit in with the group. We're proud of that."

"We're trying to get away from the stigmas attached to sororities."

Renovation of their house at 1311 College St. was the Sigma Nu's top priority last year.

The fraternity contracted to have the upstairs and the kitchen completely renovated and have new carpet, plumbing and electrical work throughout the house.

Sigma Nu president Joe King, Hendersonville, Tenn., junior, said, "We really tried to emphasize grades, too."

The Sigma Nu pledges had the highest pledge class grade-point average of all the fraternities.

Franklin Brown, a Sigma Nu pledge, had the highest GPA of all fraternity pledges.

Another goal for Sigma Nu was to "continue the tradition of excelling in athletics," King said. "We did really well in intramurals in the fall."

Each fall the Sigma Nus sponsor their annual Powderpuff Football Tournament for the sororities. Members of Sigma Nu served as coaches for the sororities. The fraternity made $300 from entry fees and donated it to the American Cancer Society.

Sigma Nu also sponsored a campus-wide three-on-three basketball tournament for a chapter fund-raiser. "It's mostly just a good time, though, because we really don't make much money on it," King said.

The fraternity participated in November Nonsense, the Phonathon, and volunteered to take the Bowling Green Boys' Club skating and had an Easter egg hunt for the children at Potter Christian.

"We had a very successful rush," King said. "It wasn't really big, but it was what we wanted. We got great guys."

In pledging Sigma Nu, about 90 percent of their program was learning about the fraternity. "We emphasize Sigma Nu

Touch

cont.

education," King said.

Jeff Lacy, a Madisonville senior, said, "Being a Sigma Nu has helped me to mature. It gives you the opportunity to get more involved in what's going on around campus."

Continuing a tradition, Sigma Phi Epsilon won the Kappa Delta Washboard Jamboree and also won Chi Omega November Nonsense and the College Bowl.

After winning the local College Bowl, the Sig Ep team traveled to Atlanta in February for the national competition.

Winning both November Nonsense and Washboard was easy for the Sig Eps. Sig Ep president Mike Dennis, a Leitchfield junior, said, "We just said, 'Let's do it and have fun with it—that's the key to winning.'"

When the Sig Eps weren't busy winning, they were raising money for their philanthropy, the Bowling Green Boys' Club. In the fall they held a softball tournament for greeks and raised $800. The Sig Eps also had a picnic and a basketball clinic for the Boys' Club.

One of the Sig Eps' goals was to "increase our manpower,"

Dennis said. At 45 members, they had an increase of about 15. Part of this was due to a successful fall rush, Dennis said. During the spring, the Sig Eps got nine pledges, the fourth-most for a fraternity.

Steve Haffner, a Louisville senior, said, "The purpose of pledging is to learn about the history of Sig Ep, and to get to know each brother personally. Sig Ep is really good about making sure each pledge feels part of the fraternity. You also learn the importance of budgeting your time."

One of the major advantages of being a Sig Ep was getting to "associate with guys like yourself and guys who are quite a bit different," Dennis said. "You really learn a lot."

Haffner said Sig Ep benefitted WKU by "being enthusiastic toward university activities and participating in civic projects to help greeks' image."

During a year when there were many greek housing problems, the Sig Eps remained in their house at 1317 Kentucky St.

"Our house is probably one of the nicest on the block," Dennis said. "We really don't have any neighbor-relations programs, especially since our new neighbors are the Pikes." ■

Behind the bucks

Photo Illustration by Bobby Roe

"Greek life is a great life," except the high cost of it.

Although most sororities and fraternities have fixed dues, there often are many unexpected expenses, most of which take the form of jerseys, jewelry, pictures, and dance favors.

Kappa Delta member Jenna Hulse, an Owensboro junior, said, "I probably spend between $50 and $60 dollars a semester on KD clothes and small things."

"There are little things you never would have thought of," Alpha Delta Pi member Laura McClellan, a Louisville sophomore, said. "There are always little fees here and there," she said.

Although these things are nice to have, one is never forced to buy them.

"I've never been required to buy shirts and stuff like that—it's all optional," Chi Omega member Lisa Wilhelm, a Louisville freshman, said.

Alpha Omicron Pi member Jennifer Seitz, a Bowling Green freshman, said, "You don't have to buy, but you know you want to be a part of it."

Social functions and dances take a lot out of a greek's pocketbook. Alpha Phi Alpha member Danny Anderson, a Clairton, Penn., junior, said about 80 to 90 percent of his fraternity's time is devoted to social functions, which can get expensive.

Pi Kappa Alpha member Jeff McCall, an Evansville, Ind., freshman, said he spent anywhere from $60 to $100 on social functions.

If a spring formal is held out of town, a greek could expect to pay as much as $200 for a single weekend's fun. KD member Sherri Murphy, a Lexington sophomore, admitted formals are expensive, but "you can't do without them."

Another major expense for greeks was having a little sister or brother. Most sororities and fraternities require members to buy the pledges visors, paddles, and jerseys and to take them out to eat when they are initiated. Murphy said having a little sister was expensive, "but I wouldn't give her up for anything."

Leslie Roby, a Lexington freshman and Murphy's little sister in KD, said, "I wouldn't be able to afford a little sister right now. It's worth it if you have the money. You really develop a special friendship."

Sigma Nu member Dan Meyer, a Tell City, Ind., sophomore, wasn't surprised either. "I expected extra expenses," he said. "I was actually surprised my dues covered so much—except spring formal."

Although most greeks don't mind expenses like these, there are times when some have trouble justifying everything they have to pay for.

Sigma Phi Epsilon member Lance Yelvington, a Franklin, Tenn., senior, said, "Payments are unnerving—it's sometimes hard to see what they are going to do. Eventually you do realize that they are legitimate, though."

Delta Tau Delta member Depp Rasner, a Shepherdsville sophomore, was also annoyed by some of the extra costs. "I like to have an explanation before hand."

McClellan said, "I think some expenses are unnecessary—like paying $2 to $3 to sign in and out of events."

Seitz said that many people objected to paying things like fines, but "things like that are usually your own fault."

Delt member O'Brian McKinley, an Elizabethtown junior, said those not living in the house who put "wear and tear" on the house are fined $5.

Getting the money for all these expenses is not easy for all greeks, especially when there are set dues that they also must pay.

The first set fee that a greek incurs is the pledge fee. Lambda Chi Alpha treasurer Randy Kimmel, a Cleveland senior, said their pledge fee consists of three $30 payments. On the average, pledge fees run from $60 to $190.

Before a pledge is initiated, he must pay an initiation fee. This usually runs from $100 to $180, but is paid only once and goes to the national organization.

Greeks must also pay monthly or semester dues, depending on the national and local bylaws of the sorority or fraternity. Delta Sigma Theta's dues fluctuate according to membership size. Carla Pinkston, a Waco, Texas, sophomore, said, "The larger the membership, the smaller the dues."

Although not all greek organizations have houses, many must pay a housing fee to either pay off their house or save for a future house. ADPi president Carol Gibson, a Brownsville senior, said each member of her sorority pays $25 each semester for four semesters.

The grand total of all these fees is more than most greeks expect. Alpha Gamma Rho member Brad Dean, a Liberty junior, said that he paid about $670 per semester.

Despite all the money spent, there seem to be few regrets among the greeks.

"All the money will be worth it when you remember all the neat things that happened and the friends you made," he said.

Alpha Xi Delta member Ginny Carroll, a Louisville junior said, "Anything worth having is worth paying for."

Ewan Leslie and Lorri Burchett

the touch of Sports

The year in sports went from an intercollegiate championship to losing seasons.

After a 2-8-1 record, head football coach Jimmy Feix resigned the position that he had held 16 years. Dave Roberts moved from Vanderbilt to take the position and spent his first weeks living with the players in Douglas Keen Hall.

The swim team won their sixth consecutive Mid-West Intercollegiate Championship. One swimmer carried the touch of red to the Olympic time trials.

The Lady Toppers made their first post-season appearance ever in the National Women's Invitational Tournament, but lost in the second game.

And attendance at men's basketball games increased after a board of regents decision to let students into games free upon paying a mandatory athletic fee.

—Tony Kinnes

Inside:

314 Continuing their winning tradition, the Lady Toppers dominate the sports scene. The team relives the season.

326 A new event opens up the basketball season. Midnight Mania draws an enthusiastic crowd to Diddle Arena.

340 A South African senior runs his way to the top. Ashley Johnson looks at his four years at Western.

SWEAT POURS off of Mike McMahan, a Vine Grove freshman. McMahan relaxed after running at a meet in Evansville.

PLAYING rugby are Woody Tichenor, a Westpoint junior; Ronny Massey, and Danny Baumann, a Mount Washington senior. The match was against Fort Knox.

—Mike Healy

FOOTBALL

A dedicated coach, a hardworking team and close games almost made for a successful season, but

Almost doesn't count

Following a 5-5 slate last fall, the Hilltoppers drifted further from being a national football contender as they turned a 2-8-1 record.

Coach Jimmy Feix, who completed his 16th year at the helm of the Topers, admitted to being "overly optimistic and under-realistic" before the season began, predicting a possible 7-4 record for his team. This prediction was for a team whose schedule had been rated the ninth toughest in Division I-AA by the "NCAA News."

The reason for this optimism was the granting of an assistant coach to the staff, and five additional scholarships for players, by the Board of Regents.

"I thought this was the miracle cure," Feix said. "It is a step in the right direction, but I now realize it will take two to three years for this to pay off."

"We had 14 seniors last year, and 13 this year," Feix said. "To be a national contender, you need to have 22-25 seniors on the squad. So we'll see the results of the added scholarships in a few years."

However, Feix was quick to point out that with a few breaks and big plays, Western's record this season could have been much different.

The Hilltopper mentor pointed to the last game against Murray as being typical of the whole season.

"We could have won the football game, but a turnover cost us, and we just couldn't make the big plays," Feix said.

The season opened with a Sept. 10 date at the University of Louisville.

Western was wary of U of L quarterback Dean May. Before a crowd of 31,279, May burned the Hilltopper secondary for 360 yards on 20 of 42 passes as the Cardinals won 41-22.

"We played well, but when we started to gain momentum in the fourth quarter, instead of pulling within six points we fell behind by 18 because of a turnover," Feix said.

Western went into its next game at Akron looking for a national ranking and a possible playoff berth. What they received was a bitterly disappointing loss, 14-13.

With a minute to play in the game, sophomore quarterback Scott Travis of Glasgow hit Independence

continued on page 311

LEG BENT BACK. Ironton, Ohio, freshman Dennis Bacon stretches with the rest of his teammates. The football team practiced every weekday afternoon.

"We just couldn't get that one break or big play."

— Jimmy Feix

A PASS INTENDED FOR Arizona junior Jeff Todd is almost intercepted by Southeastern Louisiana players. Western lost the game 7-27.

IN THE LAST 30 seconds of the Austin Peay game, linebacker Paul Gray, a Gilbertsville senior, buries his face in his hands. Western lost the game by 10 points.

AT THE BOWLING GREEN-Warren County Airport, Coach Jimmy Feix and news commentator Wes Strader talk while the team loads the plane to Youngstown, Ohio. Youngstown State defeated Western 24-13.

FOOTBALL

WITH HIS RIGHT LEG resting on his helmet, Mike Clemens, an Owensboro sophomore, holds an ice pack on his knee. Clemens was injured in the last quarter of the Murray game.

WESTERN'S PLAYERS HUDDLE in the rain at the Eastern game. The game ended in a 10-10 tie.

— Mike Collins

— Mike Collins

NASHVILLE, TENN., FRESHMAN Keith Paskett runs for a touchdown in the Eastern-Western game. The game was the highlight of the season as Western tied number-one ranked Eastern.

AS CROWDS AND PLAYERS leave the stadium, Robb Howerton, a freshman guard from Evansville, Ind., sits on the bench after the Murray game. Western lost the last game of the season 7-3.

— Mike Collins

— Mike Healy

Almost cont.

freshman Alan Mullins with a 31-yard scoring strike to pull within one point. Western elected to go for the two-point conversion to win, but failed.

AT THE SOUTHEASTERN LOUISIANA game, Walter York, a Bowling Green senior, tackles an offensive player. SLU was Western's first home-game opponent.

Evansville, Ind., freshman John Lacey then proceeded to recover Princeton sophomore Walter Haberlock's onside kick, but a 37-yard field goal attempt by Haberlock with five seconds to play was partially blocked.

"This was a crush to our kids," Feix said. "They never really recovered from this, and spent the next four games pointing to the Eastern game."

Tailback Glendell Miller, an

Owensboro sophomore, had his second straight 100-yard game. Against Louisville, he gained 119 yards on 26 carries, and rushed for 129 yards on 36 attempts against Akron.

If the Toppers were indeed looking past opponents to the Eastern game, it was evident by their losses of 13-3 to Austin Peay in Clarksville, 27-7 to Southeastern Louisiana in Bowling

continued on page 312

— Mike Collins

Almost cont.

Green, and 24-13 to Youngstown State in Youngstown, Ohio.

The Western gridders must have sensed that Eastern was only a week away as they defeated Tennessee Tech 17-0 at home on Oct. 15.

Western then went into Richmond to face Eastern Kentucky on Hanger Field on Oct. 22.

So frustrating had been Western's season thus far, that the 10-10 tie with the then No. 1-ranked Colonels was labeled a "victory of sorts" by Feix and others.

Freshman Keith Paskett of Nashville scored Western's only touchdown on a 76-yard punt return, the second longest ever for WKU. Bowling Green freshman Adam Lindsey, who punted 12 times during the day for a 41.4-yard average, dropped a punt on the two-yard line. This field position enabled the Hilltoppers to get the ball back for Lindsey's tying 29-yard field goal with 30 seconds left to play.

Morehead State invaded L. T. Smith Stadium for homecoming Oct. 29. They went home victims of a 38-7 loss to the Hilltoppers.

Western had its biggest offensive output of the season against the Golden Eagles, rolling up 347 yards in total offense.

With an injured Miller on the sidelines, sophomore tailback Danny Embree of Buffalo, Ky., rushed for 152 yards on 27 carries and scored two touchdowns.

Paskett scored on an 80-yard reverse play for WKU's longest offensive play of the season, and second longest in its history.

Western then returned to their losing ways, dropping the final three games

BALL CLUTCHED in hand, tailback Glendell Miller, an Owensboro sophomore, attempts to get outside the Austin Peay defense. Austin Peay defeated Western 13-3.

at Middle Tennessee 26-7, and at home to Eastern Illinois 34-14 and Murray State 7-3.

Travis finished the season completing 85 of 193 passes for over 1,000 yards.

"I think he made fine progress through the season," Feix said of Travis.

"He had a couple of things that kept him down. He had a few injuries through the season, plus the media hurt him quite a bit. They just destroyed his confidence."

Summarizing the year, Feix said, "We just couldn't get that one break or big play. The games like Akron and Murray we could've easily won."

Doug Gott T

FOOTBALL

Scoreboard

Won 2

	Opp.
Louisville	41
Akron	14
Austin Peay	13
S. E. Louisiana	27
Youngstown State	24

Lost 8

WKU	22	Tennessee Tech	0
13	Eastern Kentucky	10	10
3	Morehead State	17	38
7	Middle Tennessee	26	7
13	Eastern Illinois	34	14
	Murray State	7	3

Tied 1

FRONT ROW — Richard Sampson, Ricky Schneider, Jeff Todd, Will Rice, Scott Rouch, Jim King, Walter York, Paul Gray, Reginald Johnson, Ronnie Fishback, Greg Barnes, Robert Ray, Marvin Cottrell, Tommy Smith. SECOND ROW — Roland Haun, Dante Carpenter, Paul Majors, Ty Campbell, Danny Embree, Randy Welch, Randy Grimes, David Hall, Mike Hamilton, Tyrone Byrd, David Norwood, Charlie Houser, Mickey Lewis, Tim Mooney. THIRD ROW — Adam Lindsey, Greg Taylor, Glenn Hickman, Joel Whitney, Willy Branham, Larry Hoster, Stacey Johnson, David Daido, Richard Bryant, Rick Denstorf, Robb Howerton, John Lacey, Mike Scott, Tom Lucky, Mark Fatkin. FOURTH ROW — Frank Miller, George

Banks, Glendell Miller, Darrell Sadler, Rodney Clark, Justin Del, Alan Mullins, Mike Clemens, Mike Elrod, Steve Biggs, Stuart Bundy, Tommy Pace, Willy Brown, Terry Mimms, Walter Haberlock. FIFTH ROW — Tommy Greer, Sammy York, Neil Spence, Kevin Thomas, Danny Jenkins, Mark Williamson, Mike Bradley, Scott Travis, Barry Anderson, Steve Shaw, Gary Babb, Luther Gibbs, Todd McGarth, Rob Bancroft, Kevin Wright. SIXTH ROW — Scott Camp, Dennis Bacon, Chaz Martin, Orlando Rogers, Erick Peoples, Doug Moutardier, Antoni Sinkfield, Steve Smith, Dale Abernathy, Barry Ballard, Roger Held, Greg Apperson, Jerry Butcher, Paul Schmuck, Terry Market. SEVENTH ROW — Roland Cole, Don Johnson,

David Bailey, Keith Paskett, Alonzo Smiley, Terry Malone, Ron Byars, Steve Stanford, DeWayne Mullins, Darrin Rickard, Brian Laferty, Kenny Coatsville, Billy Hearn, Prentice Bruton, Pat McKenzie, Tony Vascil. EIGHTH ROW — Fred Hina, Mark Linder, Todd Anderson, Tai Johnson, Mike Weissmann, Alan Overby, Eric West, Loren Shipley, Dan Brennan, Dwaine Saalman, David Erie, Rip Collins, Charlie Pride, Mike Austin, Mike Martin, Dwayne Ferguson, Mike Jander, Danny Hape, William Fortune, Pat Riley. BACK ROW — Bill Edwards, Randy Deere, Mark Clark, Larry Walker, Mike Cassidy, Jimmy Feix, Butch Gilbert, Sam Clark, Clarence Baker, John Peck, Steve Wanta, Toby Peterson, Bill Murphree.

WATER FROM TRAINER Todd Anderson, a Nashville, Tenn., freshman, refreshes fullback Larry Heater, a Louisville sophomore, during practice. Practices saw temperatures reach as high as 100 degrees.

Reaching the goal

Perseverance. That was the key to success for the Lady Toppers during the 1983-84 basketball season. Injuries, inexperience and inconsistencies plagued the team, but in the end the team had a 21-11 record, a fourth-place finish in the National Women's Invitational Tournament and most of all, respect.

"I talk about respectability for our program," second-year coach Paul Sanderford said. "I think it starts here at the university. You work for that first, then the respect of the community, then national respect. I think that now we have all three."

Western approached the season in an enviable position. All starters from last year's 22-7 team were returning and Sanderford was enjoying a wonderful recruiting year. But the team was also very young.

The team suffered a major blow before the season began. The red-white game in Scottsville brought misfortune. All-American Lillie Mason, a Russellville junior who led the team in scoring with an 18-point average last year, suffered torn ligaments and was lost for the season.

"Losing Lillie Mason was like moving from a Cadillac to a Volkswagen," Sanderford said. "She is one of the finest athletes in the country. I think the team showed a lot of character in handling that."

The Lady Toppers opened the season with an easy 86-50 victory over Virginia Commonwealth in the Bowling Green Bank Invitational. Then came the tremendous 84-80 overtime win over national powerhouse Old Dominion, and with it, the loss of another player, Dianne Depp, an Owensboro senior. Depp, Western's second-leading scorer and rebounder from last season, would miss six games with an ankle injury.

"We filled all the voids from last year with recruiting," Sanderford said. Then we lost our strength from last year—our inside game. Our field-goal percentage was not as good as last year because we took so many outside shots."

Although the injuries were beginning to add up, so were the wins. The Toppers were ranked 17th and 18th in the nation in two early-season polls. Then the Lady Toppers went on the road to win seven of eight away games.

"We were very inconsistent, especially during the first of the year," Sanderford said. "That is the mark of a young team."

—Bobby Roe

OUTREACHING her Northern Kentucky opponent, Dana Cunningham, a Bowling Green freshman, controls the jump ball. Western won the game 83-40.

Things changed when the Lady Toppers returned to Diddle Arena. After coasting to a 74-53 win over Kentucky State, they took on 11th-ranked Alabama, a team that came in with a 17-2 record including a 30-point win over Kentucky in Lexington. Led by Depp's 20 points and six rebounds, Western upset the Crimson Tide 69-66 in a game that Sanderford thought was a highlight of the season.

"The Old Dominion win was a great win—it was a giant step for our program," Sanderford said. "But those sometimes hurt you when they come so early in the season."

"The biggest win was over Alabama. We were struggling prior to that game. I thought we played better after that game."

The win gave the Lady Toppers a record 17 consecutive victories at home. The streak was extended to 19 as Western defeated Louisville 72-57 and blasted Northern Kentucky, 83-40, behind the shooting of guard Kami Thomas, a Bowling Green sophomore. The Northern Kentucky win proved costly, though, as guard Clemette Haskins, the team's leading scorer, took an awkward fall and suffered a leg injury that would put her on the sidelines for four games.

The Lady Toppers put their winning streak on the line against Dayton, but it ended as Western fell 82-72 to Dayton, who would go on to the Division II Final Four.

Led by Louisville junior Gina Brown's 16 points, the Lady Toppers returned to their winning ways with a 71-66 victory at Tennessee Tech. Behind Thomas' 27 points, Western rolled to a 74-52 win over South Florida at home, then dropped a 12-point loss to Vanderbilt on the road.

After defeating Morehead, the Lady Toppers met Cincinnati without the services of Depp, the victim of another ankle injury. Depp, just 18 rebounds shy of the school's all-time record, would miss the rest of the regular season.

Western closed out the regular season with wins over Morehead and Alabama-Birmingham, and entered the Sun Belt Conference tournament in Norfolk, Va., seeded fourth, with a record of 19-8.

continued on page 316

COACH Paul Sanderford gives defensive instructions to the team during the South Florida game. Western won 74-52.

—Bobby Roe

—Bobby Roe

DURING the Alabama game, Clemette Haskins, a Bowling Green freshman; Dianna Depp, an Owensboro senior; Linda Martin, a Peoria, Ill., junior; Cindy Young, a Monticello, Ind., senior; and Laura Ogles, a Scottsville freshman, glance down court. Western rallied to upset Alabama 69-66.

Reaching

cont.

Behind Scottsville freshman Laura Ogles' 16 points and Brown's nine rebounds, the Lady Toppers posted an easy 83-42 win over South Florida in the opening round of the tournament. A rematch with Old Dominion in the semifinals brought an 80-60 defeat despite Haskins' 24 points. Haskins was named first-team All-Sun Belt, while Brown made the second team and Thomas, honorable mention. The Lady Toppers bowed out of the tourney with a record of 20 and nine.

Western failed to get an at-large bid to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, but when invited to play in the National Women's Invitational Tournament in Amarillo, Texas, Sanderford had accomplished his goal for the season: to win 20 games and go to a post-season tournament.

If getting to the NWIT earned respect for Western, the Lady Toppers' performance there added to it tremendously. After trailing California-Berkley midway through the first half, Western began to force turnovers and managed to out rebound the Golden Bears despite a distinct height disadvantage.

"We had to get over the jitters," Sanderford said. "Our inexperience showed. Linda Martin, a Peoria, Ill., junior, and Cindy Young, a Monticello, Ind., senior, came off the bench and keyed the comeback."

continued on page 318

AVOIDING the pressure of Kentucky State defense, guard Cindy Young attempts to pass the ball to a teammate. Western defeated Kentucky State, 74-53.

—Bobby Roe

—Alan Warren

VANDERBILT'S Barbara Brackman, and Sharon Ottens, a Seabree sophomore, battle for possession of a rebound. Western lost the game, 68-76.

Scoreboard

Women's Basketball

		Won 21	Lost 11
Virginia Commonwealth	50 86	Middle Tennessee	69 72	South Florida	52 74
Old Dominion	80 84	Miami	58 65	Vanderbilt	76 68
Kentucky Wesleyan	65 92	St. Joseph	48 73	Morehead State	55 71
Evansville	36 86	South Alabama	84 64	Cincinnati	85 74
Florida State	75 79	Alabama at Birmingham	61 93	Morehead State	66 90
Louisiana Tech	82 50	Kentucky State	53 74	Alabama in Birmingham	72 94
Minnesota	61 69	Alabama	66 69	South Florida	42 83
Southern Illinois	66 60	Louisville	57 72	Old Dominion	80 60
District of Columbia	62 79	Northern Kentucky	40 83	California-Berkley	76 82
UNC Charlotte	79 63	Dayton	82 72	Vanderbilt	79 68
		Tennessee Tech	66 71	Clemson	110 106

FRONT ROW—Pam Herford, Terrie Castle, Nina Parrish, Linda Martin, Christy Higdon, Cindy Young, Clemette Haskins.

ROW—Paul Sanderford, Dianne Depp, Lillie Mason, Melinda

BACK Carlson, Sharon Ottens, Annette Jones, Laura Ogles, Dana Cunningham, Christy Earnhardt, Randy Tallent, Susan Porter.

Reaching

cont.

Western went on to post an 82-76 victory over California Berkley, behind Ogles' 20 points and the rebounding of Brown and Sharon Ottens, a Seabee sophomore. The Lady Toppers dropped a 79-68 division to Vanderbilt, the team that went on to win the tournament. Then Western faced Clemson in a battle for third place that turned out to be a real thriller.

"That was by far the best game in the tournament," Sanderford said. "Clemson was in the top 20 every week except the last. I thought we played the last 15 minutes as well as we could play."

Clemson led by as many as 13 points in the first half and 11 after intermission, but the Lady Toppers fought back and sent the game into overtime before losing 110-106.

Haskins was named to the All-Tournament team after connecting on 30 of 51 shots from the floor and scoring 67 points for the three games. Depp finished the tournament just 12 rebounds short of the school record.

For the Lady Toppers, the season was fairly remarkable and because Western accomplished so much this season with a very young team, the future looks promising.

"I think it was a great year. But it could have been a better year if we had had everyone helping," Ottens said. "Everyone realized what the situation was and that we had to pull together."

"It was a great year, considering," Sanderford said. "I was really proud of the kids. They played with such intensity throughout the tournament. I was disappointed during the season at times. The areas where we were weak were areas where Mason and Depp could have helped us. I really don't know anything else we could have done."

"I think the future is still ahead of us. To compete at the level where we want to compete—the national level—we need a couple more good athletes."

And for Lady Topper basketball, the best is yet to come.

Christy Drucker

—Bobby Roe

SIDELINED Haskins listens to coach Sanderford during a time out in the South Florida game. Haskins suffered an ankle injury.

WESTERN'S Ottens controls a jump ball over South Florida's Sheryl Williams. Western defeated the Lady Brahms 74-52 in the home game.

—Bobby Roe

—Bobby Roe

RADIO ANNOUNCER Paul Childers interviews Depp after the Northern Kentucky game. Depp played center in the game which Western won.

BEFORE the final home game of the season, Depp gets a hug from her father. All seniors were honored with a rose.

—Bobby Roe

Too many close calls

—Todd Anderson

—Bobby Rice

—Bobby Rice

TO BLOCK the shot of a Louisiana Tech player, Kennard Johnson goes above the rim. Western lost the game 71-73.

I think success should be measured in how you played, not always wins and losses. From the standpoint of effort and playing up to our potential, we had a great season," head coach Clem Haskins said.

But, from mid-January to mid-February, Western lost 10 of 11 games by a total of just 23 points.

The Hilltoppers rebounded from the slump somewhat late in the year, playing Louisville in a close game, destroying Alabama-Birmingham on national television, and winning their first Sun Belt conference tournament game in WKU history.

The Tops looked like they had BITING a red towel. Coach Clem Haskins (previous page) anxiously watches his Hilltoppers. The team ended the season with a 12-17 record.

recovered with an impressive win over Old Dominion, but proceeded to fall by two points to Virginia Commonwealth and South Alabama again.

"The slump was a combination of a lot of things," Haskins said. "It was a missed free throw in one game, a turnover or missed shot in another."

"Those close games this year will be of benefit to us in the future. We gained a lot of maturity and experience throughout the year. Most important, however, was the attitude our team displayed this season."

The eighth game of the eight-game losing streak was the most bitter for Western. They tied the consecutive home loss streak at five set in 1928-29, and were within two of the consecutive-game losing streak set in 1929-30.

"After some of the close losses, it got into our players' sub-conscious when they were out there," Haskins said. "We started playing not to lose instead of playing to win. But I felt we could overcome it because we had the character and class in our people to do it. We just wanted to put it beside us and keep playing good basketball."

IN THE GAME against the Turkish National Team, Tellis Frank, a freshman from Gary, Ind., attempts a field goal. Frank scored seven points, but the Toppers lost 59-58 in Diddle Arena.

Despite the 12-17 finish for the Toppers, coach Haskins found many good points of the season.

"We won our first Sun Belt tournament game, won five conference games compared to four last year, and showed great improvement."

"We never really got down despite

continued on page 325

—Bobby Rice

HILLTOPPER Bobby Jones hangs on to the ball as his opponent catches his balance. Despite a losing season, the basketball team had made improvements from the past season.

WHILE WATCHING the action on the floor, Clarence Martin, an Alexander City, Ala., sophomore; Bobby Jones, a Macon, Ga., senior, and Bryan Asberry, a Gary, Ind., freshman, wait patiently on the bench during the Wendy's Classic. Western lost the game to Georgia, 85-68.

— Bobby Roe

TEAMMATES Kannard Johnson and Bryan Asbury prevent Old Dominion's Clarence Handley. Western held Hendley so that he scored only four points.

SENIOR Gary Carver kicks at a pass thrown by University of Alabama at Birmingham's Jerome Mincy. Western upset UAB 89-76 in the final regular season game.

— Bobby Roe

Too close cont.

the fact that we were losing some very close, tough ball games. That makes me realize that our team really knew what kind of talent it had. It's only a matter of time before some really good things happen for us," he said.

In the fifth game of the season, one of Western's biggest victories turned out to be its biggest loss.

The Hilltoppers defeated Cincinnati 71-54. But they lost starting center Clarence Martin, an Alexander City, Ala., sophomore. Martin, who started at the pivot as a freshman, was coming off a team-high 20 points in the Rollins victory. Unfortunately for Topper fans, Martin had sustained a knee injury, and was out for the season. Martin was redshirted and will again have sophomore eligibility next year.

The injury to Martin forced highly touted Cincinnati, Ohio, freshman Kannard Johnson into a prominent role for the Toppers. The 6-9 Johnson ended up leading the Sun Belt Conference in field goal percentage, with 60.7 percent. He started more games (23 of 29) than any other freshman since Mike Prince in 1976-77. Johnson scored 370 points on the year, second best by a freshman to Prince, finished the season with a 12.8 points per-game average, and pulled down six rebounds a game. At the end of the season, Johnson, who had a season high of 27 points against Dayton, was named honorable mention All-Sun Belt.

Western came under National Collegiate Athletic Association investigation while recruiting Johnson. Haskins broke NCAA policy by taking an academic adviser with him and other players.

During the Carson Newman game one Hilltopper fan taunted a Carson Newman player into coming up in the stands after him, while another was arrested for allegedly striking a visiting player on the head with a metal folding chair.

Western's four seniors — Bobby Jones, Ken Hatcher, Gary Carver, and Darryl Travis — went out in style in their last home game, winning big over UAB 89-76. ESPN viewers watched the Hilltoppers shoot a blistering 71.1 percent from the floor, a Diddle Arena record. Carver, a 6-6 forward from Clifty, had a career-high 22 points.

"I've really gotten attached to these guys. They really were a joy to coach. It was great to see them mature not only as basketball players, but also as men," Haskins said.

Haskins will be counting on the continued development of several backcourt returnees next season. Johnny Taylor, whose flashy play proved valuable to the Toppers, and brothers James and Dennis Johnson will come back.

Billy Gordon, and transfers Jon Lawson (Purdue) and Mike Ballenger (Kentucky) will all return.

"This was like Mike's freshman year," Haskins said. "He didn't get to play his first year at Kentucky, and redshirted last year. He'll come back strong next season."

"Considering all the things from this year, it's all encouraging to me," Haskins said. "We played good, hard basketball. We didn't win every game, but we had great fan turnout."

Doug Gott

Scoreboard

Men's Basketball
Won 12		Lost 17
	Opp.	WKU
Georgia State	39	61	Middle Tennessee	61	92	South Florida	56	54
Georgia	85	68	Carson Newman	72	76	Morehead State	69	65
Louisiana Tech	73	71	Evansville	62	73	South Alabama	66	65
Rollins	67	78	Alabama in Birmingham	71	56	Old Dominion	67	70
Cincinnati	54	71	Jacksonville	58	59	Virginia Commonwealth	69	67
Old Dominion	75	68	UNC Charlotte	45	47	South Alabama	73	71
Georgetown	53	41	South Florida	60	58	UNC Charlotte	76	80
			Jacksonville	76	74	Louisville	69	60
			Virginia Commonwealth	52	49	Alabama in Birmingham	76	89
			Eastern Kentucky	60	58	South Florida	53	57
			Dayton	71	68	Old Dominion	78	72

Front row: Stefan Taylor, Billy Gordon, Dennis Johnson, George Whittaker, David Clark, James Hogan, Steve Garden. Back row: Frank Cardwell Jr., Donnie McFarland, Clem Haskins, Gary Carver, Mike Smith, Kannard Johnson, Clarence Martin, Tellis Frank, Bryan Asberry, Ken Hatcher.

Basketball breakthrough

Photos by Bobby Roe

It was dark outside. It was late at night. And a mania was sweeping the campus.

It was Midnight Mania; the night Western unveiled its 1983-84 edition of the Hilltopper men's basketball team at Diddle Arena.

Fans got their first look at the squad at 12:01 a.m. Oct. 15, the first date of practice allowed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The Toppers were ranked in the top 20 in the nation in recruiting, and the new faces — as well as veterans from previous campaigns — were introduced to the crowd.

A sock hop from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m. got people in a party spirit.

Then came a 30-minute pep rally featuring Big Red, the cheerleaders and the WKU Pep Band.

Red towels waved from the stands as an estimated 3,500 students chanted "Go Big Red, Go Big Red!" The band played the fight song, while people clapped in unison, and Big Red danced and jumped around the floor.

Head basketball coach Clem Haskins walked out to center court and was wildly cheered. The Toppers were aiming for 20 wins, the Sun Belt Conference championship and the coveted Final Four in the NCAA tournament, Haskins said.

Then came the 60-second countdown. Fanfare from the Pep Band, Big Red and the cheerleaders accompanied the final 10-second count. Three . . . two . . . one . . . The loudspeaker blared, "Introducing a 6-9 guard from Gary, Ind. . . . Tellis Frank!" Frank burst through a paper banner and ran out onto the court, while the fans cheered. Each player was sponsored by a different campus organization which made the banners. The team was introduced in that manner until a final walk-on was left.

"Introducing, Mr. Hilltopper! . . ." and President Donald Zacharias jogged onto the court, slapped high fives with the team and coaches, and took a seat on the sidelines.

AS HE is introduced, Cincinnati, Ohio, junior, Johnny Taylor, breaks through a banner made for him by a campus organization.

Practice began. There was shooting, running and passing drills, including fancy layups and slam-dunks. Each jam brought a loud "Boom!" from the fans.

Louisville sophomore Tom Revell said, "This is the most alive I've seen it (Diddle Arena). It's great! This really gets the college fired up for basketball season."

Guard Bobby Jones, a Macon, Ga. senior, liked the idea, too. "It was a great move by the university to do this," he said. "We need to get the students back into the arena and get their support."

"I'm sorry they didn't think of this two or three years ago," Jones said.

Jones said he would visit next year, and hoped to see a similar sight.

It will be dark. It will be late at night. And the mania will be sweeping the campus.

Lou Bloss T

WHILE SPORTING new Nike tennis shoes, President Donald Zacharias prepares to make his debut on the basketball court. Zacharias posed as "Mr. Hilltopper" during Midnight Mania.

AS THEY CHEER for the Toppers, a group of Chi Omegas show their school spirit. They numbered among the estimated 3,500 students attending the event.

AFTER THE PRACTICE. Dennis Johnson, a Morganfield junior, Darryl Travis, a Kuttawa senior, and Ken Hatcher, a Campbellsville junior, change out of their uniforms. The practice lasted about three hours.

PLAYER INTRODUCTIONS bring Hattiesburg, Miss., freshman Mike Smith out on the floor. Smith slapped high fives with teammate James Johnson, a Morganfield sophomore.

A 10-K road race and a fast-paced basketball tournament are becoming

Classic traditions

Usually the streets in Bowling Green are just that. But on Nov. 5, 10 kilometers of road became much more — the course for the fourth annual Wendy's-Daily News 10K Classic.

Over 3,500 runners gathered in Bowling Green for the 10-kilometer race and the one-mile "fun run."

On a chilly Saturday morning, former Western All-American Nick Rose finished in first place for the fourth consecutive year. Rose finished with a time of 28:18, just shy of his Classic record of 28:15 set in 1980.

Another former Western runner, Swag Hartel, finished in second place with a time of 29:26.

The winner of the women's division, Janet Allnutt of Louisville, ran her first Classic, finishing with a time of 35:00.

Dan Davis, president of Wendy's in Bowling Green, said, "The race was successful because of the record number of runners and because it was named one of the top-25 road races in the country."

The Classic activities were not limited to the road races. The night before the race, there was a banquet with featured speaker, Dr. George Sheehan, author of seven books on running. And after the race, the classic party was held at the Red Carpet Inn.

A free breakfast and lunch were provided for all runners and volunteers. Enough food was prepared for 3,500 people, including 3,500 chicken sandwiches, fruit salads and 7,500 cans of Coke.

In November another kind of Classic was going on. This time it was the Wendy's Classic Basketball Tournament. The fourth annual tournament featured Georgia, Georgia State, Middle Tennessee and Western.

For the fourth consecutive year the Classic attracted a top-20 team. Georgia was ranked 18th in the AP pre-season poll. And it was Georgia who won the Classic, defeating Western 85-68 in the final game.

The Classic is usually held the first weekend in December, but this year

TIGHTLY BUNCHED, over 3,500 runners begin the long haul of the Wendy's-Daily News 10-K Classic. The race began on University Boulevard, and ended in front of L. T. Smith Stadium.

PORTLAND, TENN., native John Robideaux stretches before running in the Classic. It was Robideaux's first long-distance race.

because of scheduling, it had to be held over the Thanksgiving weekend. "We waited too late to schedule teams. We tried to get Memphis State and couldn't schedule them. We like to have the Classic in December while the students are here," Davis said.

In the first game, between MTSU and Georgia, Georgia dominated to win the game 83-67. MTSU came on strong during the first half, tying the score at 37 at halftime. Stan Simpson, MTSU head coach, said, "I was real proud of the way our team played against a team ranked in the top 20."

Georgia head coach, Hugh Durham, said, "In the first half we had a number of defensive breakdowns. In the second half we were much more effective defensively which was the key to the game."

The following game was between Western and Georgia State. During the pre-game warm-ups, entertainment was provided by the San Diego

continued on page 330

AT THE START of the race, Mark Hurrett, a McClean County senior, holds the pacing sign. The racers lined up with the sign nearest their anticipated running time.

FOR THE FOURTH consecutive year, Nick Rose crosses the finish line to win the Wendy's-Daily News 10-K Classic. Rose, a former Western track and cross country All-American, finished the race in 28:18.

Classic cont.

Chicken, alias Ted Giannoulas. The Chicken paid off the referees, hatched a basketball and held up posters of Loni Anderson as GSU players attempted free throws.

Throughout the game, Western shot from the outside to win the game 61-39. Tom Pugliese, GSU head coach, said, "It was a hard-fought ballgame. Western was very well coached."

Gary Carver, a Clifty senior, turned out to be Western's secret weapon for the game. He scored 12 points and had nine rebounds. Carver and Bobby Jones, a Macon, Ga., senior, led the Topper scoring. Jones scored a total of 16 points against GSU.

Head coach Clem Haskins said, "Overall I'm pleased with the win. Anytime you hold a team to under 40 points is great."

In the championship game it was Georgia against Western. Western kept the score close during the first half as they rallied to within four points before going into the locker room, down by seven.

In the second half, Western never got the ball inside and Georgia went on to win 85-68. The bright spot of this game was again Gary Carver. Carver led the Toppers in scoring, with 21 points, and in rebounding, with 12 rebounds. He was the only Western player to be named to the All-Tourney Team.

Other leading scorers were Clarence Martin, an Alexander City, Ala., sophomore, and Johnny Taylor, a Cincinnati, Ohio, junior, both scoring 12 points during the game.

"We don't have any excuses; we got beat by a good ball club," Haskins said.

Melanie Mietz

INTENSITY SHOWS on the faces of forward Kannard Johnson, a Cincinnati, Ohio, freshman, and Clarence Martin, an Alexander City, Ala., sophomore. The two were struggling for possession of the ball.

THE ONLY WKU player to be named to the Wendy's All-Tournament Team, Gary Carver, passes to a teammate. He scored 12 points and had nine rebounds.

HEAD BASKETBALL coach Clem Haskins gives advice to Cincinnati, Ohio, freshman Kannard Johnson. Western was defeated in the third round by 17 points.

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

DEFEAT SHOWS ON the face of Perry Hines, a Drakesboro senior. Hines was watching the WKU loss against University of Georgia.

IN THE CONSOLATION game between Middle Tennessee State University and Georgia State, forward Russell Smith, a 6-7 junior from MTSU, attempts a layup. Reggie Chennault, a 6-7 senior from Georgia State, tried to block the shot.

Bouncing back

It didn't take long for coach Neophytos Papaioannou to bring Western a winning soccer season. The toppers kicked the ball to a respectable 9-8 record in only their second season.

It really wasn't much better — at least on paper — than the 6-7-2 mark the team achieved in the initial season, but the Tops were a much better team.

"We had an excellent season," Papaioannou said.

"The schedule was much harder than last year. And we had six or seven freshmen playing and only nine or 10 returnees, so really it was almost like starting over."

But there would be no more starting over for Papaioannou — at least at Western. The coach, who had become a favorite with his players, fans, and media, resigned after the season in favor of pursuing his doctorate.

"I enjoyed coaching, and I'll probably do it again sometime. I've even had two other offers since resigning," Papaioannou said. "But I just want to go ahead and finish my education."

The team's goal was the Sun Belt tournament in Norfolk, Va., Nov. 3-5. But there they ran into a hot University of North Carolina Charlotte team and lost their first-round game 5-3.

Western jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead early in the first period, but UNCC got two quick goals in the last 20 seconds of the half to tie the score by intermission. In the last half UNCC controlled throughout and Western wore down.

"We didn't have much of a bench," Papaioannou recalled. "They just really ran us down the second half."

But Papaioannou's squad did have their moments in the regular season.

"I was very excited with the way we beat Morehead (Western beat the Eagles 9-2 here and 10-0 at Morehead) because they had practically the same team that beat us badly last year. So I think that shows you what kind of improvement we made over last season."

"That was awfully surprising," Doug Gorman, a Hopkinsville junior, said of Western's easy success against Morehead, "because they had a good team."

Against Evansville the Tops dropped a 3-0 decision to the Aces at the Creason Drive field, but Papaioannou said that he was "very proud" of his team's performance because Evansville was ranked in the top 20 in the nation. "It was really a closer game than that. I think as a whole the team did okay. We have to play teams like that to get better."

The Tops played in streaks. They opened the season with losses to Dayton and Kentucky Wesleyan but bounced back to win six of their next eight games to have a 6-4 mark midway in the season. But consecutive setbacks to Evansville and Bellarmine evened Western's record at 6-6. Papaioannou's team proceeded to win three straight before going to the Sun Belt tourney. They closed out the season with a loss at Vanderbilt.

Papaioannou said he thought his team's strength was the offense and hard work. "We probably had one of the top offenses in the country. I don't know how many goals we scored but it was a whole lot more than the opposition did against us. Another reason why we did so much better than last year was because we worked harder, and when you do that every day in practice, it's going to pay off."

But the lack of experience and defense was a negative for Western, according to Papaioannou. "We lost some close games because of our lack of experience, and in soccer, experience is something that really counts. Our problem was defense. Our structure was just too fragile."

Papaioannou said Western can have a good soccer program — one that can be expected to win consistently — but only if the university puts money into it.

"We feel like we're a major sport," Gorman continued. "But we realize that the campus doesn't see us that way. We're still trying to spread the word."

Steve Givan

Scoreboard

Soccer

	Won 9	Lost 6
	Opp.	WKU
Dayton	4	0
Kentucky Wesleyan	2	1
Morehead St.	2	9
Transylvania	1	3
Brescia	1	12
Kentucky Wesleyan	3	2
Vanderbilt	4	1
Brescia	0	6
Morehead St.	0	10
Tennessee Tech	1	2
Evansville	3	0
Bellarmine	1	0
Georgetown (Ky.)	0	5
Asbury	Forfeit
Tennessee Tech	1	3
UNCC	5	3
Vanderbilt	1	0

Front row: Christopher Slesky, Thomas Schmierer, Chris Lindsay, Keith Miller, Stephen Moore, Bruce Rigby, Greg Merrill, Scott Cormack, Izari Sarudin, Selin Dognayol, Matt Read, Todd Parker, Michael Romanowski. Back row: Neophytos Papaioannou, Kevin Duffey, Charles

Okafer, Andrew Clark, Douglas Bays, John Morris, Polykarpos Melais, Jorge Mitskostas, Douglas Gorman, Robert Dickinson, Jimmy DeBold, Rick Bergen, Felix A'Edoh, Marcus Suter, Mike Burnette, Loren Shipley.

DURING halftime of the Transylvania soccer match, coach Neophytos Papaioannou instructs the team. Papaioannou was Western's first soccer coach.

SOCCER player Scott Cormack, an Evansville, Ind., freshman, is tackled by two Transylvania players. Western won the match 3-1.

Serving a winning season

In only their third year, the volleyball team put together a 30-win season under head coach Charlie Daniel.

"The girls played real well this season and we played some good caliber teams. I think we had a good year," Daniel said.

The Toppers did well considering most of their opponents had a substantial amount of scholarships to offer and a better opportunity to get the best players.

The volleyball team was still limited to book scholarships which only had a value of about $100 per player. This made it hard to recruit top players.

"I think we play better this way knowing that everyone gets the same amount of money. That way nobody gets jealous of one another, and we play better as a team," Tessie Oliver, a Kingsport, Tenn., junior, said.

"The team played with a lot of enthusiasm, and we had a good crowd of people cheering for us," Kathy Moran, a Louisville sophomore, said.

Daniel said that about 200-300 people came to the games this year which was a little more than last year's attendance.

"The attendance was often affected by the nights that the matches were. It seemed that Tuesday night was a bad night, and we seemed to have our matches on Tuesdays," Daniel said.

Most of the Toppers' success lay in the atmosphere in which they played.

"We have a good time when we play. Coach lets us play the radio during practice, and he lets us goof around the first 15 minutes of practice," Oliver said. "This helps us to relax. We play much better when we are relaxed."

The Toppers started the season off shaky by placing fourth of seven in the Missouri-St. Louis Invitational. The Toppers lost two out of the three games in the tournament before rebounding and winning their next two games against Kentucky Wesleyan and Thomas Moore.

In the Topper Smash, a tournament in Diddle Arena, the Toppers had a respectable finish by winning four and losing only three.

A minor setback at the University of Tennessee-Martin put the Toppers temporarily behind, but they rebounded to place second out of seven in the Lambuth Invitational in Jackson, Tenn. The only loss in the tourney was a 10-15, 9-15 decision to Christian Brothers College.

The Toppers tried to avenge an earlier loss at UT-Martin but wound up on the short end of the stick, losing the match 15-10, 7-15, 8-15, 11-15.

They won the next game against Kentucky State 15-13, 15-7 before placing a disappointing fourth of six in the Thomas Moore Tournament in Fort Thomas.

The Toppers won four of the next five, taking victories over Asbury,

Kentucky State, and Indiana State-Evansville. The only loss was at the hands of Austin Peay.

In the WKU Topper Tournament held in Diddle Arena, the Toppers finished third with wins over the University of the South, Fisk, Lambuth, and Kentucky State.

The Toppers then went on a tear, winning the last six games of the year, giving the team enthusiasm going into the Sunbelt Tournament which was also held in Diddle Arena. They finished fifth of seven, winning two games against the University of North Carolina Charlotte and South Alabama.

"The South Alabama game was our best game of the season. They had 12 full scholarship players but our girls were not intimidated by that. We just outplayed them that night," Daniel said.

The Toppers ended the season at 30-18 — a great improvement over last season's 26-24 finish.

In the 1984-85 season, the Toppers will play a tougher schedule to prepare the team for the Sunbelt Tournament at the end of the year.

Daniel said, "In order for us to get better the girls are going to have to play tougher competition. I could easily schedule us a 30-win season, but I think the girls want to face a challenge and that is what they will be doing."

Mike Elrod

Scoreboard

FRONT ROW—Dana Gnaup, Beth Ryan, Tessie Oliver, Gina Guinchigliani, Mary Jo Kopatch, Pam Anderson. BACK ROW—Teresa Harrison, Beth Bayens, Kerrie Howard, Kris Beebe, Ricky Richmond, Kathy Moran, Maurea Lyons.

Volleyball

Won 30

Lost 17

Opp.	WKU
Mo. St. Louis Invit.	Fourth of 7
Kentucky Wesleyan	0 2
Thomas Moore	0 2
Topper Smash	Second of 8
UT-Martin	1 1
Lambuth Invit.	Second of 7
UT-Martin	3 1
Kentucky State	0 2
Thomas Moore Tourney	Fourth of 6
Asbury College	0 2
Kentucky State	0 2
Fisk	0 2
Austin Peay	2 0
Indiana St. Evansville	0 2
Topper Tournament	Third of 9
Trevecca	0 2
Fisk	0 2
Murray	2 3
Austin Peay	2 3
Vanderbilt	0 2
Fisk	1 3
Sun Belt Tournament	Fifth of 7

—Chris Sharp

DURING the Sun Belt Conference volleyball tournament, assistant coach Nancy Clark and coach Charlie Daniel cheer the team on. In only their third year, the Lady Toppers had a 30-win season.

—T. J. Hamilton

—Mike Collins

AFTER DEFEATING the Lady Jaguars of South Alabama, the women's volleyball team celebrates a win in the Sun Belt Conference tournament. Western defeated South Alabama 2-0.

TEAM MEMBER Kathy Moran, a Louisville freshman, attempts to block a slam play by Jacksonville Dolphin team member Patty Palmeyer. The Dolphins won 15-3, 15-8, and went on to win the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

BEFORE the last home swim meet of the season, diver Paul Vought, a New Concord freshman, talks to some fans. Western beat Eastern Illinois 69-44.

—Kevin Egan

—Rick Muscatello

AFTER a work-out in Diddle Pool, swimming coach Bill Powell checks his pulse. Powell worked out every day and swam 2,000 to 3,000 yards.

AT THE last home swim meet, Rich Lowe, a sophomore from Valparaiso, Ind., yells to a teammate. For the sixth consecutive year Western won the Mid-West Intercollegiate Championship.

Southern dynasty

If there is one team at Western that typifies a winning attitude, it's the swim team.

The Hilltoppers entered the season from a different perspective than usual — they were not the favorite to win the Mid-West Intercollegiate Championships. However, Bill Powell's team proved the doubters wrong and went on to capture their sixth consecutive Mid-West crown and a 5-2 record.

And there was more than just team glory for Western as Steve Crocker, a Franklin junior, received the chance to qualify for the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. Crocker swam the 100 butterfly in 49:16, which qualified him for the Olympic trials which were held in Indianapolis.

Crocker, who was chosen the team's most valuable swimmer, scored 88 points at the Mid-West Championships and set three school records.

But Crocker was not the only vital cog in the Topper swimming machine.

Jay McAtee, an Indianapolis sophomore, accounted for 76 points at the Mid-West, and was voted co-most improved swimmer.

Louisville sophomore Mike Neal was third in the point total with 65, and freshman Dan Powell, the coach's son, was fourth with 52. Powell also received the most improved swimmer award.

"Things look really bright for us next year — we're only losing three guys and that amounts to only 57 of our 564 points at Midwest," Powell said.

The three seniors were Bobby Couch from Indianapolis, who received the Rosencrans award for dedication, Cliff Hardin from McMurray, Pa., and Art Manwell from Bay City, Mich.

Western opened their season on an unfamiliar note, coming up on the losing end of a 56-48 score against Vanderbilt.

The Hilltoppers then posted four consecutive victories over Evansville, Wright State, Louisville and Eastern Kentucky.

"After Bradley beat us so badly, our guys woke up and said, 'We gotta get going,'" Powell said. "I guess you could call that an added incentive to get revenge on them at the championships."

But Western took its revenge out sooner on the field of the Atlanta Invitational, scoring 801 points. Georgia Southern was a distant second with 294, followed by a win over Eastern Illinois.

Western took care of Eastern Illinois in the final dual meet of the season, and roared into the Midwests full steam ahead.

The Midwest Intercollegiate Championships are — and have been for the last six years — the focus of Western's season, and things were no different this year.

In the 200 individual medley, it was Neal who claimed Western's top finish — a third-place effort in 1:56.09. Couch came in eighth with 1:58.16.

Western swept the top three places in the 50-yard freestyle, with Crocker winning in 20.48 (a Mid-West, pool, and school record), Powell taking second in 21.00, and McAtee third in 21:10.

Greg Weigand, a Franklin, Ind., junior, placed fifth in the one-meter diving, and seventh in the three-meter competition. Kevin Keith, a Greentown, Ind., freshman, was 13th and 17th, in those events respectively.

The team of Neal, McAtee, Crocker, and Tyler Nelson, a Lafayette, Ind., junior, won the 800 freestyle relay in 6:52.04, which was a Mid-West, pool and school record also.

Crocker also claimed the 100 butterfly in 49.16, which shattered all the records and qualified him for the Olympic trials, and the 100 freestyle which also rewrote the record books at 45.06. McAtee was second in 45.99, and Powell was third in 46.21.

Couch was third in the 100 backstroke, Neal set a school record placing second in the 400 individual medley at 4:09.66, and Bob Jones, a Marietta, Ga., freshman, took third in the 200 backstroke with a time of 1:58.00.

The team of Neal, Powell, McAtee and Crocker claimed the 400 freestyle relay in the record-breaking time of 3:03.61.

"We've really established something here," Powell said of Western's domination. "As far as we're concerned, it's a successful season if we win the Midwest." Brent Woods

Scoreboard

Front row: Greg Weigand, Kevin Keith, Paul Vought, Jim Rogers, Todd Cheever, Art Manwell, Rich Lowe, Scott Vick, Dan Powell. Second row: Mike Neal, Cliff Hardin, Bob Jones, Ricky Peck, David Frederick, John Peck, Matt Lechner, Phil Kungler, Jerry Smith, Tyler Nelson. Back row: Ted Burton, Bob Couch, Chris Bingham, Jay McAtee, Matt Rydson, Tim Chapman, Bob Grigory, Mike Sims, Steve Crocker, David Bader, Jack Hodges, Jim Fudiner, Bill Powell.

Swimming

Won 5 Lost 2

	Opp.	WKU
Vanderbilt	56	48
Evansville	48	67
Wright State	50	58
Louisville	41	67
Eastern Kentucky	46	67
Bradley	66	47
Atlanta Invitational	First of 8
Eastern Illinois	44	69
Midwest Intercollegiate Championships	First of 9

NO SMOKING
ON TRACK OR FIELD

— T. J. Hamilton

FROM BEHIND, Philip Ryan, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, sophomore, tries to get around the pack. Ryan fell during the first leg and did not finish the event.

SQUATTING beside the track, coach Curtis Long checks runners' times during a meet at Austin Peay. Cam Hubbard placed first in the 5,000-meter race.

— Ron Bel

Finding their pace

The track season began with high aspirations. Things quickly changed, however, as Western encountered a midseason slump. It ended, though, on a high note with a record-setting performance by the men's distance medley team of Lance Darland, a Harrodsburg sophomore; Ronnie Chestnut, a Lexington freshman; Philip Ryan, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, freshman and Ashley Johnson, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, senior, at the Kentucky Relays on a dreary day in Lexington.

Johnson qualified for the National Collegiate Athletic Association track tournament with a second-place finish in the 5,000 meters. He lost to the two-time world champ Mark Scut-ton. Johnson said that it was one of the most exciting races of his life.

"I was really proud of my performance in the 5,000. It was a really good race. He just beat me in the last 50 yards," Johnson said.

For Ryan, however, the day brought a different tale. Saddened by a fall, which he felt had cost his team the victory, Ryan had something to prove.

The next week at the Kentucky Relays he did.

Running the third leg of the medley, Ryan brought his team from sixth place to second. This put Johnson in position to win, and he came through with flying colors. He ran another sensational anchor in 4:02, which enabled Western to set the meet record in 9:46.1, breaking the old mark of 9:46.5.

Ryan, however, did not stop there. He also ran under the meet record when he placed fourth in the 1,500 at 3:48.27. He had indeed redeemed himself, and no one was happier than Coach Curtiss Long.

"Philip had a super meet. We were glad to see that," Long said.

MEMBERS of the team run one of a series of three-minute drills. They had to run as fast as they could, and be timed for each.

That meet turned out to be Western's best of the season. The team had six runners turn in personal bests in the 1,500. Jon Barker, a Republic of South Africa sophomore, and Larry Park, a Richmond, Ind., senior, finished at 3:54.12. Pat Alexander, a Leitchfield sophomore, ran 3:56.7 and Cam Hubbard, a Winchester sophomore, finished at 3:54.14.

The meet also marked the return of Simon Cahill, a Leeds, England, junior, who won the open 5,000. He had been plagued by injuries all season.

The season had begun with high hopes for Johnson since he was a

Danny Anderson, a Clairton, Pa., junior, and Hubbard in the 5,000. Both tied their personal bests.

Western next traveled to the Austin Peay Relays. Hubbard led the way in winning the 5,000. This also marked shot putter Perry Thomas' steady improvement. Long said he felt that good things were in store for the Lexington sophomore.

Western next traveled to Middle Tennessee where their lack of sprinters showed. They lost their only dual meet of the season, 69-43. Though this loss was disappointing, Long brushed it aside as only preparation for the Dogwood Relays.

As for the women, their season began just a bit differently.

Their first meet was in Gainesville for the Lady Gator Relays. Camille Forrester, a Louisville junior, led the way for the Lady Toppers, running the 1,500 meter. Mendy Dunn, a Louisville freshman, was also a bright spot for Western.

The Lady Toppers then traveled to Austin Peay with the men. This turned out to be a disappointment for the women's team, as they finished fourth of four teams.

Long, though, was more impressed with the team's progress.

"We're really competitive. It showed that we are making some good progress in our conditioning program."

After a two-week break, one to sponsor the Great Greek Mile at Western, the women traveled with the men to the Kentucky Relays. The two-week rest did them well. Several runners performed their personal best. Trisha Nichols, an Evanston, Ind., freshman, set a school triple-jump record of 32 feet, 6 inches.

"I was very pleased with their performances. I think Trisha gave us an outstanding effort," Long said. "I think that the number of personal bests set is indicative of our overall team progress."

Julius Key

— T. J. Hamilton

ASSISTANT COACH Chuck Durrant sails over the high jump in the Knoxville Dogwood Relays. The relays were held on April 14.

senior. He felt that he had a lot to prove. He had already set a world record in the Los Angeles Times Invitational and qualified for the N.C.A.A.'s indoor championships.

He had also established himself as one of the true world-class runners in the nation.

Western began their season at the highly competitive Dogwood Relays. There were some good performances, which left Long optimistic about Western's upcoming year. The distance medley squad and the two-mile relay team led the way with fourth-place finishes. There were also good performances from high jumper

MAKING TRACKS

Ashley Johnson is leaving them all behind

He was good enough to be in the Olympic trials during the summer. But he wasn't.

His country is banned from them because of political reasons and he couldn't run for the United States because he's not a citizen.

"It wasn't really that big of a deal to me though," Ashley Johnson, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, senior, said. "South Africa has been banned from the Olympics since 1960. I was born in 1961, so it's never been a boyhood dream to me like it is to boys here. Sure, I would like to have been in them, but there was nothing I could do so I don't worry about it."

"I am starting to get into the Olympic spirit here though, and by 1988, the year of the next Olympic games, I may be an American citizen and eligible to run in them. Right now I'm more interested in making a living at running and having fun doing it," he said.

Johnson, a broadcasting major, said it's hard to get American citizenship. "You have to have a good reason before you are qualified, like being married to an American citizen or having a full-time job here."

"I haven't applied and don't know if I'm going to for awhile. I want to wait and see what happens in the next few years."

Johnson, an All-American in cross country and indoor track, was on Western's track team four years.

He held the school record in the mile at 4:02.21, the 14th best in the nation. He also placed 13th in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship cross country meet. The top 25 qualified for All-America honors. He was the Sun Belt Conference champion last year, and runner-up the year before.

He also won the Indiana, Kiwanis and Alabama Invitationals, breaking the previous records at the Indiana and Kiwanis.

Johnson, who has been running since he was 10, attended an all-boys school in South Africa.

"Schools at home seem to encourage athletics more than academics," Johnson said. "I got into running because I wasn't good at anything else. I was always a little better at it than everyone else, and it's how I got attention."

Johnson said when he got the opportunity to be a collegiate runner in the United States he took advantage of it.

"Running is a big sport at home, as big as basketball is in Kentucky. But when you get out of high school there's no place for it unless you join one of the running clubs."

Johnson had a lot of help getting his scholarship here. "I was lucky to get to come. A world-class runner from South Africa had run on the Oklahoma State University team. He knew my record and asked if I'd be interested in attending college here."

"I said sure. He contacted some schools for me and then recommended Western."

Johnson said it's easier for athletes who have been in the states to help the athletes in South Africa because they have made contacts here. "If I would go back I would do the same thing for a young guy."

If Johnson had not come here, he said he would have gone into the military for two years. In South Africa it is mandatory for every man to serve for two years. Whenever Johnson returns, he too will have to serve the time.

Johnson said if he had not gotten the scholarship from Western, he probably would not have attended one of the five universities in South Africa. He said a person can still get a good job without going to college in his home country.

He's been home only once since the fall of 1980. That trip, which was for only 45 days, cost $1400. He talks to his family once every three months, but they write each other frequently.

"I know people probably look at me and say, 'Oh, he's got it made. Everything's handed to him on a silver platter.' They say it because of the benefits I have with a full scholarship."

"I do pay for it though, only in a totally different way. I pay by being away from home, family and friends," Johnson said.

"One of my sisters got married last semester and I had to miss it," Johnson, the oldest of four children, said. "I hated that. I called her and talked a few minutes and just those few minutes cost $40."

He said he didn't miss home for a while when he first got here because "everything was so exciting and new, and I was so caught up in it."

"It's been tough at times, but I've gotten pretty well used to it now," he said.

Johnson said he's not sure what he'll be doing in the next few years. He wants to be an international runner and race in all the national road races and then become a world class runner.

Some major sports-related companies, such as Nike and Tiger, are trying to negotiate contracts with Johnson so he'll run for and represent their company. He said nothing can be finalized until he has finished his collegiate running.

There are many advantages to being a great runner. Johnson has been able to travel from coast to coast; he's been on the front page of the sports section of several major newspapers, and he's been on television numerous times.

"I've been pretty lucky I guess. Things are definitely going my way," Johnson said.

Tonya Berkley T

AT THE Knoxville Dogwood Relays, Ashley Johnson finishes the last leg of the distance medley. Johnson scored a personal record in the meet.

— T. J. Hamilton

Setting the pace

Coach Curtiss Long is no stranger to winning ways. And neither is his 1983 men's cross country team, which captured its second consecutive Sun Belt title and finished with a 42-8 mark.

Long was named SBC Coach of the Year for the second time in as many seasons.

"I'd say the conference meet was the highlight of our season — especially from the team standpoint," Long said. "It was a superlative team effort. Each runner had a role to play and they all succeeded in their roles."

Put simply, the meet was "all Western," with the Hilltoppers taking the crown by a 33-point margin.

Six of Western's seven runners finished in the top 10, which earned them all-conference honors.

Ashley Johnson, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, senior, claimed the individual title, dethroning last year's champion and teammate Simon Cahill in a course record time of 23:46.

Cahill, a Leeds, England, senior, was hampered all season long by bursitis and a nagging foot injury, but managed to finish fourth.

"It's very pleasing to repeat as conference champions," Cahill said. "Obviously, I'm upset that I didn't win, but all things considered, I'm very pleased for the team and for the coach."

All-conference honors were also accorded to Sean George, a Cape Town, South Africa, freshman; Jon Barker, a Republic of South Africa sophomore; Cam Hubbard, a Winchester sophomore, and Larry Park, a Richmond, Ind., senior.

Jeff Peeples, a Louisville sophomore, finished just out of the money in 11th.

Western collected two other first-place finishes during the regular season at the Kiwanis Invitational in Bowling Green and the Alabama Invitational in Tuscaloosa.

The next challenge for Western was to finish in the top four places in what Long called "the largest, toughest region in the country."

The NCAA District III meet was held in Clemson, S.C., and only the top four teams were eligible for the NCAA Championships.

That's where the Hilltoppers' season ended. Long predicted that "everyone would have to run extremely well" for the Hilltoppers to qualify as a team, and they finished eighth out of the 66 schools competing.

But the season wasn't over for Johnson, who finished fifth in the meet and qualified for the NCAA championships individually.

"The competition was very, very tough," Johnson said. "I ran the best I have all season and there were still four guys better than me."

Johnson needed to finish in the top 25 in the championships to make All-American, and he took 15th to make the honor.

The 1983 women's cross country team didn't have the kind of banner season the men had, but paced by Louisville junior Camille Forrester, they showed steady improvement, finishing 9-11.

—Camille Forrester

WESTERN runners, led by Ashley Johnson, a Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, senior, surpass other runners in a cross country meet. Johnson was named an All-American.

The Sun Belt does not sponsor women's cross country, so the Lady Toppers compete as independents.

"Our program is on the move," Long said. "We're starting to get a base of good solid athletes who can develop into fine runners."

The Lady Toppers peaked at the Vanderbilt Invitational, claiming first place out of the four-team field. Forrester crossed the line first in 17:14, 40 seconds better than her previous best.

"Nobody was really pushing me... I ran by myself almost the whole way," Forrester said. "Everybody ran great."

Kitty Davidson, a Madison, Tenn., freshman, claimed second, 27 seconds behind Forrester, and Mindy Dunn, a Louisville freshman, was sixth.

Donna Greer, a Hendersonville, Tenn., senior; Nell Withers, a Cynthia sophomore; Karen Sammons, an Elizabethtown freshman; Theresa Sparks, a Colonial Heights, Va., senior; and Bethany Stubbs, a Fort Campbell freshman, rounded out the women's squad.

With no conference meet to compete in, the Lady Toppers went to the Southern Independent Cross Country Championships in Atlanta. The Lady Toppers claimed second out of the four-team field, finishing behind Georgia State.

Forrester and Davidson took second and third, respectively.

Brent Woods

—Patty Di Renzo

—Tony Kirves

AFTER finishing second, Camille Forrester, a Louisville junior, gets help walking from the race. The cross country meet was at Indiana State University-Evansville.

MEMBERS of Western's cross country team display their trophy after winning first place in the Sun Belt Tournament. It was the second consecutive title the team had won.

A shot in the dark

Budget cuts could leave Riflery pointed in the wrong direction

For the past five years the riflery team has been one of the nations' best.

The team has shot in the National Collegiate Athletic Association three times in the past five years and has produced three All-Americans. Two members are trying out for the 1984 Olympic team: Chris Lair, a Bowling Green senior, and Dan Pyle, a Youngstown senior.

However, Athletic Director John Oldham has recommended to the Board of Regents that the team be canceled for next season.

"I recommended to do away with the riflery team in order to have more money for the women's volleyball team and soccer team, which are Sun Belt sports," Oldham said.

Mary Crutcher, a Louisville freshman, said, "I was upset because they did not give us (the team) any reason for doing away with the riflery program."

"In the past the ROTC program at Western has sponsored a coach for the team, but they decided that it was taking too much time out of the coach's military responsibilities," Sgt. Clyde Roark, the riflery coach, said.

RIFLERY TEAM member Mary Jane Crutcher, a Louisville freshman, prepares to shoot the gun her parents bought her. Crutcher came to Western as a walk-on and made the team, so her parents gave her new equipment.

the riflery team so her parents went out and bought her $600 worth of equipment, and now if they cut the team she will either have to sell the equipment or transfer to another school," Roark said.

"We did very well this year considering that we were so young," Crutcher said.

The team consisted of three freshmen and two seniors. It has been ranked ninth in the nation for the past two years.

This year's team saw Chris Lair go to the NCAA championship where he placed 36th out of 40.

"Riflery is not a spectator sport so not a lot of people go to see it, and many people do not know much about it," Roark said.

The team shot at the National Rifle Association A-36 targets with .22-caliber rifles. They shot standing, kneeling and prone (lying down).

They shot 40 rounds in each position, and then they totaled up the points to give them a final score.

Pending on a decision by the Board of Regents, the riflery teams' future remains in jeopardy, and they will just have to wait and see about their future.

Mike Elrod

Riflery

FRONT ROW—Dan Pyle, Chris Lair. BACK ROW—Captain David Cannon, John Boyd, Mary Crutcher, Todd Blacketer.

Roark said that it is bad to get rid of one of the university's best teams. He said that doing away with the program would waste a lot of time and money.

"Crutcher came to Western as a walk-on. She did very well and made

—Bobby Roe

B reaking even

There are two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning, a tying run on second and the batter is outfielder Todd Niva.

Niva hits a line shot up the middle. Tim Delph rounds third and heads home for the tying run, but the South Florida centerfielder throws a perfect strike to the plate to give the Bulls the game and end Western's chances for a berth in the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

The Toppers played well but failed for the second consecutive year to make the SBC tournament.

"I am not pleased with the season but I feel this was a learning year and it will make next year a positive year because we will have everybody back next year. We will have experience and it should be a spring board for one of the best ball clubs to play at Western next season," Joel Murrie, head baseball coach, said.

The Toppers ended the season with a 25-26-2 overall record and a 6-10 SBC record, which seemed to be disappointing to some of the players.

"It was disappointing because we were expected to have a good year. We played well in the fall but we had a lot of bad breaks this year," Mike Roy, a Waterloo, Ill., junior, said.

"South Alabama was a very tough team. They beat us six times; we had chances to beat them but they always seemed to come out on top," Roy said.

"Our main problem this year was our inability to play consistent baseball day in and day out in our first 30 games. We were not capable of making the routine plays early," Murrie said.

ICE rests on the knee of Mark Salata, a junior from Streator, Ill., while he sits in the dugout at the baseball field. Salata was hit by a ground ball during practice.

"We just did not get the three phases of baseball (hitting, pitching, fielding) to jell all the time. If we had the pitching we didn't have the hitting," Murrie said.

The Toppers started the 1984 season with three wins over Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis but dropped the next three games to even their record at 3-3.

In the Toppers' first SBC series it looked as if they were going to be among the league's best. They beat South Florida two out of three games. In the first win against USF, pitcher Mike McClear, a Troy, Mich., junior, pitched well to lead the Toppers to an 8-5 win in game two. Keith Reinhardt, a St. Louis freshman, held the Bulls to just one run as the Toppers won again 2-1.

The Toppers were swept in another series by the University of Alabama at Birmingham to drop the SBC record to 2-6.

South Alabama came into town for an important series with the Toppers but the Jaguars proved to be the superior team by defeating Western in all three games to drop the Toppers' SBC record to 2-9 and last place in the conference.

Then came the high point of the season. In a must-win situation, the

continued on page 349

— Bobby Roe

— Alan Warren

— Greg Louett

A TIRE makes a good practice target for Richie Johnson, a Newburgh, Ind., junior. Johnson transferred from Wabash Valley Junior College in Mount Carmel, Ill.

WAITING on the bench; members of the baseball team wait out the Austin Peay game. Western defeated Austin Peay 13-7 at Nick Denes Field.

PITCHER Rich Hargis, a Sparta, Ill., junior, gets Kenny Sexton, a Campbellsville sophomore, to help him stretch out. He was exercising before a game.

WARREN, N.J., freshman, Gary Mueller dives for a baseball during practice. Mueller played shortstop for the team.

— Greg Lovett

Even cont.

Toppers had to sweep a series from UAB in order to remain a contender for a berth in the SBC tournament.

The Toppers played well and won the three games which put the pressure on them in their series with USF.

They lost the first game of a three-game series to the Bulls, dropping them out of the race for the playoff berth.

"We played real well the last two weeks of the season. The team showed a lot of desire and enthusiasm and that is what it takes to win," Murrie said.

IN PREPARATION for the fall season, Brian Blakely, an Albington, Va., junior picks up rocks on Nick Denes baseball field. Blakely plays second base.

Mike Roy was the team leader in batting with a .395 average. John Clem, a Grosse Pointe, Mich., sophomore, was second with a .393 average, and Matt Logic, a Racine, Wisc., sophomore, was also above the .300 mark with a .326 average.

"Mike, John and Matt all played well this season," Murrie said. "Mike hit as many homers as Ralph Antone did last year. John was our surprise player and carried the team in the last part of the year and proved to be a very good clutch hitter. Matt was the most consistent hitter on the team," Murrie said.

Pitcher Eddie Jent, a Morgantown senior, set a school record for most appearances by appearing in 24 during the season. His season record was 4-1.

Murrie said other players who did a good job for the Toppers were pitchers Mike Spearnock, an Edison, N.J., freshman; Rich Hargis, a Sparata, Ill., sophomore; Larry Shikles, a Jefferson City, Mo., junior, and Reinhardt.

"I am not satisfied with the season but I like to put things into perspective and analyze the season as a whole. I like to remember positive things out of the year, and I like to see the players develop their skills," Murrie said.

Even though their schedule will be somewhat harder next season, the Toppers are eyeing what has eluded them in the past — a Sun Belt Conference championship.

Mike Elrod T

Scoreboard

Baseball
Won 23 Lost 29 Tied 2

Opp.	WKU	Score	Opp.	Score
IUPUI	2	5	Louisville	12 2
IUPUI	4	8	Louisville	9 14
IUPUI	4	7	Austin Peay	9 13
IUPUI	5	3	Tennessee State	1 21
Troy State	13	8	South Alabama	9 4
Troy State	10	4	South Alabama	12 11
Washington University	0	3	South Alabama	12 8
Villanova	4	6	Cumberland	2 5
St. Joseph's	4	0	Cumberland	0 1
Rollins	8	8	Tennessee State	0 3
LaSalle	4	16	Alabama-Birmingham	2 5
Central Florida	12	2	Alabama-Birmingham	5 6
South Florida	5	8	Alabama-Birmingham	12 14
South Florida	1	2	Vanderbilt	8 7
South Florida	5	1	Cumberland	5 4
Middle Tennessee	4	1	South Florida	5 4
Bellarmine	7	4	South Florida	3 7
			Eastern Kentucky	4 1
			Eastern Kentucky	7 4
			Samford	5 11

FRONT ROW—Head Coach Joel Murrie, Gary Mueller, Chico LaBute, Todd Nix, Brian Blakely, Ken Sexton, Steve Page, Larry Shikles, Rich Hargis, Graduate Assistant Coach Joe Caro.
BACK ROW—Graduate Assistant Coach Joel Lepel, Matt Logic, Eddie Jent, Mike Spearnock, John Clem, Greg Barick, Bill Vonnahme, Mike Roy, Roger Daniel, Randy Strjek, Graduate Assistant Coach Rick Tippin.

— Alan Warren

SEVERAL members of the water polo club clown around between halves during their away match against Eastern. Western lost the match.

WATER POLO action is shown during the match with Eastern Kentucky University. With a membership of 30, the club was part of the sports clubs program.

— Mike Collins

— T. J. Hamlin

Play for pride

Along with the intramurals program, sports clubs offered students a number of activities in which to participate.

With 11 active clubs, students found sports that ranged from weightlifting to scuba. According to Frank Griffin, director of recreational activities, the program was designed for students who wanted to compete in sports.

"The sports clubs are more specialized," Griffin said. "They are more like a team, one step below varsity sports."

Since students participating in sports clubs usually had a more specialized talent, varsity teams often developed from them. The swimming team started as a sports club and later became a team.

Another difference between intramurals and sports clubs was that the clubs could travel to play other teams. Their traveling expenses were funded by the athletic department.

One of the active clubs open to students was water polo. Bobby Couch, an Indianapolis, Ind., senior, said the club was open to any student who was interested. "Most people found out by word of mouth, or at the meetings at the beginning of the year."

Although the club didn't have any fund raisers, Couch said, "Anytime we needed something we'd just chip in and buy it."

A more aggressive sport that was offered as a club was rugby. All members had to do was "be a body," according to club member Scott Neff. Neff, a Dale, Ind., junior, said, "We'll let anyone play."

DURING the Eastern rugby game, Victor Massey, a part-time student from Bowling Green, runs against an opponent. Western won 39-3.

DURING a rugby game, Larry Pund, a junior from Santa Claus, Ind., fights for possession of the ball. Pund was struggling for the ball against a player from Fort Knox.

With about 27 members the team, played other clubs from universities, such as the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville, and city teams.

For the first time the club had a coach, Maki Tongiea, from New Zealand.

The scuba club was not so much a club as it was an extension of the scuba class. Jack Lile, instructor of the class, was also the adviser for the club.

"We mainly set up trips for former students," Lile said. The club took trips throughout the year, including one to Panama City, Fla., in the spring.

Twenty members made up the women's softball club, which was open to anyone interested in playing. Interested persons found out about the club through advertisements in the Herald, or by word of mouth, according to Dave Parrott, adviser to the club.

"This was a transition year for us," Parrott said. "Other teams were playing fast pitch softball while we were still playing slow pitch." In order to keep up, the team had to make the transition from slow pitch to fast pitch. Instead of the usual 12 to 25 games per season, the club only played six games. The club participated in some scrimmage games, and against some intramural teams.

Another active club was weightlifting. "At our meetings we established what our club was about," Tom Thompson, a Louisville freshman, said. "We also set the standards for the weight room and decided what we were going to do."

Although the club had been in existence for three years, it had been inactive for the past two. Thompson helped to get the club back on its feet.

With only about five active members, the racquetball club had a disappointing year. "We had a lot of things in mind," Todd Anderson, an Owensboro sophomore, said. "We had the backing, just not the people."

The club began to recruit members about two weeks before spring break by placing ads in the Herald, putting up posters and making radio announcements. But only 10 people came to the first meeting.

Even with the low turnout, the club stayed active and met about once a week. "With such a small number we were able to play every week," Anderson said.

Due to the lack of a sponsor, the bowling club only attended three tournaments.

"We didn't have any money this year," Danny Graham, a Campbellsville junior, said. "We were funded out of our own pockets. If you don't go through a sponsor you must pay yourself."

In February the club went to a tournament at the University of Louisville, which they won. "We got a lot of recognition from the tournament, especially through the Courier-Journal," Graham said.

Next year the team hopes to find a sponsor, either on their own or through the sports club association.

The men's volleyball club was without an adviser and was forced to go inactive for the last six weeks of the spring semester. Charlie Daniel was serving as the club's adviser when he resigned during the spring. "We couldn't play because you have to have an adviser," Todd Duncan, an Edmonton junior, said.

With membership at about 15, the club was smaller than it had been in the past. "We were only down by about five or six people," Duncan said. "But when you have such a small club to begin with it makes a difference."

The club practiced in the auxiliary gym and played in some single meets and some tournaments. Most of the teams they played were from other universities or amateur volleyball teams.

Although the sports clubs were smaller than intramurals and varsity sports, the members took their sports just as seriously.

"I think the smaller clubs put just as much effort into their sport, and they get just as much out of it," Graham said.

Melanie Mietz

Staying the course

Golf is a game of experience — consistently. And winning in golf takes consistency and experience.

The men's golf team found that out this year as they played through a season that promised to improve both of those aspects of their game. With only one senior returning, the '84 squad was one of the youngest in the Sun Belt, and their lack of experience hurt them in their overall season.

"It's only natural," explained sixth-year coach Jim Richards. "The only amazing consistency.

The team repeated the pattern of the last few years by starting out hot in the fall and dropping off some in the spring.

"Our spring season wasn't our best," Paul Fritz, a Kitchner, Ontario, freshman, said. "We came into the fall with a summer of practice and nice weather, and then we get hit with the cold. After three months of snow it's impossible to go out and play at the same level."

"The weather does hurt our program," Richards said, "especially with competing against the warm-weather schools in the Sun Belt."

Competing against schools with larger golf programs was also difficult for Richards and the team. After a budget cut left him with only four half scholarships, Richards had a hard time maintaining the level of success the team enjoyed in the past.

Western's team practiced at two of the area country clubs and was aided by Professional Golfers Association's number-one pro, Norman Head.

"We're very fortunate to have Norman," Richards said. "He helps the players with their swings and their long game."

Despite their handicaps, the team managed to forge another successful season, and in doing so picked up some valuable experience.

"We are going to go out and have fun."

No one can accuse women's golf coach Nancy Quarcelino of not being a realist. With six freshmen and only one returning squad member, Quarcelino decided that the team would not be battling for the top spot in the Sun Belt.

CONCENTRATION shows on the face of Scott Beard, a Louisville senior, during practice. He was getting ready for a match with Murray State.

"I just wanted to let the team experience college golf. We are going to go out and try to win every tournament we play in, but the important thing is to just play the game."

"We learned a lot this year," Jane Shumaker, a Fort Wayne, Ind., sophomore, said. "All the girls were reading books and trying to improve their consistency."

Jane Bair, a Fort Wayne, Ind., freshman, spent 20 hours a week in an effort to improve her game.

"I had to get readjusted from high school golf. I lost my confidence playing in the college tournaments; the competition was unreal. I'm not particularly happy about our performance this year, but I know that the team will improve next year."

That optimism was echoed by all the members of the team, as they acknowledge that the year was primarily a rebuilding one.

"There was a great deal of improvement this year," Beth Bachman, an Anderson, Ind., freshman, said. "As the season went along our scores got better, but we were also playing in harder tournaments against harder teams so we didn't always place better."

"The public can't understand how we can play at this low of level," Bair said, "but they don't know what we've been through. They look at the scores but they don't really understand them — we had our problems, but we survived."

John Tayman

— T. J. Hamilton

AT THE Kentucky Intercollegiate at Indian Hills Country Club, John Pierce, a Hasting, Mich., junior, waits his turn with his partner to putt. Western placed second of the four teams that competed.

way that you can improve in the tournaments is by playing in them, and a lot of our players were getting their first opportunity to do so this year."

Senior Scott Beard proved to be Western's ace in the hole as he played out his collegiate career. The Louisville native was the team captain and again led the team with a 74.4 average.

"Scott is one of the best players ever to play for Western," Richards said. "He was a great leader for us this year and continued to play with

— Ray Thomas

Scoreboard

Men's Golf

Fall
Murray State Intercollegiate	Fourth of 10
Buckeye Fall Classic	Ninth of 20
Fall Colonel Classic	Fifth of 8
Kentucky Intercollegiate	Second of 4
Hillman Robbins Memorial Intercollegiate	Third of 18
Spring
Palmetto Classic	Seventeenth of 18
South Carolina Intercollegiate	Seventh of 8
Iron Duke Classic	Seventeenth of 24
Miami Intercollegiate	Third of 12
Furman Intercollegiate	Eleventh of 21
Charlie Costello Memorial	Second of 15

Women's Golf

Fall
Illinois State Invitational	Seventh of 9
Memphis State Lady Tiger Invitational	Eighteenth of 18
Lady Bollermaker Fall Classic	Seventh of 10
Lady Kat Invitational	Fifteenth of 15
Alabama Seascope Invitational	Seventeenth of 18

FRONT ROW—Steve Pittssett, Danny Hoek, Eddie Carmichael, Mike Newton, David Brown, Scott Beard. SECOND ROW—Phil McQuitty, Paul Fritz, Rodger Wallace, John Pierce, Brett Frederick, Jim Richards.

FRONT ROW—Jane Bair, Beth Bachman. SECOND ROW—Coach Nancy Quarcelino, Ann Cain, Jane Shumaker, Sue Randell. BACK ROW—April Leath, Emily Giltner.

Scoreboard

Men's Tennis

	WKU	Opp.
Louisville	5	4
Kentucky at Louisville	0	9
EKU Invitational	sixth of 8
West Virginia	1	8
Central Florida	4	5
South Florida	2	7
Virginia Commonwealth	4	5
Flagler	2	7
Jacksonville	0	9
Tennessee State	9	0
Tevecca College	6	3
Memphis State	0	9
UT-Martin	4	5
Kentucky Intercollegiate	fifth of 9
Austin Peay	5	4
Wildcat Invitational Ohio	5	4
Kentucky	2	7
Hampton Institute	0	9
Louisville	2	7
Trevecca College	7	2
Sun Belt Conference Championships	seventh of 8

Women's Tennis

	WKU	Opp.
Vanderbilt	0	9
Memphis State	4	5
Eastern Kentucky	5	4
St. Leo College	7	2
Central Florida	9	0
St. Petersburg Jr. College	9	0
Hillsboro Jr. College	9	0
George Wallace College	9	0
Middle Tennessee State	2	5
UT-Martin Invitational	second of 10
Murray State	7	2
Memphis State	2	7
Arkansas-Little Rock	3	6
Alabama-Birmingham	2	5
Trevecca College	9	0
Austin Peay	7	2
Paducah Community College	9	0
Evansville	8	1
UT-Martin	6	3
Sun Belt Conference Tournament	sixth of 7

FRONT ROW—Billy Jeff Burton, Mark Turner, Matt Peterson, Joanthon Yeagle, Brad Hanks, Scott Underwood, Hector Huertas, Juan Puentes. BACK ROW—Coach Jeff True.

FRONT ROW—Coach Yvonne Turner, Teresa Lisch, Denise Schmidt, Kim Hewlett, Muge Ozgenel. BACK ROW—Gayle Sutton, Lee Anne Murray, Amy Wheller, Yesim Oguz.

Homecourt disadvantage

The women's tennis team was young, but their record didn't show signs of amateurs. The Lady Toppers played five freshmen and two sophomores en route to a banner 12-6 season.

After losing their first two matches of the season to Vanderbilt and Memphis State in the Vandy Triangular, the Lady Toppers bounced back to win their next six matches. Five of those wins came during a spring break trip to the South, although three of the wins were results of forfeits.

Nonetheless, the Lady Toppers gained enough practice to finish second out of 10 teams in the University of Tennessee-Martin Invitational Tournament.

"I would say that was the high point of the season," Kim Hewlett said. "All of us felt we contributed to the win in some way."

Hewlett, a Waverly, Ohio, freshman, playing number-one and two singles most of the season, finished second in singles wins with an 11-4 mark.

Bowling Green freshman Lee Ann Murray led the team with a 13-2 record, while combining with Hewlett for a 9-2 doubles record.

The Lady Toppers finished strong down the stretch, winning their last five matches of the season before heading into the first-ever Lady Sun Belt Tournament in Norfolk, Va.

The tourney was dominated by South Florida, which came in first in every position except number six singles. Western finished sixth of seven teams.

WHILE Keith Henton, a Newburgh, Ind., junior, serves the ball, his partner, Matt Peterson, a Battle Creek, Mich., sophomore, crouches low to await the return. They were practicing on a Monday afternoon during the spring semester.

AT AN AFTERNOON PRACTICE, Mark Turner, a Bowling Green freshman, makes a return volley. Turner was a walk on member of the men's tennis team.

"They were simply better," Hewlett said. "We did well for playing as many freshmen as we did. I think we will do much better in next year's tournament."

First-year coach Yvonne Turner was also optimistic.

"We had a very successful season for being so young," Turner said. "We gained valuable experience this year, and I am looking forward to coaching these outstanding student athletes next year."

The men's tennis season was on a down note before it began.

Although Franklin freshman Matt Fones would be seeing his first collegiate action (he had knee surgery a month before the '83 season started), Lebanon sophomore Brad Hanks would miss the entire season due to illness. Hanks may have been the top returner on the team, but Fones was initiated into college tennis the hard way — by filling the No. 1 singles spot. It showed, as he could only manage a 4-17 mark.

"I never realized how hard it is to come back after a year," Fones said. "I lost a lot of close matches, but playing against the top players gave me good experience."

Coach Jeff True was a little hesitant about playing Fones first, but said, "He adjusted well to losing after winning in high school, and this is really going to help him become a better player in the end."

Nevertheless, the youthful team — one senior, one junior, one sophomore and five freshmen — beat Louisville on the road 5-4 in their first match of the season.

But then the Toppers went on a seven-match losing streak, going 0-5 in their spring break matches in Florida, along with a sixth-place finish out of eight teams in the Eastern Kentucky invitational.

There was one bright spot during spring break week, as the number-one doubles team of Fones and Billy Jeff Burton defeated the pre-season Sun Belt favorite number-one doubles team from South Florida.

Western returned home from their southern swing to take their frustrations out on Tennessee State, trouncing the Tigers 9-0.

With a little confidence behind them and added experience from the five spring break matches, the Toppers went 4-5 down the stretch, including a fifth-place finish out of nine teams in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Championships.

The Toppers took their 6-12 overall record into Norfolk, Va. for the Sun Belt Tournament.

"Our whole season was geared for this," True said. "You could say all of our regular season matches were just for practice."

Two of the Toppers saved the best for last, as Underwood and Matt Peterson, a Battle Creek, Mich., sophomore, claimed the number-three doubles title. The win automatically earned them a spot on the Sun Belt All-Conference team.

Although Western as a team tied for last place in the tournament, True said he was pleased with the effort. "We are all pleased with Scott and Matt's win, but most of our other players played their more experienced tourney opponents to three sets."

"We had a young team, and it was important to close out the season on a positive note," True added.

Underwood led the team with a 13-9 record in singles play, and combined with Peterson for a 9-11 doubles play.

"Overall, I'm pleased, and this season was a great experience for us," True added. "Hopefully, with a couple of recruits next year, we will finish the Sun Belt Tourney in the top four instead of the bottom four."

Steve Koontz

Something for everyone

Ranging from flag football to the turkey trot, with 20 other activities to choose from, the intramurals program gave about 6,000 students a chance to escape from the drudgery of study and enjoy physical recreation, according to intramurals director Frank Griffin.

There was an increase in intramurals participation this year, Griffin said, "because people are realizing the importance of fitness all over the country. And students have more time than in the past."

However, assistant intramurals director Debby Cherwak said that participation in the competitive sports was about the same as last year.

"The intramurals program should be growing more with the country's attitude toward fitness," she said.

Intramurals are not for the professional athlete, but for the students who could not make the varsity teams, although some university team members do play in the program as well, Griffin said.

"A student is not a well-rounded person if he is just academic. I'm not saying just recreation, but he needs the whole process," Griffin said.

Intramurals is divided into three categories: men's, women's and co-recreational.

The co-rec teams receive no awards and no records are kept, according to Cherwak, who is also the head of the women's programs and sports clubs.

"The co-rec program strongly stresses socialization and having a good time while playing sports," Cherwak said. That is the reason for no awards.

Wallyball, which is volleyball played on a racquetball court, is becoming the most popular co-rec sport, Cherwak said.

Flag football and basketball had the most participation, as usual, Griffin said. One thousand basketball players turned out for the intramurals.

Many of the women's activities were rained out and, due to lack of facilities, could not be rescheduled, Cherwak said. Therefore, all teams participated in a single elimination tournament.

continued on page 358

CHI OMEGA member Stacy Westray, a La Grange sophomore, goes for the birdie during a badminton game. She was playing in an intramural game in Diddle Arena.

AT AN intramural swim meet, Kevin Keith, a freshman from Greentown, Ind., signals a diver's score to the scorekeeper. Keith was a diver for Western's swimming team.

— T. J. Hamilton

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

— Ray Thomas

AFTER WINNING the flag football championships, North Hall Star team member Tim Shuffett, a Greensburg junior, shows that his team is number one. The stars beat Lambda Chi Alpha.

A GRIMACE is on the face of Alpha Delta Pi member Cathy Brown, a Louisville freshman, as she tosses the football for the intramural football throw. The unseasonably warm April weather made near-perfect conditions for the track and field championships.

Scoreboard

WOMEN'S INTRAMURALS

Sport	Winner
Archery	Marian Looney
Badminton — singles	Karen Francis
Badminton — doubles	Cathy Brown Gwen Dunbar
Basketball	Bates-Runner Hall
Billiards	Jody Blake
Bowling	Alpha Xi Delta
Flag football	West Hall
Free throw	Jackie Vier
Frisbee	Anne Worthman
Golf	Emily Brown
Racquetball — singles	Cyndi Sullivan
Racquetball — doubles	Cyndi Sullivan Melissa Scott
Softball	West Hall
Swimming	Alpha Omicron Pi
Table tennis — singles	Amy Iracane
Table tennis — doubles	Amy Iracane Gwen Dunbar
Tennis — singles	Amy Iracane
Tennis — doubles	Beth Beanblossom Margie Babcock
Track	Alpha Omicron Pi
Turkey Trot	Jo Syers
Volleyball	Wrenches

MEN'S INTRAMURALS

Archery	Shell West
Badminton — singles	Lambda Chi
	Alpha
Badminton — doubles	B.D.I.
Basketball	Peoples Choice
Billiards	North Stars
Bowling	Lambda Chi Alpha
Flag football	North Stars
Free throw	North Stars
Frisbee	Sigma Phi Epsilon
Golf	Lambda Chi Alpha
Handball — singles	George
Handball — doubles	Pennington George
Horseshoes — singles	AGRs
Horseshoes — doubles	AGRs
Racquetball — singles	Terry Stahl
Racquetball — doubles	Terry Stahl
Softball	George Pennington
Swimming	Cold Beer
Table tennis — singles	North Stars
Table tennis — doubles	Nobu Kayama
Tennis	Sigma Alpha Epsilon
Track and field	Kappa Sigma
Turkey trot	Lambda Chi Alpha
Volleyball	North Stars
Wrestling	North Stars

CO-RECREATION CHAMPIONS

Basketball	Bates Runner Hall
Volleyball	Eulabears
Wallyball	S.P.S.
Water polo	B.D.I.

Everyone cont.

Some of the players were disappointed with this because many teams only played one game for the whole season, she said.

"I love intramurals. It gives people a chance to get away from homework and be competitive at the same time," according to Bryan Smith who ran the 440 relay and the 440 dash for Lambda Chi Alpha during the intramural track meet.

Smith, a Simpsonville junior, said the fraternity had a chance to win the men's All-Sports Trophy if they placed at the meet.

Darragh Moffat, a Hendersonville, Tenn., junior, competed in the 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash and the 440 relay during the track meet for her sorority, Alpha Omicron Pi. She said the meet was her first intramurals event in which she had ever participated.

Moffat said she got involved in intramurals "to be involved in campus activities. I do it for fun. I don't know if anyone else is out for blood."

Lelia Keith, a Nashville, Tenn. junior, also participated in the track meet for AOPis. "Intramurals are a great opportunity for people who don't play varsity sports."

Keith ran the mile relay, the mile and the half mile.

Last year the intramurals program came under fire for receiving contributions from beer companies.

Now there is a policy which says: "No beer advertisements coming from the Intramurals Office, newspaper, campus paper, etc. No beer blasts . . . No one from the intramural office will attend any meeting where beer is served if it concerns the policies of the Intramural Department."

Another guideline, Griffin said, is that an intramural player under 21 years of age cannot wear a beer logo during a game.

"We divorced ourselves completely from any parties the beer companies might sponsor," Griffin said.

The beer companies still contribute to intramurals, but "we don't encourage beer drinking just because we take their money," Griffin said.

Even though that issue is settled, the intramural department has one more problem — lack of publicity, according to both Griffin and Cherwak.

Griffin said, "We started the program when people didn't understand the importance of recreation. And since then it has been an uphill fight, let me tell you."

Kim Swift

SPLIT DECISION team members Cyndi Fuller, a Central City senior; Theresa Bickett, a Louisville senior, and Tami Moore, an Eaton, Ohio, senior, scout future opponents. They were playing intramural flag football.

AT Smith Stadium, the Women's 100-meter intramural finals begin. Chi-O member Annette Capps, an Owensboro sophomore, won the event.

— Bobby Roe

— Bobby Roe

A sport in itself

It took more than gymnastic skills and spirit to make Western's cheerleading squad. Along with enthusiasm, spirit and stunts, members had to present a good image of themselves and of Western.

"The difference in being a cheerleader in college and one when you are younger, is there is a lot of public relations work as a college cheerleader," Jenny Johnson, captain for the 1983-84 squad, said.

"There are skills needed, but it takes more than those skills. During our tryouts, there is also an interview," Johnson, a Bowling Green senior, said. The interview counted as a major portion of the tryouts.

The 14-member squad began the season in the summer with two weeks of camp at Virginia Tech, where the squad practiced cheers, mounts and gymnastics.

During football season, the squad practiced twice a week to prepare for the Saturday afternoon games.

"The support this year was much better than previous years because of the students getting in free. The Sun Belt Conference has helped a lot by getting better teams to play.

"We have some outstanding fans. Our fans are more supportive of our team than any other school in the Sun Belt Conference," Johnson said.

"We tried to start new traditions this year," Johnson said. "We had new yells and stunts that we did for the crowd."

One of the hardest things about being a cheerleader is learning how to budget time.

"It is hard to budget your time that you put into cheerleading, school work, and time allotted for yourself," Karen Sheryak, a Valley Station senior, said. "It's hard to divide your time between cheering and studying."

The benefits from being a member of the squad outnumbered the sacrifices that the cheerleaders had to make.

"It is satisfying to be a part of the school and to feel like you are making a contribution to the team and to Western," Sheryak said. "Cheerleading is like a sport and like any athlete you have to work hard to reach the goals you set for yourself."

Along with keeping in shape and the physical activity of being a cheerleader, there is the opportunity to meet many people.

"My best friends are cheerleaders," Sheryak said.

While the women's basketball team was playing hard on the court, a different squad of cheerleaders was working hard to generate school spirit for that team.

"We try to get the crowds and the girls (women's basketball team) fired up," Murphy Brock, a Louisville freshman, said. "We try to get everyone involved in the game."

The eight-member squad practiced every other day for several hours to prepare for the basketball games.

"We would make and put up signs in the women's locker room to generate spirit for the team," Brock said.

Co-captains Dianna Dennis, a Big Clifty junior, and Bobby Lancaster, a Hopkinsville junior, led the squad with their past experience as cheerleaders.

"The student support was excellent and it has grown a lot from previous years," Brock said.

"We started out a little bit rusty at first, but everything came together in the end. It is hard to tell how well you are performing while you are down on the court cheering, but I think our overall performance was very good," Brock said.

Gary Briggs

DURING halftime of the Old Dominion game, two cheerleaders help Big Red dunk the basketball. The Lady Toppers won 84-80.

CHEERLEADER Jenny Johnson, a Bowling Green senior, leads the female members of the squad in a pre-season practice. Johnson was the captain of the varsity cheerleaders.

Cheerleaders

FRONT ROW—Karen Sheryak, Lory Palmer, Jenny Johnson, Pats Williams, Becky Bergman, Tracy Murarty, Dawn Dur
BACK ROW—Donnie Turner, Yurt Revich, Perry Hines, Greg Jacobs, Kevin Lowdermilk, Tim Thornton, Steve Smith.

FRONT ROW—David Whitesides, Tarré Roberts, Murphy Brock, Sherry Smith, Craig Sepko, Tammy Hoskins, Bobby Lancaster, Dianna Dennis.

THE TRANSITION from Vanderbilt assistant football coach to WKU head football coach was a busy one, but Dave Roberts found time for WBKO interviews. Roberts was named to the position after the resignation of Jimmy Feix.

NEW HEAD football coach Roberts watches TV reporters unload their equipment. They were on campus to interview him.

— Bobby Roe

Roberts' rules of order

A new era has begun. New Hilltopper head football coach Dave Roberts brought in many new ideas to improve the Hilltopper football program. Roberts and his five assistants lived in a dorm until they got houses or apartments in Bowling Green.

The five other coaches who lived in the dorm for the semester were Don Powers, defensive coordinator; Steve Shankweiler, offensive line; David Culley, receiver; Tim Moore, defensive line; and Steve Brooks, defensive ends.

Living in the dorm was the cheapest way that Roberts and his coaches could live until they found a place to stay.

"It is better for the coaching staff and players for us to live in the dorm because we will be able to get to know the players better and the players will be able to get to know us better," Roberts said.

"Even when I'm not living in the dorm I will still be around the dorm so the players will have to get used to seeing me around," he said.

"The players are trying to adjust to something new; they do not know how to act around Coach Roberts," Dave Parrot, Keen Hall director, said.

"The players know that Roberts has different expectations than Feix did, so the players know they will have to make the necessary changes," he said.

Roberts has only two expectations of his players. He does not want his players involved in drugs and he wants the players to show class on and off the field.

"If any of our players have a problem with drugs they will be gone," Roberts said. "I think that in order to be classy on the field, you have to show class off the field."

"If there were any problems to begin with, the fact that the coaches are living in the dorm will eliminate some potential problems," Parrot said.

Some players felt that having the coach live in the dorm was an advancement in the football program. "It seems that the coaches are getting to know the players better by living in the dorm," placekicker Kevin Bryars, a Fairdealing freshman, said.

Sophomore offensive lineman Barry Anderson from Nashville, Tenn., said, "It helps that the coaches are living in the dorm and I would not mind them living here all the time. The coaches make us realize that there is a time to play and a time to be serious."

Coach Roberts said that the dorm should be something the players should be proud of. He said that his 10-year-old son David Durham looks up to the football players and the players must keep the dorm in good shape because he does not want to be embarrassed in front of his son.

Coaches living in the dorm helped to land 25 recruits. "The players and our coaches did a tremendous job in getting the kids to come to Western," Roberts said.

"The coaches were able to be closer to the recruits and talk to them more and that helped the recruiting tremendously," Roberts said.

Mike Elrod T

STANDING outside the Smith Stadium dressing rooms, Roberts talks to football recruits and their parents. He held his first recruitment weekend in early February.

— Greg Lovett

— Bobby Roe

Sharing the road on a 10-speed

He's all alone. His tall thin body is hunched over as he glides his machine by houses, trees, and fields at 20 miles per hour.

His speed slows as he puts more energy into climbing the long, steep hill. At the top, he loosens his tight grip on the skinny bars and eases up to catch his breath.

He pumps the pedals hard to get back to cruising speed as half a dozen dogs come stampeding from behind a barn.

This is how Gus Moore spent many of his mornings. He was riding through the countryside, watching the sun rise while most students were still cuddled under their covers.

Moore, a Murray freshman, rode his 10-speed each morning on one of five routes that ranged from 10 to 18 miles.

"Each route is different," Moore said. "I choose one, depending on what I feel like that morning."

"If I feel like a good workout, I ride the route with the hills. If I feel like riding from the dogs, I ride the route where the dogs are."

DURING a bike race, a pack of bikers head for the finish line. Gus Moore placed first in the race at Beech Bend Park.

Like most bikers, Moore is a nature lover.

"Sometimes I just stop and listen. I forget about everything else and feel a part of what's around me. It's a great feeling."

Jerry Gensheimer, who rides an average of 20 miles a day, said, "I can get out and at the same time get exercise."

"I can cruise down the road and glide, and there's no pain like in other sports, such as running."

Gensheimer likes to take weekend trips where he rides 100 miles a day. When he goes on these two-to-three-day trips, he has to take along camping equipment — a tent, a stove, cooking utensils, a sleeping bag and a compass. This makes the bike 60 to 70 pounds heavier, but he gets used to it, he said.

Bikes come in different weights. The lighter the bike the better quality. The best ones generally weigh between 15 and 22 pounds, according to Tim Mason.

"Biking as a sport can be fairly expensive," Mason, a sales employee at NAT's Outdoor Sports, said.

"You can buy everything from bike equipment to bike clothing to bike luggage," he said.

Ten-speed bikes can be bought for anywhere from $120 to $5,000.

"Biking has become more popular in the past few years. It is absolutely a sport, and that will be proven in the Olympics this year.

"I think it has grown so much recently because the people riding today are from the baby boom era," Mason said. "All of these people are getting money, and they're spending it on nice things. People are also into being fit, and riding is a good way to get in shape."

Mason added that if it weren't fun, people wouldn't do it.

Michelle Shaw, a Houston, Texas, senior, said she likes biking because "It's good exercise, and it's not boring."

Shaw rides two or three hours a few times a week with friends. "We don't really clock how far we go. We just get out and go."

"Sometimes we stop in little parks and play around."

Shaw said she hasn't spent a lot of money on the sport.

"It's a great release. I can get away from all of this," Shaw said as she looked around her room and at her homework.

"I don't see how people can come back and sit in a room when it's nice out. I like to go out and do something and riding's a good thing to do."

Moore said he rides mostly for the fun of it. He said it's hard to find races to be in, but he enters any he can.

continued on page 367

BY putting the bike in between himself and the dog, Moore, a Murray freshman, protects himself from the attacker. Moore often had problems with dogs while riding his bike.

WHILE most students are still in bed, Moore is outside riding his bike. Moore, a nature lover, liked to ride in the morning to enjoy the quietness.

— Kevin Egan

— Kevin Egan

— T. J. Harrison

— Kevin Egan

IN his Barnes-Campbell room, Jerry Gensheimer, a Louisville sophomore, prepares for a long-distance ride. Gensheimer liked to take weekend trips where he rode 100 miles a day.

WHEN Gensheimer goes on long trips, he must take along camping equipment including a tent and a compass. By adding the equipment, Gensheimer added 60 to 70 extra pounds to his bike.

— Kevin Egan

Road cont.

Last fall he won the 20-mile event in The Great Bike Race at Beech Bend park.

"I entered it for enjoyment, not for winning. The first half of the race we (the participants) stayed together and sang songs."

He received his first bike at age 8. It was a family tradition that he and each of his four brothers receive a bike at that age.

He said his first bike was good, but not expensive. His second and third bikes were better, but both were stolen.

He's still paying on a loan for his $500 Univega 10-speed he bought a little over a year ago.

Riding is a form of transportation for Moore. For five months, he rode six miles to and from his job as a bartender near his hometown.

Gensheimer started touring (riding long distances) with his family when he was 12.

"The whole family would go riding together. We still do when we're all together," Gensheimer, a Louisville sophomore, said.

He said his bike is his only means of transportation, and he's spent as much money on it as he would a car. He has a $1,200 touring bike and a $700 racing bike.

Gensheimer worked as a bike mechanic at a bike shop in Louisville for three years. While there he formed a cycling club. The 20 members took short rides through the city on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Gensheimer has big plans. He wants to ride to California to visit his brother. He said it would probably take him two months to get there on his bike.

Bikers do run into problems — such as dogs.

Gensheimer said when dogs bother him, "I grab my water bottle and squirt them." He said they always leave him alone after that.

Moore said he jumps off his bike and puts the bike between him and the dog.

Moore and Gensheimer both ran track in high school. They said that riding helped their running.

"I used to get incredibly nervous when I competed," Moore said. "But it's nothing anymore. I'm out to prove something to myself, not to anyone else."

— T. J. Hamilton

BEFORE the Beech Bend Race, Moore stretches out before he rides. Moore rode his 10-speed every morning, anywhere from 10 to 18 miles and swam or ran during the winter.

He said he is getting more involved in doing all three. This fall he plans to be in the Louisville Triathlon event that includes riding, swimming and running.

In 10 years he hopes to be in the biggest event of this kind, the Iron Man Competition. The participants have to swim two miles in the sea, bike 100 miles, and run 26 miles.

"It would be a fun accomplishment, and that's what it's all about," he said.

Moore doesn't plan to give up his riding. He said, "I like biking because it's a good time, and it's a chance for personal betterment."

Gensheimer said he wouldn't ever get bored with biking.

"It's something that really excites me. I set goals, like how far I'm going to ride, and then I feel like I've really accomplished something when I meet those goals."

"There's not much bad you can say about biking. It's just an all-around good sport."

Tonya Berkley

Index

A

A delicate balance 49
A four-year bond 36
A projected success 114
A red-hot affair 35
A reel artist's tribute 149
A school of hard Knox 119
A shot in the dark 345
A smile worth remembering 159
A special fan 60
A sport in itself 360
A visit from home 19
A week for grecks 14
A well-balanced performance 175

A year in the spotlight 140

Abacus 247

Abdiaz, Mohd Salle 91

Abdiaz, Abdul Azim 91

Abell, Christopher Paul 91, 246,

247, 255

Abell, Harry Samuel II 290

Abell, Paul Wmatt 129

Abell, Raymond Charles 173,

276, 290, 384

Abernathy, Kelvin Dale 313

Abernathy, Melissa Ann 152, 173

Abu, Abdul Ghani 91

Aburime, Jerome Odalen 91

Academics 194-225

Accounting Club 228

Acree, Dennis Lee 294

Acting Company 26

Adams, Billy 285

Adams, Bonnie Lynn 129

Adams, Cindy Sue 129

Adams, Darrell Alan 173

Adams, Herman James 173

Adams, Joan Cecil 153, 257

Adams, Julie Ann 153

Adams, Kimberly Kay 173, 293

Adams, Lisa Kay 91

Adams, Patricia Carol 153

Adams, Steven Gregory 232

Adams, Robert 262, 263

Adams, Ronald 218

Advertising Club 228

A'Edah, Felix 332, 333

Aesop's Fables 24

Afro-American Players 93,

229

Ahrens, Sharon Ann 91

Ahsan, Reza 211

Alabama 6, 20, 22

Alabama Shakespeare

Festival Company 26

Albert, Janice Elaine 153

Albert, Susan Marie 14, 129, 261,

264, 288

Albin, Marvin 212

Ailright, Susan C. 173

Aldridge, Paula Louise 91

Aldridge, Richard 215

Alekse, Vladimir 237

Alexander, Member 91

Alexander, Patrick Keith 339

Alexander, Samuel Anderson 153

Allard, Linda Carol 229

Allard, William 285

Allen, Carol 228

Allen, Christopher Eric 91

Allen, Harry 256

Allen, Mark Owen 129

Allen, Teresa 84

Allen, Theodore Jay 91

Allen, Thomas L. 20, 39, 276,

290

Allen, Tracy Lynne 173

Allison, David W. 83

Alvord, Tracy Lee 153

Almost doesn't count 308

Almull, Janet 328
Alpha Delta Pi 14
Alpha Epsilon Delta 229
Alpha Gamma Rho 12, 15,
286, 287
Alpha Kappa Alpha 33, 286,
287
Alpha Kappa Delta 229
Alpha Kappa Psi 232
Alpha Omicron Pi 10, 14, 15,
226, 286, 356
Alpha Phi Alpha 289
Alpha Phi Omega 33, 83, 232,
233
Alpha Psi Omega 233
Alpha Xi Delta 15
Alvey, Kevin Lee 280
Alvey, Melanie Lynn 129, 255
Alvin, Ailey 26

Alvin Alley Repertory

Ensemble 26

Aman, Zubaidah 91

Amazing Tones of Joy 236,

237

Ambrise, Ronald G. 173

AMC Greenwood 6 Theatre 57

American Cancer Society 83

American Home Economics

Assoc. 236, 237

American National Bank 57

American Society of Interior

Design 236, 237

American Society of Mechanical Engineers 236,

237

Anders, Kenneth Wade 30, 91

Anderson, Anthony Wayne 91

Anderson, Barry 363

Anderson, Barry Todd 313

Anderson, Daniel Pernell 289,

304, 339

Anderson, Deborah Gayle 255

Anderson, Dianna Lynn 91, 256

Anderson, Dilisa Gayle 129

Anderson, Judith Ann 173

Anderson, Linda Sue 173

Anderson, Pamela Sue 153, 334,

335

Anderson, Todd 351

An Evening of Dance '84 24,

28-31

An eyeful of answers 46

An optimistic influence 197

Andrews, Lisa Victoria 91, 289,

293

Andrews, Mole Alice 268

Andrews, Tracey Marie 298

Anthony, Monica Lee 173, 290

Anthony, Teresa Lynn 238, 290

Antone, Ralph 349

Aponte, Paul B. 173

Appenfelder, Rebecca Marie 153,

256

Apple, James Thomas 258, 266

Applewhite, Scott 262

Appling, Lisa Ann 173

Araque, Jose O. 91

Arbelaz, Guillermo E. 91, 122,

123, 256

Armstrong, Laura Anne 153

Arnott, Deborah Lynn 153

Arnold, Harriet S. 26

Art Education 238

Ashbury, Bryan Keith 322, 325

Ashby, Kristy Kaye 229

Ashby, Paul Steven 270

Ashby, Shannon Leigh 129

Ashby, William Todd 129

Ashley, Deborah Lee 91

Askins, Kenneth Brent 91

Assad, Deborah Lynn 91

Assad, Kris 129

Associated Student

Government 49, 238

Association for Computing

Machinery 238

Association for Student

Social Workers 241

Atherton, Tammy Jane 153

Atkinson, David Steen 129, 273

Atwood, Kevin Thomas 261, 301

Aucilar, Benjamin Paul 173, 299

Aucilar, Michelle Marie 173

Augburger, Gert Faye 91

Austin, Michael Wayne 313

Avlet, Leonardo 256

B

Babb, Gary Lynn 313

Babcock, Elizabeth A. 129, 298

Babcock, James 266

Babcock, Maryann Kay 173, 358

Bachman, Beth Anne 352, 353

Bachmann, Todd Dwight 299

Bacon, Dennis Wayne 308, 313

Baden, David C. 337

Bailey, David Allen 313

Bailey, Dan 211

Bailey, James Lilburn 173

Bailey, Julie Rose 129

Bailey, Martha Gayle 129, 233

Bailey, Michael Gilbert 129, 302

Bailey, Robin Starr 173

Bailey, Scott Allen 91, 302

Bailey, Sharon Denise 249

Bair, Jane Ellen 173, 352, 353

Baird, Alexander Tilford 294

Baird, Thomas Kelly 91

Baker, Annmar E. 129

Baker, Clarence 313

Baker, David Michael 280

Baker, Elizabeth Carol 129

Baker, Gary Thomas 173, 260

Baker, James 200, 201

Baker, June Dale 242

Baker, Lynn 288

Baker, Mark Wayne 91

Baker, Mary Lynn 173

Baker, Mary Margaret 153, 242,

244, 276

Baker, Michael Allen 91

Baldau, Mark Thomas 241

Baldini, Angela Tammy 102, 103

Baldwin, Gregory Thomas 268

Baldwin, Harold Gene 129, 270

Baldwin, Michelle Lynette 173

Baldwin, Thomas 38, 206

Ballard, Aleta Sue 153

Ballard, Barry Shawn 313

Ballard, Bradley Stephen 294

Ballard, Brett Charles 91, 261,

266

Ballard, Jude Gerard 173

Ballard, Susan Annette 91, 237

Ballenger, Craig Lee 91

Ballenger, Michael Alan 325

Bancroft, Robert E. 313

Banks, George Dennis 313

Banks, Cherie Emerson 173, 290

Bansimer, Richard Alan 302

Baptist Student Union 93, 241

Barker, Teresa Frances 91

Barfield, Shelia Gail 33, 287

Barger, Everett Thomas 129

Barker, John Richard 173

Barker, Jonathan Brett 319, 342

Barker, Rebecca Renee 290

Barker, Steven 206

Barkley, Shawn Edwin 301

Barlow, Marvin Lewis 129

Barney, Kimberly Frances 288

Barney, Shonna Kay 153

Barnhill, Kenneth Wayne 129

Barnstetter, Tamara 258

Barr, Kevin Odell 173

Barr, Ted Walker 38

Barr, Teresa G. 91

Barr, Wilhelmina 91

Barren River Comprehensive

Care Center 83

Barrow, Jody 61

Bartek, Gregory Edward 349

Bartlett, Sheila Ann 268

Bartus, Sherri Lee 129, 242

Baseball 346-349

Bastien, David Dwight 91, 252

Bastin, Kenneth Tyrone 91, 229

Bates, Gordon M. 129

Batson, Linda Sue 92

Batts, Mary Robin 293

Baugh, Tracy Lee 83

Baughman, Henry 208

Bauch, David Joseph 92, 294,

295

Baumann, Daniel Allen 307

Baumgardner, Inno Perkins 92

Baxter, Max Brenton 293

Bayens, M. Beth 334, 335

Bayens, Linda H. 129

Bays, Douglas Lee 332, 333

Beach, John Alan 92

Beam, Larry Kent 228

Bean, Lisa Marie 270

Beauchamp, Denise Marie 153

Beauregard, Laurie Ann 153

Beck, Archie Ozell 229

Beck, Douglas Keith 173, 254

Beck, Louis 206, 229

Beck, Lyman Francis 294

Beck, Mildred Louise 173

Becker, James 225

Beckham, Robin Louise 153

Beckton, Richard Leland 129, 250

Bedinger, Melissa Ann 92

Beck, Sarah Hyde 129, 228, 276

Beck, Kristi Kaye 334, 335

Becker, Amelia Carol 173

Clark, Mark Edward 313
Clark, Melinda Jean 96
Clark, Nancy 334, 335
Clark, Paula Jean 174
Clark, Rhonda Michele 154
Clark, Rodney Wayne 313
Clark, Sam 313
Clark, Sandra Renee 96, 256
Clark, Stephen Douglas 154
Clark, Susan Lynn 131
Clarke, Augustine Edward 293
Clarke, Elizabeth Warren 268
Clarkson, Lisa Jo 131
Clackson, Tammy Sue 131
Classic traditions 328
Clater, Cynthia Lynn 131
Claycomb, Thomas R. 174
Claypool, Jeanne Renee 52, 254
Claypool, Jeanie Lynn 241
Clayton, William Thomas 174
Claywell, Gerald Craig 174
Clevering, Mary Shelby 258
Clocquet, Janet Ruth 154
Cleck, Gary 57
Clem, John David 346, 349
Clement, Michael Eugene 310, 313
Clements, Gerald F. Jr. 131
Clements, Patricia Lynne 131
Clements, Rebecca Lee 131
Clements, William Thomas 132
Cline, Dwight 121
Cline, Lisa Ann 174
Cline, Steve H. 300
Cloyd, Bobbie Jo 174
Cobb, Bruce W. 39
Cobb, Connie Gale 96, 132
Cobb, Curtis Willard Jr. 174, 179
Cobb, Kenneth Gordon 174
Cockiel, Teresa Lynn 96
Colley, David 80, 276
Colley, Leanne 174
Colley, Tina Michelle 132
Coffman, David T. 236, 237
Coffman, Donald W. 228
Cohn, Blaine 251
Coker, William Gregory 301
Colby, Carolee Winston 174, 290
Cole, Charlene Renee 241
Cole, Lonnie Kyle 96
Cole, Pamela Stratton 132
Cole, Rayma Frances 132
Cole, Roland Duane 174, 313
Coleman, Bobbie Ealy 174
Coleman, Kathy Jo 174

Coleman, Sherman Nelson 132
College Heights Herald 50,
80, 165, 262, 263
College of Business
Administration 212-215
College of Education 218-221
Collegiate 4-11 254
Collins, Floyd 230
Collins, Jeffrey Kohler 280
Collins, Jerry, Lee 174
Collins, Martha Layne 3, 49
Collins, Michael 96
Collins, Michele Ann 154
Collins, Tamberly Gayle 154, 233
Colonial Nursing Facility 83
Colston, Darwin Keith 302
Colwell, Felty Bice 155
Combs, Ann Margaret 132, 229
Combs, Anna M. 242
Combs, James Clinton 116, 117
Combs, Timothy Alice 174
Combs, Tina Rae 132, 268
Combs, Wendy Layne 14, 150,
151, 193
Community 54-59
Compton, Amy January 96
Compton, Karen 211
Concerts 20-21
Conley, Melissa Lou 96
Connally, Thad Francis III 56
Connolly, Karen Elizabeth 132
Constant, Phil 221
Conway, Vernon Martin Jr. 289
Coobill, Joseph Trudy 294
Coobill, Lisa Marie 174
Coobill, Thomas 208
Cook, Beverly 211
Cook, Jeff 20, 22
Cook, Joseph 283
Cook, Kimberly Sue 132
Cook, Michael Todd 132
Cook, Robert Frederick 132
Cook, Tammy Sue 176
Cook, Stan 211
Coomes, Anna Frances 155
Cooney, Carolyn Ann 290
Coop, Alice Anna 266
Copus, Karen Ann 255
Coppeland, Tony L. 176
Coplin, Melissa Jayne 165
Corbin, Alice Annette 74
Corbin, Mary Janette 43, 74
Corder, Penny Kaye 176
Cork, Chrysal Ann 132, 345
Cusack, Scott 332, 333

Corralles, John Wayne 96
 Corral, Melinda Jane 96, 246-47
 Correa, Raul Martin 96
Corvette Club 35
 Cossey, Alan June 96, 261, 270
 Costello, Kenny Wade 313
 Cuthlin, Kyle Robertson 256
 Cotter, Robert Charles 132
 Cotton, Leisa Jo 96, 266
 Cottrell, Ann Marie 176
 Cottrell, Patty Lou 132, 264
 Couch, Pamela Jean 155
 Couch, Robert Jay 337, 351
 Cusick, Judi L. 176
 Counts, Edward 225
 Cooney, Linda Sue 155
 Covell, Constance Renae 176
 Coward, Mark Anthony 96
 Cowles, Gil Ray 290, 242
 Cox, Angi Dennis 132
 Cox, Carol Lynnette 155
 Cox, Dennis Jayne 155
 Cox, Edward Raymond Jr. 155, 293
 Cox, Julie Elizabeth 155
 Cox, Melissa Carol 132, 298
 Cox, Tammy Lynn 96
 Coyer, Jimmy W. 81
 Crabtree, David Alan 369
 Crabtree, Mac Alan 294
 Crabtree, Matthew Wayne 96
 Cravens, Mark 176, 273, 302
 Cravens, Raymond 206
 Crawford, Charles Kevin 155
 Crawford, Frances Valerie 236, 237
 Crawford, Nick 230
 Crawford, Tracy Sue 298
 Crenshaw, John 225
 Crenshaw, Kurt Alan 302
 Crews, Philip Watson 301
 Crop, Mary Martin 266
 Critchfield, Sandra Jane 132
 Crittenden, Ardis Richard 96, 237
 Crocker, Helen 206
 Crocker, Steve Wayne 337
 Crooks, F. Corydon 221
Cross Country 342-343
 Cross, Richard Brian 266
 Crosson, Janet S. 132
 Crosson, Lori Ann 132
 Crow, Marle Kay 176, 268
 Crow-Garcia, Carol 225
 Crowe, Carol S. 176
 Cunnell, Jeffrey Dean 155

Cutcher, Mary Jane 344, 345
Cul, Robert J. 176, 182, 234, 235
Culley, David 363
Cultural affair 10
Culver, James Timothy 155
Cummings, Alison H. 256
Cummings, Beverly Nadine 96
Cummings, Pamela Gail 255
Cundiff, Brian David 20
Cundiff, Kevin Neil 96, 238
Cundiff, Lori Ann 132, 83, 82
Cunningham, Dana Lynn 62, 31
317
Cunningham, Gala Chervone 291
Cunningham, Pamela Kay 275
Cunningham, Patrick M. 156,
157, 234
Cunningham, Roger Dale 96, 263
Cunningham, Sherry Beth 280,
287
Cunningham, William 221
Curry, Philip Craig 965, 237,
302
Curse, Bruce James 242
Curry, Charles Dwayne 266
Curry, Danny T. 96
Curry, Horace Vernon 96
Curtis, Edna Mae 132, 228
Curtis, Leigh Anne 132
Curtis, Randall Thomas 132

D

Dahajan, Asiah 96
David, David F. 313
Dairy Science 244
Dale, Bobby Bruce 132, 238
Dale, Steven Gary 250
Dale, Tory Antonette 260
Dalton, Joseph 69
Dane, Roberta Rose 176
Daniel, Charlie 296, 334, 335,
351
Daniel, Kenneth Marion 98, 237
Daniel, Roger Donald 132, 349
Daniels, Stephen Wayne 293
Danks, Denise Michelle 155
Dansereau, Ed 19

Dant, Eva Marie 176
Darland, Gene Lane 339
Darweesh, Fannok 211
Dassara, Sheri Lynn 132
Data Processing Management Assoc. 245
Dauby, David Neil 132
Daugherty, Kim Gary 238
Daugherty, Laura Leigh 155, 246-47
Daugherty, Vivian Marie 176, 241
Daum, Jennifer Leigh 176
Davenport, Deana Sue 287
Davenport, Lori Lynn 287
Davenport, Rebecca Anne 132
Davidson, Katherine M. 4, 176, 271, 342
Davis, Alan 144, 145
Davis, Bob 18, 19
Davis, Brad 302
Davis, Dan 56, 328
Davis, David Allen 98, 254, 276
Davis, David 299
Davis, Donald Revue 98, 270, 273
Davis, Erin 82, 83
Davis, Jacqueline Sue 18, 19, 176
Davis, James 49, 50, 225
Davis, Janice Lynn 176
Davis, Jeffrey Scott 132
Davis, Jim 18, 19
Davis, John Derek 295
Davis, Judy 18, 19
Davis, Karen Lynn Adams 132
Davis, Leigh Ellen 176
Davis, Mary E. 155
Davis, Michael T. 177
Davis, Nancy 206
Davis, Robert John 98
Davis, William 215
Davis, William David 177
Dawson, Sheryl Lynn 155
Dawson, Stanley S. 302
Day, Kelly A. 177
Day, Laura Lea 241
Day, Linda Susan 98
Day, Nancy Anne 74
Dayberry, Mark 255
Dayberry, William Martin 132
Dayoub, Marlin Dale 293
DeArmond, Dan Layton 98
Dean, Bradford Eugene 305
Dean, Elizabeth Anne 66, 293
Dean, Joey Marie 293
Dean, Paul 21
"Death of a Salesman" 23

Deaton, David 301
Deaton, Royce Allen 302
Debert, Melinda Jean 241, 266
Debord, Jimmy H. 302, 352, 333
Debord, John Scott 98
Decestra, Mary Elizabeth 12
Decker, Amy Elizabeth 270
Decker, Dawn K. 290
Decker, John William Jr. 99
Deeb, Mark Thomas 293
Deere, Randy 313
Deese, Lysa Marie 177
Deegenbach, Linda Wessert 241
Delker, Steve P. 298
Dejansette, Shelly Kay 98, 245
DeKoster, Brianne Jeanne 155, 271
Derlop, Elizabeth Lynn 98
Dulph, Timothy Gordon 346
Demantchuk, Lucie Ann 177
Demuthius, Tara Rae 156, 287
Dennis, Geoffrey Coleman 23
Denney, Pamela Marie 260
Dennis, Dianne 98, 361
Dennis, Doreen Lynn 177
Dennis, Michael Leon 273, 302, 303
Denny, Sherri 156
Dentforth, Rick Lee 313
Depp, Dianne R. 61, 98, 314, 319
Derpiant, Ashley Cherie 290
Deputy, Suzanne Gayna 84, 85, 177, 238, 287
Despain, James L. 94
Detweiler, Betty 211
DeVaux, Carol Ann 156
Dever, Karen Ann 177
Dever, Mona Lynn 98, 268
Devine, Cynthia Lynn 177
Dev, William Carrol Jr. 301
Dewasne, Catherine Leigh 177, 302
Dax, Joan 256
Dax, Michael J. 156, 249
Dax, Monica Louise 98
Dickens, Julia Get 98
Dickens, Philip Wade 242
Dickerson, Marie Lynn 75, 94
Dickinson, Robert Winley 332, 303
Diel, Justin Lee 313
Diamantier, Ronald 211
Dillard, Felicia Kay 132
Dillard, Michele Lynn 287
Dillard, Robert 301
Dilley, David Brian 98

Dillingham, George 296
Dilmon, Audrey Anne 17
Dilworth, Gary 27
Dinning, James Patrick 233
Distributive Education C of America 246
Duggad, Luanne 156, 293
Dusen, Pamela Ann 156, 28
Dockery, Darryl Dewayne 2
Dodd, Jeffery, Farmer 136
Dogruyel, Selim Yezus 156
333
Dollar Club 10
Donaldson, Gregory Kelley
Donaldson, Kristina Marie 1
Donaldson, Margaret Ann 9
Donaldson, Ronald Bruce 9
Donnelly, Dennis Claude 99
Donnelly, Lynn 211
Dooley, Diane Lynn 156
Dooley, Phyllis 294
Doelin, Patricia Ann 156
Dennis, Tammy Fox 99, 259
Dew, Dennis 290
Deffen, Orville 211
DeLeon, Patricia Anne 132,
246-47
Dougherty, Debra Ann 132,
246
Douglas, Barry McWayne 25
Douglas, Lendell 76
Douglas, Sheila Lynn 177
Douthitt, James Michael 228
Dowell, Brian K. 132
Dowell, Jacque Marie 156
Downey, Dana Jo 156
Downey, Laurie Ann 288
Dwering, Martha H. 177
Downs, Elizabeth Jo 99, 266
Dyke, Thomas Graham 99
Dyble, Timothy S. 121, 132,
136
Drake, Dennis 250
Drake, Howard Dennis 98, 2
Dreams come true 22
Drewinger, Andy Wayne 99
Drewey, Laura Kathleen 177
Drummond, David Lewis 132
249
Dryden, Barbara Anne 132
Dryu, Jennifer Marie 177, 2
Dryu, Patti M. 132
Dubois, Robert Scott 132
Duckert, Charles Delaine 132
Duck, Kim Marie 233, 241
Dulley, Kevin Patrick 132, 3
333

Dukes, Andria Page 271
Dukes, Steven Perry 132
Dummer, Kimberly Jo 99, 1, 42
Dunagan, Michael David 15
Dunbar, Guendolyn Ruth 213, 358
Duncan, Amy Elizabeth 156
Duncan, Brenda 282
Duncan, Douglas Eugene 99, 139
Duncan, Heather Elizabeth 1
Duncan, Pamela Sue 256
Duncan, Scott Ramey 8 299
Duncan, Todd 299, 351
Dunham, William Robert 29
Duskel, Melissa Ann 133
Dusen, Barbara Jane 99, 266
Dusen, David 208
Dusen, Deborah Kay 287
Dusen, Gregory David 133
Dusen, Melinda L. 177, 339
Dunville, Donna Jayne 177
Dupin, James Edward 156
Dupont, Joan May 99, 286
Durbin, Dawne Raye 361
Durham, Hugh 328
Durreant, Chuck 339
Dusseaux, Julie Diane 156
Dutton, Shari Lynn 268
Duvall, Anna Marie 99
Duvall, Deanna Lynn 178, 7, 94
Duvall, Rhonda Renee 156
Duvall, Robin Lee 156
Duvall, Sherie Jean 73, 72
Duvall, Sonja Jo 100
Dyerville, Dennis 302
Dye, Robert Walter 178, 270
Dye, Wandell 211, 255, 285

E

Eadena, Jeffrey D. 133
Eakins, Sondra Ann 100, 289
Eakin, Kimberly Y. 178
Eaks, Charles Kevin 261
Ealy, Marjorie Lane 38, 100
Earhardt, Christy 217
"Earthwalk" 26
East, Kelly Yvonne 133

East, Robert Allen 156
Eastern Kentucky
Rehabilitation Center
Eastridge, Denise Kay 276
Eatherly, Anthony Jay 313
Eaton, Ann Elizabeth 178, 3
Eaves, Lee Scott 266
Eberhard, Felicia Jeanne 174
Ehlen, Mark Douglas 51, 15
Eckhard, Ronald 200, 20
Eckman, Thomas A. 287
Eckman, William L. 287
Educational harvest
Edelin, Mark Deswayne 263
Edmonds, Marcella Elaine 13
Edmondson, Edna Jane 133
Edmondson, Michelle Anne
Edwards, Billy 295
Edwards, Diane Yvette 97
Edwards, Dean Earle 249
Edwards, Elmore 275
Edwards, Lisa Mae 178
Edwards, Pamela 178, 288
Edwards, Pamela Jean 100
Edwards, Shelly Lynn 157
Edwards, William H. 178, 31
Eflinger, Elizabeth Ann 178
Egner, Louis Allen 17, 133, 3
Ehrke, Lou 221, 253
Eiser, Kimberly Lynn 253, 2
Elam, Tammy Diane 86, 87
Elder, Gregory Allen 178
Elder, Joseph July 294
Ellis, Jonathan Warren 280
Ellis, Elizabeth 285
Ellitt, Gary M. 237
Ellitt, Traudelle 261
Elmore, Cathy D. 157
Elmore, Gary Vincent 100
Elmore, Nancy Terese 133
Elmore, Rhonda Faye 178
Elrod, Michael Wayne 313
Emberton, Douglas Teddy 17
Embree, Danny Ray 12, 312, 373
Emrhy, Hugh 178
Emrhy, Lisa Dianne 157
Emrhy, Pamela Shae 157, 2
Emrhy, Regno 100
Emry, Sherry Louise 100
Emerine, Mary Lou 100
Emerson, Jon Christine 51
Emery, Matthew Tyler 299
Enders, Karen Marie 133
England, Chen Joy 100, 246

"Fashion" 24
Fashion, Inc. 248
 Fashola, Alunat Bulalito 301
 Fatenbadi, Said Mohammed
 Fatin, Mark 313
 Faudner, James Herbert 33
 Faunt, Cynthia Marie 157, 2
 Fawcett, Quentin Louis 157
FCA Jog-a-thon 279, 28
 Fea, Jimmy 10, 49, 53, 296
 308-313
Fellowship of Christian Athletes 155, 248, 249,
257
 Felty, Jeffrey Alan 178, 238
 Felty, Kallay H. 51
 Fernandez, Deborah K. 178
 Fernick, Dawn Michelle 242
 Ferguson, Keith Edward 157
 Ferguson, Kelly Thomas 249
 Ferguson, Lexie Burgess 178
 Ferguson, Steven Ronald 178
 Ferrell, Blinne 208
 Ferrell, Charlotte Alyson 13
 Fern, Edward John 290
 Feinher, Holly Sue 178, 294
 Fiedler, Sherry Miller 157
 Fields, Ann 206
 Fields, Patricia A. 178
 Fillman, Jay Dean 258
Financial Management A 249
Finding their pace 338
Fine Arts 26
Fine Arts Festival 26
Fine-feathered friend 102
 Finlay, Steven Clyde 133, 25
 276
 Finley, Lori Ann 133
First-hand exploration 230
 Fischer, Cynthia C. 98, 99, 10
 Fishback, Ronald Aaron 313
 Fishburn, Elizabeth Rae 178
 Fisher, Lisa Bees 178
 Fitzgerald, Richard Dale 290
 Flaherty, Kenneth A. Jr. 82, 8
 133, 302
 Flandry, Dominic 274
 Flannery, Bruce Jerome II 157
 166
 Flett, Carol Jean 133
 Flennery, Angela Louise 178
 Flennery, Leslie 206
 Fleming, Barry Keith 238
 Fleming, Gary Lynn 100

Fourqurean, Elizabeth Ann 64-65
 Fowler, Beverly Rose 178
 Fowler, Catherine Chandler 293
 Fowler, Holly Leanne 158
 Fowler, David 301
 Fowler, Thomas James 246
 Fowler, Thomas Renee 100
 Foxles, Timothy Scott 2
 Fox, Kathleen Ann 158, 165
 Fox, Linda Cogswell 237
 Fox, Randy Jewell 134, 274
 Fox, Thomas Joseph 106
 Francis, Karen Alice 100, 33
 Francher, Steven Hawkins 30
 Frank, Marta Alice 158
 Frank, Telfin 322-325, 326
 Franklin, Joanne Renee 158
 Franklin, Laura Jean 134
 Franklin, Randall Lou 100
 Fredenick, Bert Knight 353
 Fredenick, David Channing 3
 Fredrick, Mark Monroe 290
 Free, Julie Lynn 293
Free time and speech 72
Freedom of speech 93
 Freels, Shawn David 178
 Freepartner, Denise M 178, 53
 French, Anthony C.
 Frenette, Matt 21
Freshmen 172-193
 Frew, Nancy Elaine 134
 Frew, Patricia Ann 178
 Frew, Rebecca Jean 158, 290
 Fry, Steven Alan 237
 Fritz, David Andrew 100
 Fritz, Paul John 352; 353
 Frymire, Bryan George 100
 Frymire, Jane Leigh 158, 287
 Fuchs, Gregory L. 293
 Fugate, Ann Marie 134
 Fugate, Jeanette Dec 158
Fulbright lectures 200-201
 Fulkerson, Barry Noel 134
 Fulkerson, Stacy Denise 178
 Fuller, Cynthia Lynn 359
 Fuller, Jellery Allen 178
 Fullers, Tom 24
 Fullum, Betty 221
Fund run 278
 Fucus, Albert III 81
 Fytile, George Mark 178

Gerralds, Regine Gayle 134
Gertsens, Jennifer Boyden 13
287
Getting in touch 228-281
Ginnaneus, Ted 330
Gibbs, Cindy Katherine 178
Gibbs, James Luther 313
Gibson, Alan Ray 264
Gibson, Carol Jane 134, 287
Gibson, Jennifer 211
Gibson, Jennifer Joanne 100
Gibson, Sandra Kay 158
Gielow, Nova B. 24
Gilbert, Bunch 313
Gilbert, Leonard Ray 261
Gilbert, Nathan George 158
Gilbert, Penelope Sue 134, 2
Gibtrist, Louise Clark 290
Gill, Alexa Wells 101
Giles, Jim 160, 161
Gilliam, Charles Keith 158
Gilliam, John Michael 290
Gilliam, Sharon Kay 156, 29
Gilliam, Tammy Lynn 178
Giltner, Emily Jane 302, 353
Gison, Kenneth Todd 294
Gish, Jeffrey Alan 299
Givner, Steven L. 134, 241
Glaser, Joseph 206
Glass, Terri Roche 101
Glenncock, Kelly Marie 290
Gleason, Larry 211
Gleitz, George 285
Glenar, Cheryl Lynn 158
Glover, Byron Lawrence 101
Glover, Tana L. 178
Goagbe, Dana Lynn 334, 335
Gooby, Julie Ann 134
Goddow, William Keith 237
Goding, Ann 206, 283
Goff, James Michael 134, 29
Goff, John Harold 178
Golf, R. Ray 294, 297
Golf, Tim D. 101
Golderh, Bob 55
Golts, Carole Ann 241
"Go Jump in the Lake" 24
Gold, Shannon Elaine 101
Goldstein, Vickie Leigh 178, 280
302
Golf 352-353
Golgithy, Dewanya 241
Gonzales, Fernando 253
Goodie, Katherine Annette 178
Goodie, Timothy Alan 101

Upstairs downstairs

ON A QUIET Friday afternoon, students leave Cherry Hall. Many chose to go home for the weekends.

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a wooden staircase and railing. The image is characterized by strong diagonal lines and deep shadows, creating a dramatic, almost abstract effect. The railing and steps are visible, but the lighting emphasizes the textures and geometric forms over the specific details of the architecture.

England, Karla 5 178
England, Kimberly Denise 178
Englebright, Curtis 218
Entertainment 20-27
Environmental Technology Club 246
Erne, David Robert 313
Erskine, Irene 17
Erskine, Julie 28, 302
Ervin, Thomas Elliott 178
Eskew, Julie Ellen 289
Eschelyn, Lisa Carole 288
Estates, Delmer Lemard 157, 238, 255, 276
Estes, Deborah Jo 245
Ester, Ronald Henry 178
Eta Sigma Gamma 246
Etter, Keith Wayne 133
Evans, Bobbie Lee 133
Evans, Carol Beth 100, 246-47
Evans, John Tichnor 100
Evans, Karen Ann 100
Evans, Karen Vaughn 289
Everhard, Sharon L. 178
Eversly, Ann Margaret 157
Eversoll, Robert 211

F

Fajardo, Rose Ellen 100
Fallin, Sarah Jane 64-65
Farley, Edward Allen 100, 228
Farley, Richard S. 100
Farmer, Eula Marcela 100, 301
Farmer, Scott Thomas 178
Fashion 84-87
Fletcher, Auburn 211
Fletcher, Dennis Louise 178
Flood, Linda Lee 133
Flores, Joan Elizabeth 271
Florence, Christie Lynne 178
Florence, Dora Ann 157
Flowers, Antonia Harna 133, 264, 275, 288
Flynn, Susan Ann 133
Flynn, William 218
Flynn, James 50, 204, 216
Fox, Lori Wynn 178
Fox, Marcia Gwen 157, 242
Fogg, Beth Elaine 241
Foley, Patricia Jean 157, 259
Foley, Tammy Jo 178
Fonda, Jane 26
Fones, Matthew Hudson 301, 354, 355
Football 306-313
Forte, Brian James 100, 273
For ages: freshman to senior 43
Forbes, Patricia Wilson 157
Ford, Carla Ann 133
Ford, Douglas Scott 293
Ford, Elizabeth 100, 293
Ford, Jana Marie 178
Ford, Mark Vernon 133, 270, 273
Ford, Scott 211
Ford, Stacy Lynn 100
Ford, Stacey Lynn 280
Ford, Tracy Lynn 158
Forsy, Julie Ann 256
Forsatt, Pamela Ann 242
Forsatter, Camille Colins 4, 339, 342, 343
Forsetter, Charles 206
Forshee, Carla Lynn 158
Fortune, William Edward 313
Fortwendel, Allison Marie 288
Foster, Duane Collier 100

G

Gabehart, Becky Jill 134
Gaines, Janie Lynn 100
Galloway, Pamela Jean 245
Galvin, Mark David 100, 268
Gallivan, Susan Michelle 158
Gamma Sigma Sigma 249
Gamma Theta Upsilon 250
Gammans, Wanda Sue 158
Gant, Deborah Carol 178
Ganna, Jorge Alberto 190
Gardner, Stephen Byers 249, 279, 325
Gardner, Ann 178
Gardner, David Mark 301
Gardner, Donna Lou 100
Gardner, James Scott 302
Gardner, Lisa Ann 134
Garrison, Bill Ray 293
Garst, Joseph Ray 100, 246-47
Garry, Laura Beth 287
Gash, Sharon Reed 158, 241
Gatwood, Broderick Cabot 100, 105
Gatto, Donna Marie 178
Gay, Carolyn Sue 158
Geelin, Dorine 281, 225
Gensheimer, Jerry Allen 158, 252, 273, 364, 366, 367
Gentry, Joe 48
Gentry, Teddy 20, 22
Gentry, Linda Dawn 178
Geo Club 251
Geology Club 230, 231, 251
Georgia, Susan Caryl 178, 342
Gooding, Cheryl Ann 178
Goodwill, David Thomas 281
Goodwin, Todd Elvix 179
Goobley, Vivian Lynette 179
Gordon, Billy 325
Gordon, Dailey C. 134, 243
Gordon, Leasa Carol 179
Gordon, Tim Lee 242
Gorman, Douglas John 134, 33, 333
Gorman, Steven A. 168, 169
Gosling, Susan Carol 158
Gott, Douglas Wayne 179, 301
Gott, John Kuley 134
Gott, Michael Timothy 101
Gitt, Timothy Mark 179
Gowen, Ann Walker 179
Grace, Lee Wade 255, 284, 289
Graduation 35-39
Grage, Kimberly Jo 101
Graham, Connie Kaye 101
Graham, Danny Joe 351
Graham, Marilyn Kay 242
Graham, Susan Elaine 158, 281
Grand Ole Opry 74
Graves, Chante Jo 179
Graves, Dante James 101, 229
Graves, Janice Kaye 101
Graves, Roger Clay 158
Graves, Teresa Ann 135
Gray, David Louis 158, 264, 26
Gray, Howard 50
Gray, Paul David 309, 313
Gray, Teresa Ray 179
Great Greek Street Mile 14
Greider, Jeff Kenneth 299
Greek Coast 304-305
Greek Day 14
Greek Feud 17
Greeks 14-17, 282-305
Greek Week 14-17
Greene, Mary Ellen 158, 261

Chain reaction

WHILE SKATEBOARDING, Dan Powell, a Bowling Green freshman, jumps over a chain. He was in front of Chery Hall.

— Todd Burns

Livingston, Benjamin E. 138, 237, 287
Lloyd, Lowell Edward 138
Locke, Christi Gayle 138
Logan, Adrienne Lynette 183
Logan, Altha Ann 139
Logan, Kimberly Lee 20, 139, 298
Logic, Matthew Charles 349
Logsdon, Martha Layne 109, 302
Loizzo, Patricia Ruse 268
Long, Barbara Ann 183
Long, Curtis 338, 339, 342, 343
Long, Pamela Sue 183
Long, Patricia Dianne 109
Long, Patricia Susan 183
Long, Ricky Lee 183
Long, Susan Rodgers 162, 261, 290
Long, Veronica Lynn 184
Looney, Marian Elliott 298, 358

Loveday, Kimberly D. 162
Loveday, Patricia C. 139, 254
Lovely, Sean Alan 184
Loverboy 6, 20, 382
Lovins, John Barton III 23, 35
Lowery, Christopher Lee 53
Low, Gregory Dean 109
Lowdermilk, Kevin Thomas 361
Lowe, Kimberly Alison 184, 287
Lowe, Richard Alan 386, 337
Lowe, Sandra K. 184
Lowndes, Laura Ann 139, 52
Lowrey, Howard 210
Lowry, Mark 4, 216
Lowry, Stephen Clark 109
Loy, Cynthia Kay 184, 238
Loy, Jeffrey Clint 109
Loyd, Norton Harold 260
Lozada, Beatriz 139
Lozada, Luis Esteban 109

Lozada, Mariannella D. 162
Lucas, Mary Ann 184
Lucas, Scott Jefferson 301
Lucas, Timothy Alan 184, 241
Luckett, Charles Martin 184, 280
Lucky, Steven Wayne 299
Lucky, Thomas Leslie 139, 313
Ludwig, Sherry D. 184
Lunsford, David Wayne 265
Lunsford, Matthew Dale 109
Lusani, Kannon 139
Lusky, Tracie Lee 109
Lush, Brenda Lea 109, 274
Luster, Michael Paul 270
Lutz, Richard Christian 139
Lyddian, Dana Beth 184
Lynch, Alison A. 184
Lynch, Dan 262
Lynch, Thomas P. 109
Lyninger, David Ray 139, 241

Lyons, James Kevin 244
Lyons, Maura Kathleen 162, 334, 335
Lytle, Randall Hugo Jr. 162, 273
Lytle, Jill Elisabeth 35, 69, 139, 254

M
MacFarland, Thomas William 126
Mack, Joan 27
Mackey, Carla Ann 162, 241
Mackey, Sharon Jay 126
Macon, Collette Denise 273

MacVeigh, Daniel Charles 184
Maddox, Gregory Scott 241
Maddox, John Brian 184, 238
Maddox, Judith Ann 249
Maddox, Stephen Todd 241
Madison, Toby Dean 139
Maginger, Lisa Lynn 162
Major, David Lee 109, 260, 271
Majors, Paul Henry 313
Majors, Scott Litsey 139, 266, 276
Making the connections 222
Malone, Terrence F. 313
Maltry, Janet Alma 139
Maly, James Charles 287
Mane, Rosemary 139, 228
Manford, Kathleen Ellen 109, 268
Manley, Leonard Elwood 109
Mann, Kevin Bart 184
Mans, Glee Anna 109
Mansell, Jennie Elaine 109, 303

Manstfield, Tracy Ann 162
Manwaring, David Henley 14, 302
Marshall, Arthur Ray 337
Maple, Angela Carleton 110
Maple, Mona Lela 110
Maples, Dalton Curtis 296
Markham, Benjamin Craig 266
Markham, Melanie Ann 162
Marksbury, Sharon Marie 184
Marksbury, Tracy Lynn 162
Marlow, David Eric 266
Marlow, Lori M. 139, 259
Maroney, Catherine P. 317
Marroto, Bill 58
Marsh, Melissa Anna 53, 110, 266
Marshall, George D. 139, 241
Marshall, Virginia Dewart 110, 287
Martin, Chaz Collier 313
Martin, Clarence Bernard 322

325, 330, 331
Martin, Harrison Howard 242
Martin, James 210
Martin, James E. 250
Martin, Linda 316-319
Martin, Mary Elizabeth 184
Martin, Michael Wayne 313
Martin, Michelle Marie 162, 289
Martin, Robert 207
Martin, Suzanne 110
Martin, Tony Allen 44, 290
Martin, Vernon 215
Martin, Viencasa Ann 139
Mason, Carl A. 275
Mason, Dave 56
Mason, Lillie Margaret 314, 317
Mason, Roger Ernest 67
Mason, Thomas Michael 110
Mason, Tim 367
Mast, Sundus Saidi 162
Massey, Jane Trisley 140
Massey, Ronny 307
Massey, Victor 350
Masterson, James Michael 184, 241
Matheny, John 282
Mathew, David Allen 281
Mathis, Lisa Carol 184
Mathis, Carol Janette 185
Mathis, Lorinda Leigh 162, 266
Mathews, Melissa Lynn 162
Mathews, Robert Earl 140
Mattingly, Karen Denise 140
Mattingly, Lori Susan 288
Mattingly, Tracy Ann 140, 288
Mauck, James Neal 110
Maury, Lisa Ann 185
Maxson, Kimberly Jean 162
Maxson, Margaret Lynn 140
Maxson, Mimi 253
May, Dean 311
May, Nancy Ellen 162
May, Susan Jean 162, 265
Mayes, Mary Jo 110, 237
Mayfield-Greaves County Airport 8, 9
Maya, Kevin 251, 293
Maya, Sherry Rose 162, 198, 199, 287
Maya, William Kevin 140
McAlpin, Sharon Leann 185
McAtee, James J. 337
McBride, Deborah Colleen 84, 85, 110, 249, 266
McBride, Lornie Ray 268
McCall, Jeffrey Donald 304
McCall, Lisa Gale 140
McCallen, Mary Leigh 162
McCamah, Ronald Wayne 162, 238, 265
McCart, Lewis 221
McCart, Eliza Gale 110
McCart, Rocky Lee 110
McCauley, Tonya Gayle 140
McCavey, David Daley 185
McClaron, Margaret Anne 110, 238
McClear, Michael James 349
McClellan, Laura Lea 162, 287, 304
McClendon, Jennie Stephens 302
McClure, Mary Patricia 140
McClure, Terri Lynn 110, 259
McCluskey, Karen Lea 140
McConnell, Michelle Louise 140, 288
McCormack, Mark S. 301
McCormick, Mary Elizabeth 185
McCoy, Deborah Ann 140
McCoy, Mona Marie 185
McCubbin, Carla Ann 162
McCubbin, Dana Brady 140
McCubbin, Lucindy 110, 249, 275
McCallough, Thomas Soucek 140
McCurry, Rodney 216, 217
McDaniel, Michael Glenn 140
McDonald, Amy Elizabeth 111, 256
McDonald, Charlene Renee 111, 233, 241
McDonald, Gregory Keith 237, 301
McDonald, Karen Lynette 38, 111
McDonald, Larry 49
McDonald, William H. II 140
McDougal, Michael Wayne 111, 273
McDowell, Dwayne Thomas 111

McDowell, Penny D. 140
McElroy, Richard Goley 140
McFall, Cara Leigh 141
McFarland, Sam 216, 217
McGaha, Suzanne Joy 140, 141
McGavin, Ronald Lynn 111
McGhee, Kenneth Russell 302
McGowan, Susan Nolla 268
McGowan, Erin Leah 185
McGraith, Stephen Todd 313
McGregor, Jack 250
McGuffin, Rayetta Lynn 242
McGuinness, Michael John 162
McGuinness, Patricia Ann 111
McGuire, J. E. 248
McGuire, Elizabeth Ann 33, 80, 242, 256
McIntosh, Angela June 162, 240-41
McIntosh, Barron Lynn 301
McIntosh, Rita Lynn 185
McIntosh, Tammy Annette 111, 241, 275
McKee, Lisa Maria 242, 287
McKenzie, Patrick Bernard, II 313
McKenley, O'Brian Greene 74, 141, 290, 305
McKinney, Barry Lynn 162
McKinney, Elizabeth Jones 162
McKinney, Mitchell Shawn 185, 238, 276
McLaughlin, Kathy Keeling 162, 256
McLemore, Donna Sue 162, 268
McMahon, Michael A. 162, 306
McMahon, Dorothy 206, 207
McMahon, William 206, 207
McMillan, Cindy Beth 185
McNally, Gary Wayne 109, 111
McNeill, Michelle Lestel 36
McNeill, William Clay 111
McNemar, Judi Lynn 185, 242
McNemar, Nina Blair 141, 228
McPeak, Raymond 111
McPhail, William 210
McQuitty, Phil Dreher 353
McReynolds, Dana Caron 162
Maddi, Manja 111
Mead, Carolyn Louise 141
Meador, Charles Robert 111
Meador, Cynthia Eileen 141
Meador, Gloria K. 185
Meador, Ruby 207
Meadors, William 221
Meadows, Donald Duane 302
Meadows, Pleasant Henry 141, 238, 294
Meadows, Sheila Gail 141
Means, Susan Lynn 185
Meany, Melvin Joseph 185, 52
Medley, Bryant Aaron 163, 252, 254
Medley, Carol Jean 185
Medley, Deborah Kaye 111, 233, 274
Medley, Lori Ann 111
Meffert, Paul Bernard
Mefford, Raymond Douglas 265, 281
Meiers, Gretchen Ann 112, 242
Meiers, Stephanie C. 185
Melais, Polycarpus D. 332, 333
Melton, Steve Allen 187
Melton, Dallas Gail 112, 251, 253
Melton, Rebecca Lynn 187
Menard, Ronald J. 66, 255
Menke, Kim Allen 246
Men's basketball 320-325
Men's Volleyball Club 351
Meredith, Shannon Clare 187
Meredith, Tami Buellene 141
Merritt, David Wayne 265
Merritt, Gregory James 332, 333
Metcalf, Jacqueline Kaye 38
Metheny, Kerry Wayne 37, 112, 232, 251, 251
Metzger, Daniel Joseph 271
Metzner, Dorothy Gore 163, 261
Metzner, Donald Frederick 163
Meyer, Brian Paul 112
Meyer, Christopher Wayne 294
Meyer, Daniel Joseph 163, 302, 305
Meyer, James Mitchell 294
Michel, Lisa Ann 163
Michelsen, Kathryn Louise 163
Middleton, Theresa Renee 287
Midgett, Patti Gayle 141

Midnight Mania 326-327
Mid-South Management Group 56
Mid-West Intercollegiate Championship 336
Mietz, Melanie Ann 141, 233
Miles, Lana Dianne 163, 249
Miles, Terry Ray 187
Miley, Keith Alan 302
Miley, Melinda Alice 187, 255
Miles, Amy Irwin 112
Miles, Laura Lynn 141
Miles, Sue Ann 141
Miller, Brent Lewis 141
Miller, Carolyn Lee 290
Miller, Cynthia Jo 187
Miller, Darrell Wayne 163, 242, 299
Miller, Dwayne Lee 187, 241, 253
Miller, Eric Lynn 44
Miller, Frank Denton 15, 163, 301, 313
Miller, Glendell 381
Miller, Jim 207
Miller, Julie Lee 187
Miller, Karyn Hazle 141
Miller, Keith 332, 335
Miller, Laura Ellen 187
Miller, Lee Ann 64, 65
Miller, Lindsey Ann 163
Miller, Maria G. 163, 275
Miller, Mark H. 293
Miller, Mary Beth 163
Miller, Mary Ellen 225
Miller, Richard 225
Miller, Ruth Claire 112, 268
Miller, Susan Caroline 187
Miller, Victor Craig 1123, 228
Mills, Eddie 285
Mills, Gregory 210
Mills, Melody Ann 141
Mills, Terry Lynn Durham 112
Mills, Thomas Andrew 241
Milton, Paula Ellen 187
Milton, Teresa Lynn 187
Mincey, Jerome 325
Minton, John 224
Misegades, Keith Arthur 141
Miss Black Western Pageant 32, 33
Miss Western Pageant 32, 33
Mitchell, Clatus 210
Mitchell, David Loren 230, 251
Mitchell, Jennie Lea 112
Mitsunaka, Jorge 332, 333
Mizener, Elizabeth Ann 112
Moad, Stephen Mark 163
Mobbey, Monica Arlene 287
Moffat, Darragh Jo 288, 356
Mohdamin, Ahmad Nordin 112
Mohan, Robin Kaye 112
Molander, Cheryl Lynn 163
Mollyhorn, Jeffery Dale 266
Moinar, Jacqueline Elaine 112
Mondale, Walter F. 49
Monday, Jackie Edward 287
Money talks 212
Monin, William Raymond Jr. 163
Monroe, Amy D. 187
Monroe, Daniel Reed 279
Monroe, Eula 221
Monroe, Jamie Marie 112, 229
Monroe, Vinetta Shawn 163
Montgomery, Eva 141
Montgomery, Jennifer Renee 163, 242
Montgomery, Joella Faye 187
Moody, William Clayton 301
Mooney, Timothy Michael 313
Moore, Anne Bartlett 32
Moore, Conrad 251
Moore, Diane Gay 112
Moore, Doris Kay 112
Moore, Fergus Padraic 6, 187, 364, 365, 367
Moore, Grace Maxine 112
Moore, Herbert Bradley 112
Moore, Julianne 141, 255
Moore, Karen Louise 112, 276
Moore, Kelly Ann 164
Moore, Kirsten Yvonne 273
Moore, Marvin L. 187
Moore, Stephen James 332, 333
Moore, Tami Jo 112, 359
Moore, Tim 363
Moorehead, Jeffrey C. 301

Moorman, James Lynn Jr. 164, 281
Moraja, Linda June 288
Moran, Kathleen Annette 164, 334, 335
Morcom, Tammy Lynn 164
Morehead, Angela Elaine 164
Moreno, Florence I. 164, 278
Morgan, Darla Kaye 164
Morgan, David Gary 112, 294, 297
Morgan, Donna Louise 164
Morgan, Douglas Wayne 112, 284
Morgan, James Ray 142
Morgan, Kevin 302
Morgan, Scott Eugene 246-47
Morgan, Susan Ellen 142, 241
Mortality, Tracy Ann 290, 361
Morris, Crystal Dawn 142
Morris, George Emery 112, 268
Morris, Jeffery Hugh 244
Morris, John Allen 332, 333
Morris, Richard Clark II 273
Morris, Sharon L. 164
Morrison, Don William 142
Morrison, Karen Denise 187
Morrison, Robert Scott 294
Morrison, Sandra Elaine 298
Morrow, Lora Thomas 142, 266
Morse, Ginger Ellen 112, 241
Morton, Jamie Ann 272
Mowley, John Brent 164
Mowley, Leslie Anne 164
Mowser, Kimberly Gayle 142
Mowser, Tamara Renee 164
Moss, Elizabeth Ann 164
Moss, Laura Lynn 142
Moss, Max Eugene 142
Mountain, Thomas George 164
Mouser, Pamela Kay 36, 112, 276
Moutardier, Andrew Eric 187
Moutardier, Douglas Ray 313
Moxley, Robert Harrison Jr. 271
Moyers, Michael Wesley 112
Mudd, Keith Edwin 187
Mudd, Nancy Lynn 112
Mueller, Gary K. 348, 349
Mullford, Clay 241
Mullikin, Vicki Lynn 193
Mullins, Alan Lynn 311, 313
Mullins, George Dwayne 10, 31, 313
Munroe, Jeffrey 53
Murdock, Ann Bruton 142
Murphy, Bill 313
Murphy, Jack 293
Murphy, Anita Beth 164, 241, 252, 254
Murphy, Jay 294
Murphy, Joe Bedford 188, 189
Murphy, Kelley Denise 164
Murphy, Lisa Jane 164
Murphy, Mark Alan 164
Murphy, Robyn Elaine 164, 276
Murphy, Sheri Lynn 164, 304
Murray, Lee A. 287, 354, 355
Murre, Joel 346, 349, 381
Musen, Steven Lee 68
Music, Scott L. 187
Mutchler, Virginia 221
Myers, Beth Luanna 142
Myers, Kimberly Ann 113, 275
Myers, Michelle E. 266

National Collegiate Athletic Association 326, 340
National Student Speech, Language and Hearing Assoc. 258, 259
Nave, Wallace 224
Navigators 260
Neal, Barbara Lynn 187, 293
Neal, Jefferson Walter 301
Neal, Kevin Dale 261, 273
Neal, Michael Patrick 337
Nealy, Brenda Darlene 187
Nealy, Carolyn Elaine 165
Neel, Jack 219
Neeley, Karen Ann 133, 165, 17
Neff, Scott K. 113, 351
Negley, Ellen Louise 165
Nelson, Bartlett Lee 113
Nelson, James 294
Nelson, Robert 50, 312
Nelson, Tamlyn Ruth 165
Nelson, Tyler Scott 273, 337
Ness-Hatlen, Virginia 216, 217
Neth, Thomas Dwayne 165, 284, 299
Neiherton, Mary Lou 113
Neuhof, Frank 215
Neuhof, Frank W. 165
Neumann, Lisa Kay 298
Newcomb, Lisa Carol 187
Newman, Jeffrey Wayne 113
Newman, Robert Mark 187, 249, 281
Newman, David 301
News 48-51
Newsom, Robert Gordon 51
Newsome, George Allen 228
Newton, Charles George Jr. 301
Newton, Eric Thomas 263
Newton, Michael Wayne 165, 353
Nichol, Timothy Arthur 271
Nichols, Judy Carol 142
Nichols, Trisha Lynn 339
Nicholson, Maira E. 142, 270, 302
Nicholson, Steven Clyde 294, 297
Nininger, Susan Marie 187, 241
Niva, George 210
Niva, Gretchen 207
Niva, Todd R. 346, 349
Nix, Donald Gene 187
Nix, Ronald Dean 187
Nixon, Rebecca Leigh 142, 298
Nixon, Richard M. 25
Noble, J. David 22
Noe, Maria Kathryn 113, 259
No food for thought 68
Noland, Karen Lee 142, 204
Nord, Beth Marie 115, 268
Nordlund, Cynthia Stirling 187
Norene, Rebecca Ann 187, 276
Norfleet, Sheila Gay 165
Norman, Lisa Rose 165
Normand, Sherree Suzanne 165
Norris, Jonathan Paul 165, 85, 84
Norris, Kevin Wayne 187, 241
Norwood, David Owen 273, 313
Norwood, Francetta 33, 84, 85
Novus Tan 53
Nuwak, Thomas G. 299
Nuckolls, Bobby Joe Jr. 115
Nuckolls, Kelly 210
Nunnally, Stuart Jackson 254, 301
Nursing 198-199

Nagy, Laura Alice 113, 268
Nantz, Cynthia Ann 187
Nantz, Janice Ann 246
Napier, Julie Denise 142
Napier, Litta Ann 187
Napier, Lori S. 187
Nash, Diane S. 256
Nash, Ronald 205
Nass, Karin Kristine 187
Natcher, Jeff Lan 302
Nattson, James Michael 232
Nattson, Karen Marie 113, 244
National Collegiate Association for Secretaries 258, 259

O'Keefe, Brian David 165, 302
Okholm, Dwan 207
Oldham, John 224, 332, 333, 345
Oldham, Sally Ann 165
Oldham, Scott Houston 165
Oldham, William Hubert 115
"Oliver" 23
Oliver, Deana Lynn 142
Oliver, Stacy Aline 165
Oliver, Teresa Lee 115
Oliver, Tessa 334, 335
Oliver, Von 294
Olympics 341
Omicron Delta Kappa 260
Onan, Bernard Paul 294, 297
Only temporarily sidelined 106
Oppits, R. J. 212
Opportunity 74-75
Order of Omega 261
Organization of Red Knights 261
Organizations 226-305
Ormes, Michael Wayne 115
Osborne, Charles Gavin 280
Osborne, Elizabeth West 187
Osborne, John 224
Ottens, Sharon Ann 165, 316, 317
Overby, Allan Eugene 313
Over-the-border run 296
Owen, Randy 20, 22
Owens, Carol Cecil 143
Owens, Janna Lane 187
Owens, Kathy 120
Owenby, James Carl 270, 273
Ozgenel, Muge Hatice 354

P

Pace, Tammy Dan 313
Pack, Donna Gayle 51
Pack, Julie D. 287
Padgett, Patricia Anne 293
Page, Beth Rene 14, 293
Page, Garland Bruce 115, 232
Page, Stephen John 349
Pageants 32-33
Paige, Debra Reid 115
Paine, Kimberly Ann 115
Palmer, Patty 334, 335
Palmer, Janet 215
Palmer, Lory Len 258, 361, 381
Palmer, Sheryl L. 187
Pancake breakfast 16
Panhandle Association 264
Pankratz, Roger 219
Papadonou, Neophytos M. 321, 333
Pappas, Kathryn Lynn 187, 241
Pardue, Kevin Ray 165
Pare, Grady Holland 143, 229
Pare, Ladonna Decker 115
Parents' Weekend 18-19
Parham, Meltem Lynn 166
Paris, Paula Jean 241
Paris, Vicki Lynn 187
Park, Juanita
Park, Lawrence Albert 339, 342
Parker, Gail Marie 115
Parker, Kimberly Gayle 166
Parker, Rita Carol 115, 246-47
Parker, Todd Andrew 332, 333
Parker, Vivian Denise 74, 115, 246-47
Parks, Edwin 210
Parks, Phyllis Kate 143, 233, 237
Parr, Charlotte Denise 187
Parr, Kimberly Taryn 187
Parrent, Patricia Kay 166, 241
Parriott, David Stewart 134, 135
Parriott, Kenneth Dwayne 302
Parriott, Michael Allen 302
Parriott, Nina Adele 317
Parriott, Philip Stephen 115
Parriott, David Wayne 351, 363
Parriott, Martha A. 187
Parrott, Nancy Kay 115
Pascoe, Jeffrey Jo 166
Pascoe, Kimberly Ann 187
Pascoe, Keith Paxton 12, 310, 312, 313
Pate, Jeffrey Roy 115, 281, 294, 296

N

O

Beer ballot

DURING the spring Associated Student Government beer poll, Stanley Reagan, a Tompkinsville sophomore, leans over the table to put in a ballot. ASG held the poll to assess student interest in on-campus liquor.

Patterson, Cindy Sue 293
Patterson, Katrina Marlene 143, 241
Patterson, Kimberly Gays 166, 241
Patterson, Sara Beth 187
Patton, Kris Ann 298
Paul, Steven Joseph 143
Pavil, Kelly Denise 115
Payne, Cheryl Robin 143, 229, 242, 266
Payne, John 221
Payne, Jim 255
Payne, Mark Alan 250
Payne, N. Jo 115, 237
Pechter, Barbara Lee 125
Peck, Chris P. 245
Peck, Raymond Howard II 143
Pearson, Earl 210
Pearson, Karen Elizabeth 143
Peck, John 337, 313
Peck, Richard Raymond 337
Peck, Sean Allen 166, 238
Peel, Sherry Ann 143, 256
Peeples, Jeffrey B. 342
Peeples, Tamara Renee 273
Pekkan, Mustafa Hakan 143
Pellotte, Susan Mary 143
Pelt, Karen 207
Pendley, Carla Elizabeth 293
Pendley, Sherry Laster 115
Penick, Lisa Marie 187
Pennington, George M. 358
Pennington, Tony Glenn 166
People 88-193
People Division 88-89
Peoples, Erick Anthony 313
Pentecost, Frances 207
Performance with a twist 98
Perkins, Melinda Kay 242

Perkins, Tammy Ann 166
Perkins, Timothy Lee 294
Perry, Clavis Crest Jr. 126, 250
Perry, Donna Jean 187
Perry, Gwendolyn Renee 105, 166, 249, 301
Petene, Neil 238
Peterson, Brian Keith 265
Peterson, Deanna Lynn 115, 261
Peterson, Thomas John 187, 301
Peterson, Aaron 293
Peterson, Albert 225
Peterson, Barry Alan 302
Peterson, Brock Allen 261
Peterson, Elizabeth S. 188
Peterson, John 224
Peterson, Matthew Paul 354, 355
Peterson, Susan Muriel 188
Peterson, Toby 313
Petit, Joe Curtis 188
Pihl, Cheryl A. 188
Pittelman, Mark William 115, 270, 273
Pittman, Joseph Hayden 115
Pinkstaff, John Hugh 299
Pinkston, Carla Marie 290, 305
Pinkston, Jill Renee 188
Pitchford, Carl L. 250
Pittman, Phyllis Jean 115
Pittman, Frank 210
Pitts, Ramona Elizabeth 143
Pitts, Ronald Renee 143
Pitts, Lisa D. 115, 237
Play for pride 351
Pleasant, Julie Ann 115, 246-47
Pleasant, Karen Jean 188, 258
Plummer, Krista Jean 115
Poe, Reta 221
Poelking, Julie Marie 293
Poligiers, Colleen Marie 115
Pondexter, Elizabeth Lee 115, 256
Poland, Hugh Reid III 301
Pollard, Samuel Roderick 188
Pompen Squad 268, 269
Pool patrol leader 131
Poole, Eva Kathryn 143, 268
Poole, Greg 294

Physical Education Majors Club 266, 267
Pickett, Karen 215
Pickett, Douglas Melvin 270
Pickett, Leo 221
Pi Delta Phi 266
Pi Kappa Alpha 14, 17
Pi Kappa Phi 298, 299
Pi Omega Pi 266
Pie, Judith Ann 251
Pierce, John Robert 352, 353
Pierce, Sandra Lee 115
Pike, Lettie L. 143
Pile, Jerry Edwin 301
Pill, Judy 250
Pillow, Joseph Hayden 115
Pinkstaff, John Hugh 299
Pinkston, Carla Marie 290, 305
Pinkston, Jill Renee 188
Pitchford, Carl L. 250
Pittman, Phyllis Jean 115
Pittman, Frank 210
Pitts, Ramona Elizabeth 143
Pitts, Ronald Renee 143
Pitts, Lisa D. 115, 237
Play for pride 351
Pleasant, Julie Ann 115, 246-47
Pleasant, Karen Jean 188, 258
Plummer, Krista Jean 115
Poe, Reta 221
Poelking, Julie Marie 293
Poligiers, Colleen Marie 115
Pondexter, Elizabeth Lee 115, 256
Poland, Hugh Reid III 301
Pollard, Samuel Roderick 188
Pompen Squad 268, 269
Pool patrol leader 131
Poole, Eva Kathryn 143, 268
Poole, Greg 294

Pool, Roy G. 188
Poole, Anne Lindsay 22
Popelar, Maurice T. 10
Popham, David Joseph 287
Porter, Beverly Joan 137
Porter, Dana Jones 33
Porter, Daniel Bennett 242
Porter, Stacy Jean 232
Porter, Susan 317
Porter, Timothy Wayne 143, 273
Portman, Pamela Louise 115, 298
Powers, Tara Lane 115
Post, James David 273
Pove, James Louis Jr. 166, 246-47
Potter College 204-207
Potter, Gilbert Lee Jr. 188
Pounds, Frank Diane 270
Powell, Alisa Marie
Powell, Bill 337
Powell, Daniel Thrall 337, 375
Powell, Dana Kay 33, 115
Powell, Katherine Louise 115
Powell, Lisa Ann 302
Powell, Peter Owen 144
Powell, Robert K. 144
Powers, Steven Dale 276
Powers, Don 363
Practicing patience 198
Prada, Martha Isabel 188
Prather, Michael Ray 294
Pre-Law Club 268
Preston Fowlkes Rodeo 80-81
Price, Elizabeth 290
Price, Nancy Jean 116
Price, Timothy Gerard 116, 229
Price, Charles Louis 166, 313
Prins, Rudolph 210
Pritchett, Steven Bryant 353

Probas, Steve 207
Proffitt, Neke Lewanda 166
Proffitt, Kandace Renee 166, 266
Pratt, Barry Smith 244
Pratt, Matthew Virgil 166
Pratt, Scotty Wayne 144
Pratt, Vernon Lynn 229, 232, 241, 260
Pai Chi 268, 269
Primer, Patricia Ann 166
Public Administration Club 268, 269
Publications 262-263
Public Relations Student Society of America 268, 269
Puckett, Hugh 210
Puckett, Marcie Lynn 166
Puckett, Michelle A. 188
Puentes, Jose Ivanov 166, 256
Puentes, Juan M. 167, 354
Pugliese, Tom 330
Pullen, Terri Gail 271
Pulcinelli, Linda 210
Pulcinelli, Robert 215
Purd, Larry Allen 116, 351
Purcell, David Wayne 167
Purcell, Jane Norton 167, 264, 293
Pursell, Melanie 293
Pursuing excellence 218
Pyle, Daniel Scott 345

Quarcelino, Nancy 352, 353
Quarles, Mark Anthony 301
Quinn, Daniel Lee 302
Quinn, John Robert 20
Quisenberry, Susan Anne 167, 241
Rabbit, Bobyn Ann 144, 288
Racquetball Club 351
Rafferty, Karen Michael 144
Ragan, Johnny V. 160, 161, 238
Ragland, Stephen Warren 266
Ralph, Darlene 268
Ralston, Cindy Dale 144, 241
Ralston, Pamela Jo 116, 262
Ramsey, Amanda June 116, 268
Ramsey, Mark Alan 116
Ramsey, Bobbie Jo 228
Ramsey, Forest 221
Ramsey, Warren Scott 167
Randall, Susan 188, 353
Randolph, Larry Michael 167, 276
Rangel, Orlando 256
Ranger, Janice Burchett 257
Ransom, Simba Gayle 167
Rappaport, Jessica 14, 31, 238, 298, 304
Rarice, Nancy 210
Raskell, Joyce 221, 286
Rasner, Deep Edward II 144, 290, 305

Rabbit, Bobyn Ann 144, 288
Racquetball Club 351
Rafferty, Karen Michael 144
Ragan, Johnny V. 160, 161, 238
Ragland, Stephen Warren 266
Ralph, Darlene 268
Ralston, Cindy Dale 144, 241
Ralston, Pamela Jo 116, 262
Ramsey, Amanda June 116, 268
Ramsey, Mark Alan 116
Ramsey, Bobbie Jo 228
Ramsey, Forest 221
Ramsey, Warren Scott 167
Randall, Susan 188, 353
Randolph, Larry Michael 167, 276
Rangel, Orlando 256
Ranger, Janice Burchett 257
Ransom, Simba Gayle 167
Rappaport, Jessica 14, 31, 238, 298, 304
Rarice, Nancy 210
Raskell, Joyce 221, 286
Rasner, Deep Edward II 144, 290, 305

Ritter, Lucy 53
Ritter, Maria 270
Rix, Lynn Diane 189
Roach, Jeffrey Clinton 189
Roach, Rachel Bernice 189
Roark, Clyde 221, 345
Roark, Sue Evelyn 288
Roback, Trace Lynn 145
Robbins, Judy Ann 167, 241
Roby, Harry 221
Roberson, Michael Lynn 287
Roberts, Anna Katherine 117, 254
Roberts, Dave 49, 50, 306, 362, 363
Roberts, George 210
Roberts, Julia 225
Roberts, Kimberly Ann 117
Roberts, Leigh Anne 145
Roberts, Mark Louis 280
Roberts, Margaret Jane 189
Roberts, Marilyn Russell 167
Roberts' rules of order 362, 363
Roberts, Tami Dee 361
Robertson, Cathy Lynn 145, 280
Robertson, Lee 10, 224
Robertson, Sharon Lea 145
Robertson, Stephen Wayne 189
Robinson, John 328
Robinson, Faye 50, 224
Robinson, James 301
Robinson, John Eric 168, 293
Robinson, Yolande Jean 249
Robotics 202-203
Roby, Leslie Leigh 293, 304
Roden 80
Rodes, Rebecca Davis 189
Rodgers, Marley Daniel 189
Rodgers, Mitt Gayle 145
Rodriguez, Daniel A. 168, 256
Rodriguez, Janette 145, 266
Rodriguez, Alicia Eva 168, 246-47
Roe, Robert Darrell 263
Rogers, James Situation 189, 337
Rogers, Jay 301
Rogers, Jeffrey Lee 295
Rogers, Lisa Michele 117
Robles, Kathy A. 189, 238
Role reversal 216
Roll, Savannah Rae 145
Romanowski, Michael Steven 332, 333
Romero, Billy 82, 83
Rone, Lori A. 268
Rooks, Marisa Lynn 145
Roper, Orlando F. 313
Roppel, Steve Edward 246-47
Rosenbaker, Judy Head 117, 241
Rose, Barry L. 117, 273
Rose, Nick A. 328, 329
Rose, Ray 221
Rose, Terry Alan 252
Ross, Frances Karen 145
Ross, Karen Elizabeth 242
Ross, Susan Jane 117, 246, 247, 266
Rothchild, Edward A. II 117, 241, 301
Rouch, Scott Lawrence 313
Rowan, Carolyn Elizabeth 274
Rowe, Alice 224
Rowe, Camille Beth 146
Rowland, Barbara Sue 290
Rowland, Lisa Rene 117
Rowland, Tammy Ann 168, 290
Rowles, Alyson Yvonne 86, 87, 168, 293
Roy, Michael Alan 346, 349
Royce, Dale Alan 117
Ruby, James Robert 118, 241
Ruby, Jean A. 302
Rucker, Reginald Nathaniel 293
Rudolph, Evan 207
Rudolph, Lauren Gail 146, 302
Ruff, Kevin Ronald 301
Rugby Club 350, 351
Rush, Kenneth Owen 302
Russell, Kimberly Ann 189
Russell, Nancy 219
Russell, Patricia Rose 229
Russell, Teresa Anne 168
Ruswell Club 270
Rust, Jerry 225
Rutherford, Sue Lynn 168
Rutland, Deborah Ann 287
Rutledge, Barry Alan 168
Ryan, Philip Peter 339, 190

Ryan, Susan Beth 334, 335
Ryzon, Matthew Turner 190, 337
Sachleben, Tina Kay 118, 228
Sacksteder, Cindy 271
Sadler, Darrell Eugene 313
Sage-Snyder, Kimberly 250
Salata, Mark Thomas 347
Sall, Sara Jane 118, 293
Salinas, David G. 250
Salys, David Vernon 118, 258
Salys, Dee Ann 190
Sammons, Karen Sue 190, 342
Sample, Mary 224
Sampson, Richard Bartley 313
Sams, Julia Hall 287
Samuels, Mary Catherine 118
Sandage, Judith Denise 168
Sanderfur, J. T. 219
Sanderford, Paul 186, 314-319
Sanders, Anthony Ray 146
Sanders, James 224
Sanders, Kimberly Anne 146
Sanders, Marsha Elizabeth 146
Sanderston, Victoria Lee 236
Sanderly, George Thomas Jr. 242
Sanderly, Lisa Marie 190
Sanderly, Stacie Nell 190
Sapp, Jennifer Lynn 168
Sargent, Glenn Tracy 268, 301
Sarkson, John Michael 278
Sarodin, Isari 118, 322, 333
Sasse, Jeffrey Curtis 168, 294, 296, 297
Satterwhite, Doyle 225
Seals, Gregory Emily 253
Seay, Angela Kay 168
Seay, Lisa Rene 118, 246-47
Seay, Kimberly Ann 168, 241
Scabbard and Blade 270
Schalk, Stephanie Lynne 190
Schamuel, Cathy Renee 118
Scharlott, David John 271
Scheldigger, Robert Eugene 190
Scheldigger, Shannon M. 168
Schell, Ronald James Jr. 261
Schepers, Annette Marie 228
Schepers, Jeanne Marie 190
Scherman, Angela Diane 15, 146, 264, 288, 290
Schilling, Drew Joseph 118
Schmidt, Denise Ann 168, 354
Schmieder, Thomas Milan 127, 322, 333
Schmitt, Julia Joannette 146
Schmitt, Kimberly Anne 241, 264, 270
Schmuck, Paul Joseph 313
Schneider, Richard Volney 313
Schneider, Robert 210
Schneiders, Joseph A. II 190
Schucka Super Saver 55, 69
Schur, Les A. 249
Schubert, Laurel Katherine 168, 246-47
Schock, Jack 207
Schradler, Robert 221
Schram, David 23
Schroeder, Steven Vann 294
Schulte, Debra Rae 168
Schulte, Nancy Elizabeth 289
Schuman, Jill Marie 118
Schwarzkopf, Janet 207
Schwarz, Kenneth H. 168
Scott, Angela Lane 118, 253, 266
Scott, Eugene Ann 118, 232
Scott, Jana Marie Nutter 118, 244
Scott, Lani Lee 190
Scott, Melissa Chase 190, 293, 358
Scott, Michael Lawrence 313
Scott, Rebecca Ann 168
Scott, Steven 67
"Scram and Lock the Door" 24
Scruggs, Cedric Dexter 146
Scruggs, Marilyn Dawn 287
Scuba Club 351
Scummettes 226

Scuttan, Mark 338, 339
Sears, Laura Anne 168, 299
Seay, Tony F. 168
Secondino, Jody Ann 242, 252
Seeger, Ronald 210
Sego, Ben Thomas 146
Sego, Karen Louise 190
Seibor, Pamela Jane 69
Seitz, Jennifer Leigh 304
Seitz, Gerald Andrew Jr. 118
Sellers, Jill Ann 168
Seniors 90-127
Sepko, Craig Richard 168, 361
Serving a winning season 334
Setting the pace 342
Settles, Amanda Ruth 146
Severns, Nancy Lee 288
Sexton, Kenneth Earl Jr. 348, 349
Sexton, Kristan 293
Sexton, Scott Thomas 294
Sexton, Susan Dawn 146, 241
Shaan, Ahmad Jalani 118
Shacklette, Michael S. 257
Shank, Linda 210
Shanks, Frederick D. 190, 273
Shankweiler, Steve 363
Shannon, David 221
Sharif, Omar 118
Sharing the road 364
Sharp, Patricia Lynne 118, 268
Sharpe, Halia 212
Shartzer, Lisa Ruth 146, 276
Shaw, Derek Jr. 242
Shaw, Robert Hale II 249
Shaw, Elise Sue 118, 237
Shaw, Evan O. 190
Shaw, Kinalee Howard IV 190, 293
Shaw, Mary Lisa 146
Shaw, Michele Marie 367
Sheehan, George 328
Shedley, Vernon 221
Shets, Deborah Kay 73
Shelton, Jeffrey Todd 146, 3091
Shelton, Lesley Ann 265
Shelton, Thomas Victoria 118
Shepard, Joann 176, 177
Shepard, Cindy Lee 180, 181, 191
Shepard, Charlene E. 168
Shepherd, Charlene Louise 118, 241
Shepherd, Janet Ruth 118
Sherwood, Linda Lee 190
Sheryak, Margaret Karen 361
Shields, John Alexander 118, 249
Shifflett, Mary V. 168
Shikles, Larry Keith 349
Shiley, Lauren Carol 294, 313, 332, 333
Shipp, John Todd 270
Shipp, Marshall 118, 249, 287
Shipp, Rebecca Ann 258
Shively, Lora Ellen 118
Shirley, Laura Susan 276
Shirley, Leslie Dee 118, 229
Shirley, Lisa Fontaine 146, 229
Shirley, Margaret 263
Shore, Carmen Rene 147, 287
Shores, Diana Lee 126
Short, Jamie 23, 280
Shoulders, Mark Dexter 287
Shoulders, Terry Dwayne 118, 252
Shultz, Sandra Maran 266
Shouse, Byron Scott 241
Shouse, Robert Todd 287
Shull, Jeffrey Douglas 76-79
Shuecraft, Marquita L. 191
Shultz, Robert Lloyd 118, 238, 299
Shumaker, Jane Ann 352, 353
Shure, Sara Anne 191
Sibo, Michael Harold 147
Siddens, Mary Elizabeth 118
Sickbertson, Todd Alan 191
Sisk, Christopher Rodney 332, 333
Sigma Alpha Epsilon 14, 15, 300, 301
Sigma Chi 15, 17, 300, 301
Sigma Chi Derby Day 286, 300
Sigma Gamma Rho 300
Sigma Kappa 14, 302, 303
Sigma Nu 14, 302, 303
Sigma Phi Epsilon 17, 110, 302, 303
Sigma Tau Delta 271
Sile, Alan Daniel 294
Sile, William Alan 168
Simandis, Susan Q. 245

Simmons, Bruce C. 43
Simmons, Deborah Sue 144, 145
Simmons, Laura Denise 168, 288
Simmons, Tammy Jo 147
Simms, Dawn Elizabeth 191, 298
Simon, Paul Joseph 168
Simpson, Inaugene 221
Simpson, Robert 221
Simpson, Stan 328
Simpson, Taktha Susan 276
Simpson, Teresa Kay 287
Simpson, Timmy Daryl 188
Simpson, Vonda Kaye 191
Sims, Ann 224
Sims, Michael Lee 337
Sincclair, Henry Lee 276
Sipes, Robert Eric 276
Sipes, Scott Michael 293
Siremore, Davis Ann 239
Sizemore, Jill Renee 238
Skaggs, Cassette Jill 118, 246, 258
Skaggs, Kristi Lou 147
Skaggs, Lisa May 191
Skaggs, Teresa Kay 191
Skewen, Kim Sue 168
Skiles, Theresa Anne 191
Skisom, Deborah Ann 191, 254
Slattery, Timothy Eugene 273
Slaughter, Gina Renee 147
Slaughter, Jennifer K. 287
Slaughter, Linda Lester 266
Sledge, Maecia Ann 118
Sleet, Regina Anne 118
Sloan, Madonna Yvette 74
Sloan, Timothy Wayne 237
Small, David Lawrence 276
Smiley, Alonzo Jr. 313
Smiley, Deborah Lynn 28, 31, 118
Smith, Allen 294
Smith, Angela 256
Smith, Brian Steven 138, 139
Smith, Bryan Lindsay 356
Smith, Carl 293
Smith, Cheryl Ann 287
Smith, Cindy Lee 180, 181, 191
Smith, Cynthia Renee 126
Smith, Daniel 44
Smith, Derrick Charleston 147
Smith, Ed James 250, 264, 290
Smith, Fred 51, 266
Smith, Gary Benedict 147, 239
Smith, Gina Faye 168
Smith, Ira Richard 121, 228
Smith, Jack Daniel 118, 238, 276
Smith, Jerry Lee 337
Smith, Kelly Annette 147, 268
Smith, Linda Jean 191
Smith, Mary Angela 118
Smith, Melissa Jane 168, 293
Smith, Melonie Kay 191
Smith, Michael 325
Smith, Roger 302
Smith, Sharon Annette 168
Smith, Shawn Jeannine 147
Smith, Sheila Ann 168
Smith, Sheila Kaye 191
Smith, Sherry 361
Smith, Stephen Joseph 147, 86
Smith, Steven Ray 298, 299, 313, 361
Smith, Thomas Allen 147
Smith, Tami Lynn 35
Smith, Yvonne Marie 121
Snead, Katrina Diane 121
Snedden, Jeffrey Dean 168
Sneed, David Mitchell 107
Snell, Marilyn Miller 191
Snipp, Ann Michelle 242, 261, 276
Snider, Lisa Kim 147, 249, 266
Snider, Timothy Mark 191
Snodgrass, Anna Gaylene 121
Snyder, Mary Catherine 168, 233
Society of Mechanical Engineers 10
Society of Physics Students 273
Society of Professional Journalists 273
Solagan, Alan 147
Something for everyone 356
Songs of Salvation 155
Sorren, Sabrina Ann 121
Sophomores 152-171
Sorace, Paul Thomas 268
Souleyrette, Dale Alden 168

Southerland, Robert Keith 253
Southern dynasty 337
Southgate, Ken 276
Soyars, Lea Michele 121
Sparks, Cynthia Ann 147
Sparks, Stephanie Marie 162, 163
Sparks, Theresa Lynn 119, 342
Spearnock, Michael Charles 349
Special Forces 20, 273
Special Olympics 83
Speck, Angela Maria 33
Speck, Charles Louis 168, 242
Speculative Fiction Society 274
Speed, Bonnie Denise 121
Spier, Dawn Denise 121
Spence, Robert Neil 313
Spencer, Cindy Leann 52
Spencer, Kelley Diane 191
Spencelard, Jim 207
Spunk, Dan B. 301
Spino, Susan Laurel 168, 265
Spores, Carla S. 121
Spirits Masters 274
Sports 306-365
Sports Clubs 350-351
Sports Division 306-307
Sportmen Liquors 58
Spradlin, Angela Beth 168
Spring Sieg 14, 15
Spruon, Michael Douglas 290
Spruon, Christy Leigh 264
Spruon, James Duane 302
Spruon, William Trent 168
Squier, Michele Alana 168
Stafford, Joan Marie 147
Staged attractions 20
Stagner, Paul Alan 148
Stahl, Barry Wilson 191
Stahl, Richard Allen 168
Stalup, Carolyn Faye 148
Stambaugh, William Carl 191, 249
Stamper, Rebecca 210
Stamps, Jeffrey Thomas 121
Stancie, Barbara 210
Stanfield, Elizabeth G. 191
Stanfield, Jenn Diane 276
Stanfield, Lisa Renee 168
Stanfield, Robert Ernest 121
Stanford, Steve Ray 313
Stanley, Stephen Dwayne 121, 254
Staples, Dennis Arthur 121
Staples, Derek Leon 148, 241
Staples, Kimberly Dawn 191, 241, 281
Staples, Virginia Leigh 148
Starkov, Scott Allen 168, 238
Starks, Eric E. 294
Starks, Samuel Buell 229
Starler, James Kathryn 148
Starler, Jeff Lynn 148
Staying the course 352
Steamer, Michelle R. 191
Steele, Robert Louis 191, 276
Steele, Frank 30
Steele, Jay 266
Steen, Barry 274
Steen, Jacqueline Glee 191
Steff, N. Ruthe Miller 81
Steffey, Darryl Lee 36, 37
Stear, Kurt Anthony 302
Stear, Robyn Christine 121
Stephens, Bernice Cornell 121
Stephens, Mary 271
Stephenson, Polly Lynn 191
Stezhagan, Mary Ann 228
Stewart, Gregory Todd 121, 266
Stewart, Roy Daniel 294
Stewart, Charles 282
Stewart, Dan R. 293
Stewart, Harlan Lester 121
Stewart, James Howard 148
Stewart, Leslie Anne 121
Stewart, Michael Dean 121, 242
Stewart, Roy Daniel 294
Stickley, Mildred F. 121
Sticky, Fred 221
Stiles, Ellen Gerard 250
Stiles, Leslie Jean 148
Stinnett, Christopher S. 148
Stinnett, Gordon Lee 148
Stinnett, Kimberly Renee 168
Stinnett, Michael E. 148
Stinnett, Vicki Emelia 191
Stinson, Kevin Staley 301
Stinson, Lanta Kirby 191

Linear view

UNIVERSITY employee, Royce Dethridge, paints the lines on the practice football field. Dethridge was preparing the field on a late afternoon in early November.

Stockton, Sheila 255
Stockton, Jean Louise 148
Stockton, Sheila A. 191
Stogner, Susan Marie 293
Stogner, M. Eric 191
Stomps, Walter 207
Stone, Lisa Ann 169
Stone, Patricia Lynn 169, 295, 302
Stone, Richard 264
Stone, Thomas E. 191
Storey, Richard 51
Stovall, Dennis D. 301
Stovall, Heather 276
Stovall, Steve 276
Stovall, Teresa 276
Strader, Julie Ann 273
Strader, Wes 308, 309
Streitner, Charles 302
Strain, Elizabeth Louise 121, 276
Strain, Jo Evelyn 121, 238
Strange, Karen Ann 148, 253, 298
Stratton, Robert Jesse Jr. 121
Stream, Laurie Louise 28, 148, 280
Street, Elizabeth Ann 179
Streub, Randall Walter 349
Strode, Cynthia Lee 169, 236, 269, 298
Strode, Darryl Anthony 191
Strode, Melodie Jo 191
Strode, Melodie Jane 121
Strother, Lance Paul 169
Struck, Angela Marie 191
Strunk, Scott 294
Stuart, David Ray 294
Stuart, Shelby Lynn 266
Stuhls, Bethany Rene 4, 342
Student Council for Exceptional Children 274
Stucky, Deborah Dee 191
Stuenkel, Scott Allen 10, 121, 252, 273
Stump, Tracy Jean 169
Student Life 6-87
Student Life Division 6-7
Student National Educational Assoc. 274, 275
Stunggen, Laurie Ann 121
Stunggen, Linda Michelle 237
Stylish touch 84
Suhlett, Mena Lisa 121, 302
Sulaman, Izali 121, 127

Sullivan, Cynthia Anne 121, 308
Sullivan, Karen Denise 121
Summers, Chris 271
Sun Belt Conference 341
Survant, Joseph 200, 201
Suter, Marcus William 148, 332, 333
Sutton, Eva Marie 121, 246, 264, 302
Sutton, Gayle M. 191, 354
Swan, Terry Wilbur 276
Sweeney, Michael John 258
Sweeney, Susan Hartwell 148
Switzer, Denise Marie 148
Svenick, Heidi Marie 191
Swift, David Glenn 266
Switzer, Tracy Lee 169
Sydnor, Rejessa Green 121
Syers, Johanna D. 358
Seuba, Jolene Valentine 148

T

Taber, Robert Earl 191
Table for five 64
Taber, Kelly Reid 294
Tade, Dorell Lynn 149
Takacs, David Jon 301
Talbot, John M. 290
Talbot, Lesley Ann 121
Tallman 262, 263
Tallent, Randall Paul 317
Talley, Charles 80
Talley, Teresa 80
Tandy, Stephen Lawrence 169
Tammone, Donna Sue 191
Tarter, Jennifer B. 169
Tarter, Jennifer Faune 169, 256
Tarter, Kathryn Ann 126
Tarter, Michael Scott 122
Tate, Amy Lou 149
Tate, Boyce 207
Tate, Debra Lewis 149
Taylor, Amy Gay 169, 64, 65
Taylor, Craig 207, 281
Taylor, Donna Lynn 191
Taylor, Eric Herman 169

Taylor, Garry Fredrick 169, 273
Taylor, Glenda Faye 122
Taylor, James 221
Taylor, James Greg 313
Taylor, Jerome Dean II 287
Taylor, John 301
Taylor, John Jr. 325, 326, 330
Taylor, Livingston 3, 10, 12, 20, 21
Taylor, Paula Kay 169, 276
Taylor, Ricky Logan 122
Taylor, Sera 221
Taylor, Scott 283
Taylor, Stefan 325
Taylor, Vicki Lynn 122, 245
Tayman, John M. 261
Teddleton, Jeffrey Lee 122
Tennis 354-355
Tennil, Elizabeth Ann 149, 256
Tennil, Steven M. 67
Terry, Dallas Lee 289
Terry, Doris Elaine 122
Tette, Jay Ann 149, 287
Tharp, Jane Ann M. 149
Thayer, Stacey Leigh 191
Thayer, Joseph Fredrick 287
The Great Bike Race 6
The Greek touch 256-305
The little red book 247
The magic of movement 151
The Western influence 200
Theater 23-24
Themaadom, Chancel 126
Thessen, Laura Jo 191, 249
"This Ark Is Leaking" 24
Thomas, Bala Lynn 241
Thomas, Doris Lola 149
Thomas, Forrest Rodney 122
Thomas, Jenni Lynne
Thomas, Jay Dawn 241
Thomas, Karin Lee 317
Thomas, Keith Allen 122, 273
Thomas, Keith S. 287
Thomas, Kevin Duane 313
Thomas, Laura Lynn 169
Thomas, Lisa A. 191
Thomas, Patrick Allen 191
Thomas, Mary Jane 287
Thomas, Patrick Allen 191
Thomas, Raymond Joseph Jr. 122, 273
Thomas, Rodney 294, 297
Thomas, Stevie Earl 149

Thomas, Tina Marie 149, 288
Thomas, Todd Allen 149, 255
Thomas, Tracie Lee 293
Thomas, Ursula Ann 191
Thomas, Victoria Lynn 191
Thomason, Jack Lee Jr. 149, 270, 273
Thomson, David Lee 109
Thornley, Ronald Mike 149
Thornsen, Kimberly Ann 169, 237
Thompson, Amy Lynette 149, 241
Thompson, Ann Marian 149
Thompson, Byron 287
Thompson, Delta Margaret 38, 290
Thompson, Elizabeth Carol 232
Thompson, Glenn Reed 290
Thompson, Gregory A. 191
Thompson, Jacqueline Susan 122
Thompson, Jean Ellen 229, 232
Thompson, Jo Ann 262
Thompson, Lajana Gayle 149
Thompson, Linda Jo 149, 290
Thompson, Michelle Danette 149, 244, 256
Thompson, Myrl Thomas Jr. 169
Thompson, Peter H. 122
Thompson, Teresa Gayle 169
Thompson, Tom 351
Thompson, Vickie Leigh 191
Thornale, David Scott 191
Thorne, John Eric 191
Thornton, Brent Wayne 301
Thornton, Kevin 361
Thowfield, Charles David 232
Thowfield, William Paul II 122, 229, 232, 241, 260
"Through the Looking Glass" 24
Thurman, A. J. 50
Thurman, Charles Kendrick 149
Thurman, Evelyn 38, 221
Thurman, Scott B. 122
Thurman, Sherry Lee 122, 241
Tehener, Frederick W. 150
Tehener, Jacinta M. 192
Tehener, Woody 268, 271, 306
Telford, Rhonda Gal 150
Teller, Mitchell Rudersia 294
Tendle, Lisa Dawn 149, 292
Tippin, Richard Allen 349, 381
Tipton, Rhonda Louise 122
Tipton, Theresa Marie 123

Tidal, Robert W. 123
Tobin, Christine Marie 245
Todd, Jeff A. 309, 313
Todd, Jerry 81
Tobin, Joanna 123
Toliver, Kimberly Marabaz 192
Toliver, Risa Michelle 242
Tomala, Norman 210, 273
Tomes, Gail Lyn 192
Tomkins, Arthur A. 123, 275
Tomkins, Sharon Yvette 192
Tomkins, Teresa Kay 150
Tongue, Maki 351
Tonks, Kenneth James W. 25, 35
Tosley, David Michael 244
Too many close calls 320
Too S.O.O.N. for change 282
Tori, Maria A. 284
Tonik, Marisa Teresa 169
Tomey, Linda Sue 280
Towell, David 285
Towell, Karen 288
Towery, Teresa Elaine 255, 257
Towne, Lee Ella 170
Toye, Lawrence 51, 192, 288
Tracy, Derek Matthew 39, 123, 290
Trapasso, Michael 210
Traughter, Kimberly Ann 123
Trautman, William 219
Trautman, Marcus Todd 170
Travis, Darryl Gene 324, 325, 327
Trevila, Edmund Elmer 170, 246-47
Trent, Frederick Scott 311, 313
Trent, Elizabeth Mae 268, 240-41
Trie, Kimberly Ann 192
Trotman, Richard 205
Troxell, Cindy 276
True, Jeff 354, 355
Truman, Linda Ann 150
Tucker, Connie Lynn 150, 246, 255
Tucker, Sara Elizabeth 150, 245
Tucker, Steven 273
Tucker, Tracy 290
Tudor, Robert Harold 150, 302
Tug of War 14
Tummons, Michael Don 283
Turner, Terry Wayne 123
Turner, Donald Elias 299
Turner, Donna 361

Turner, Jeremy Franklin 170, 228, 246-47
Turner, Karen Ann 192
Turner, Kimberley Jay 170, 246-47
Turner, Leigh Ann 229
Turner, Mark Vincent 354, 355
Turner, Marvin Jeffrey 287
Turner, Thomas Matthew 219
Turner, Tracy Elise 170, 238, 254, 276
Turner, Yvonne 354, 355
Tyler, Brenda J. 170
Tyler, Lisa Mary 170
Tyre, Thomas Kelly 150, 229, 241, 268

U

Uchakura, Festus Ewaka 150
Ulrich, Tharion A. 158
Ultra-light 6-9
Underhill, Jacqueline E. 123
Underwood, Samuel Scott 354, 355
Underwood, Sherrie A. 170
United Black Students 274, 275
University Center Board 25, 25, 276, 277
University Jazz Ensemble 34
Upton, Sherry Ann 170
Urie, Kenneth 215, 266
Utter, Marianne C. 170
Uveges, Joe 215
Uzie, Michelle Ann 150

V

Vaden, Jonathan Lee 294
Vander Heyden, Terry 207, 262
"Vanities" 24

W

WARQ 326
WBKO 55
Waddle, Ann L. 150
Wade, Sara Ann Elizabeth 170
Waggoner, Sharon Kay 241, 246-47
Wagoner, James Randall 124
Wagoner, Julie Ann 150
Wahl, Keith A. 124
Walden, Mark Stephen 150, 276
Walbridge, Ronald Edwin 301
Waldrop, Sarah Elizabeth 192
Walker, Dave 26
Walker, Eric Alan 150, 301
Walker, Larry 313
Walker, Phil 26
Walker, Robert 192
Walker, Rose Marie
Walker, Sharon Ann 192
Walker, Susan G. 192
Walker, William B. 287
Wallace, Amelia Gertrude 124
Wallace, Jeffrey Clark 124, 235
Wallace, Mary 124
Wallace, Mary Margaret 170
Wallace, Michael Todd 150
Wallace, Rodger William 353
Walsh, Angela Marie 150
Walsh, Richard Ella 276, 373
Walsh, Susan Annette 150
Walters, Lisa Diane 170
Walters, Mary Lou 192
Walshall, Thomas P. 192
Walton, Dreams Denise 124
Weninger, Sheila Marie 238, 298
Wenner, Susan Marie 150, 288
Wente, Steven Richard 313
Went, Carole Lynne 298
Werhime, Kelly Sue 192
Wernig, Anthony L. 192
Wernington, Cheryl Dawn 150, 298
Wernicke, Jeffrey Paul 124, 232, 233, 241, 273
Wesley Central High School 61
Warren, Christian L. 299
Warren, Paula Jo 150
Washburn, Amy Lynne 150
Wasom, Earl 224
Water Polo Club 350
Watson, Patricia L. 170
Watson, Benedict Joseph II 150, 293
Watson, James Michael 192
Watson, Joseph McGee 192
Watkins, Brad M. 192, 241
Watkins, Cheryl Denise 249
Watkins, Chris 238
Watkins, Dale J. 192
Watkins, Daniel Byron 252
Watkins, James 294
Watkins, Laura Gayle 170
Watkins, Lee 50, 224
Watkins, Richard Alan 192, 294, 297
Watson, Cynthia Diane 287
Watson, Martha 210
Watson, Patricia Kay 124
Watson, Sandra Sue 69
Watt, Richard Malden 192, 275
Watts, David 219
Watts, Mary Jane 253
Watts, Susan Elizabeth 192
Wax, Carol Latimer 38
Wax, Richard 221
Weather beaten 52
Weaver, Bill 2
Weaver, Cynthia Marie 192
Weaver, John 221
Webb, Donna Rhea 290
Webb, Lynne 276
Webb, Neil Lynn 170
Webb, Nini 289
Webb, Sherry Lynne 233
Webb, Sympa Elizabeth 124
Wehling, Jennifer Ann 124
Weightlifting Club 351
Weimer, Deborah Kristin 288
Weismann, Michael James 313

Welborn, Kim Blaine 170, 288
Welch, Janet Kay 192
Welch, John Foster III 298
Welch, Patrick Randall 313
Wellander, Paul D. 254, 294
Weller, Lisa Lyn 287
Welman, Keith John 302
Wells, Amy Lynn 288
Wells, Angela S. 192
Wells, Belinda Carol 124
Wells, Carol 38
Wells, Geneva Gayle 268
Wells, Gregory Marcus 253
Wells, Norman David 299
Wendt, Donald 210
Wendy's Daily News 10-K Classic 4, 328-331
Wenzler, Christopher A. 39, 124
Werner, Jody Lee 293
Wesley Foundation 276
West, Anita Marie 150, 290
West, Dayna Jo 192
West, Edward Wayne 192
West, Eric Keith 313
West, Gary 224
West, Jan Michelle 290
West, Janet Sue 298
West, Susan 224
West, Tate 293
West, William Terry 301
Westbrook, Christopher D. 170
Westfield, Bruce Wayne 287
Western Affair 35
Western Christian Fellowship 276
Western Kentucky University Dance Company 24, 28-31
Western Players 280
Western Sociological Society 280
Weston, Marie Vaughn 124, 259
Westray, Stacy Faye 274, 356
Weitzel, Joni Renee 150
Whalen, James Anthony D. 124, 238
Whaley, Lisa Bernice 192
Wheat, Dallas 210
Wheat, Lane Leah 124
Wheeler, Amy Lois 354
Wheeler, James 293
Wheeler, Patricia Ann 242
Wheeler, Teresa Lee 150
Whelan, Lisa Gail 150
Whicker, Garth Allen 246-47, 258
Whitaker, David 49, 205
White, Alan Lee 281
White, Alisa Dianne 160
White, Bart 15, 207, 301
White, Carrie Elaine 124, 275
White, Crystal Joan 64-65
White, Ethel Anne 192
White, Ivy 55
White, Kelly Wayne 124
White, Larry 221
White, Lovoria B. 170
White, Marilyn Jill 150
White, Robin Joy 124, 242, 274
White, Sara Ruth 124, 228
White, Shannon Kimberly 124
Whited, Mark 276
Whitely, Michele Janeane 170
Whitenden, David R. 360, 3671
Whitfield, Angela Faye 192
Whitfield, Mary Leale 192, 288
Whitfield, William Brian 170
Whitfield, Joseph Dalton 344
Whitley, Trey 293
Whitmer, Elaine Dale 192, 294
Whitmer, William Carl 170, 255, 276
Whitney, Joel Douglas 313
Whittaker, George 325
Whittinghill, Jeffrey Glen 170
Whittinghill, Pamela Sue 170
Whittle, Kenneth Gary 124
Whitman, Mary Ellen 124, 256
Whitlock, Margaret Elaine 150
Whitman, Greg S. 337
Whittington, Steven Todd 124, 248, 278
Wilcox, Suzanne Kelly 273
Wilcoxson, Angela Rhea 170, 249
Wilda, Christine Kay 192
Wilda, Jerry 224, 260
Wilda, Joyce 221
Wilda, Wendy Julianne 239
Wilhelm, Lisa Mae 290, 304
Wilk, Joseph Peter 124

Wike, Steve Joseph 290
Wilkinson, Anthony Wayne 192, 275
Wilkinson, Cheryl Jean 124
Wilkins, Natalie Sue 287
Wilkins, Suzanne Denise 170, 290
Wilkinson, David 224
Wilkinson, Elizabeth Ann 124
Willard, Anna Kathryn 192
Willard, Paula Kay 150, 302
Willen, Anthony D. 301
Willert, Michael Lee 170, 270, 271
Williams, Anna Coleman 288
Williams, Barbara Kay 192
Williams, Bonnie 210
Williams, Bruce Edward 124
Williams, Charlotte L. 241, 268
Williams, Cheryl Denise 170
Williams, David Glenn 170
Williams, Deborah 210
Williams, Edward 293
Williams, Hank Jr. 6, 20, 21, 22, 35, 60
Williams, Jerry I. 238
Williams, Jerry Lynn 124
Williams, Jerry Warren 128, 255
Williams, John 273
Williams, Joseph Earl 124
Williams, Katrina Lynne 124
Williams, Luanne 150
Williams, Michael Scott 150
Williams, Monica 192
Williams, Palas Depline 361
Williams, Penny Dee 170
Williams, Rebecca Lynn 192
Williams, Scott Matthew 124, 273
Williams, Sheryl 318
Williams, Stan 301
Williams, Tamela Jean 150, 232
Williams, Thomas 299
Williamson, Jennifer S. 288
Williamson, Mark Edward 313
Willis, Gina Renee 287
Willis, Michael E. 292
Willis, Penny Sue 150
Willis, Portia L. 287
Willis, Ramona Rae 150, 241
Willis, Scott 150, 302
Willoughby, Brenda Carol 150, 245
Willoughby, Mary Bishop 228
Willis, Meredith Louise 124, 275
Willis, Robert Vincent 150
Wilson, Amy Gay 382
Wilson, Andrea Adele 170
Wilson, Brad 238
Wilson, Cari Rea 276
Wilson, Caryn Lynn 287
Wilson, Chari Neil 150, 244, 53
Wilson, Doris J. 192
Wilson, Elaine Renee 280
Wilson, Gordon 210
Wilson, Jeffrey Owen 124
Wilson, Jesse 229
Wilson, Keith 302
Wilson, Lena 85
Wilson, Mary Kate 170
Wilson, Melissa Ann 192
Wilson, Rickie Wren 125
Wilson, Ronnie Glenn 192
Wilson, Twana Dawn 170
Wimsatt, Teresa Sue 150, 253
Winchell, Donna Lynn 192
Winhorst, Charles Lynn 125, 232, 238
Wingate, Sandra K. 302
Wingfield, James 51
Wings, Daphne Lee 302
Winkhofer, Kimberly Ann 125, 258, 260, 281
Winstead, Jerald Alan 192
Winterheimer, Karen Sue 241
Wladon, William Harold Jr. 150
Wise, Leigh Anne 302
Withrow, Jerry Maxton 299
Withers, Melinda 170, 288
Withers, Neil Elizabeth 35, 170, 254, 342
Withrow, Barbara Elaine 170
Witter, Diane Lynne 245
Witt, Michael Seles 125, 302
Witte, Dianne Hendro 192
Wolff, Clarence 273
Wolff, David Allen 72, 73, 192, 293
Womack, John David 125, 237
Womack, Tommy Glynn 110, 111
Women's basketball 314-319

Women's Softball Club 351
Wood, Carmen Suzanne 158, 159, 170
Wood, Kathryn Ann 170
Wood, Kimberly Elizabeth 150
Woodall, Sarah Mae 150
Woodard, Beth Ann 170
Woodburn, James Alan 287
Woodlee, Beth Ann 170
Woodley, Ronda Dee 125, 237
Woodrum, Kelly Lee 43
Woods, Dolores Ann 237, 252, 273, 278
Woodward, Richard Wayne 170
Woodward, Robin Michele 170, 61
Wooley, Jeffrey Brent 125, 256, 276, 281
Wooten, Marcus Dale 252, 273
Word, Edward 284
Wormington, Cheryl 295
Woroneck, Nancy 171
Woroneck, Sarah 171
Worham, Anne Elise 288, 358
Worthington, James 210
Wright, John Kevin 313
Wright, Karen Michelle 170
Wright, Kimberley Marie 150
Wright, Ricky Dean 125
Wright, Tina Lisa 38, 125, 275
Writing and Thinking Across the Curriculum Task Force 216, 246-47
Writing their future 262
Wuchner, Carla Jane 126
Warner, Bob 207, 257
Wyatt, John William 126, 280

Y

Yates, Barry Eugene 126
Yates, Lolita Carol 150, 258
Yax, David Allen 150
Yangle, Jonathan Scott 354
Yaker, Jennifer Lynn 290
Yalvington, Lance Lewis 305
Yoder, Nathan E. 40, 41, 264
York, Samuel Joseph 313
York, Walter Eugene 311, 313
Young Bankers of Kentucky 281
Young, Carol Anne 302
Young, Cynthia D. 316-319
Young Democrats 281
Young, Jackie Allen 302
Young, Karen Eileen 126, 236, 237
Young, Karla Danielle 298
Young, Richard Alan 150
Young, Rodney Earl 83
Young, Ruth Rogers 228
Young, Susan Lynette 192
Young, Sylvia Ellen 257
Young, Wesley Ann 280
Yount, Justice Kaye 126, 238
Yount, Karen Lynn 170
Yount, Penny Faye 192
Yuga, Kai 274
Yusuf, Azah 126

Z

Zacharias, Donald 12, 26, 38, 197, 225, 255, 326, 327
Zee, Terri Lee 90
Zaglan, Jamal M. 126
"Zaphrus" 134
Zeta Phi Beta 303
Zikmund, Joan Marie 150
Zimmer, Lisa A. Briedwell 126
Zimmer, Merrill Alan 287
Zimmerman, Gerald Michael 126

EXERCISE is the key to football players' stamina. However, the fall heat often made practice nearly unbearable.

— Bobby Roe

AFTER scoring a touchdown, Mickey Lewis, a Glasgow junior, is congratulated by Glendell Miller, an Owensboro sophomore. Miller was out of the game due to an injury.

— Bobby Roe

PROGRAMMING the baseball scoreboard computer are coaches Joel Murrie and Rick Tippin. The scoreboard had limited graphic capabilities.

— Bobby Roe

the TOUCH...

We waved our red towels.

Fans came to Diddle Arena or Smith Stadium to cheer on the Hilltoppers. Tempers sometimes turned red hot, as was evident at a highly publicized fight among fans and players at a December basketball game.

A new touch was felt in the football program as Dave Roberts moved 60 miles north from Vanderbilt to assume the head coach duties. Area media sent out the word that the changeover would mean a new perspective for Western.

Campus and community messages flashed across the newly installed computer scoreboard by Nick Denes Field.

Whether celebrating a victory or agonizing over a defeat, the effect of athletics on the campus could not be ignored.

DISAPPOINTMENT shows on the faces of Lory Palmer, a Springboro, Ohio, junior, and Perry Hines, a Drakesboro senior. Western lost to Murray State, 7-3.

— Bobby Roe

the TOUCH...

Where there's smoke there's fire. Unfortunately. Crowds rushed to the amphitheater in March to watch Bowling Green firemen battle two separate blazes started by arsonists. Cellos burned and euphoniums melted.

The true red spirit was demonstrated by art students who put together their annual student show even though many of their works were destroyed in the fourth-floor studios.

Smoke of a different nature wafted through Diddle Arena on Feb. 23 as Loverboy presented Western's first rock concert in years.

There were good times and bad times, times to laugh and times to cry, but the touch of red was always present.

AS smoke rises, Loverboy member Doug Johnson plays before a crowd of 5,863. Loverboy performed in Diddle Arena Feb. 23.

— Mike Reiff

AT the second fine arts center fire, a fireman checks the course of the blaze. Fires were set on the first and third floors.

— Scott Vick

USING a ladder to gain access to the fourth floor of the fine arts center, a fireman climbs to fight the flames. The first fire, which was set March 23, caused about $25,000 in damage.

— Bobby Roe

ALPHA Delta Pi member Amy Wilson, a Lexington senior, gets a hug from a sister after an injury at Powderpuff football. Wilson ran into a photographer while running onto the field.

— Mike Healy

DELTA TAU
DELTA members Steve King, a Hopkinsville senior, and Ray Abell, a Wickliffe freshman, float down Barren River in inner tubes. The Delts had an annual rush party on the river.

— Kim Kolark

FRONT ROW — Tonya Berkley, Melanie Mietz. SECOND ROW — Kristen Reeder, Terry Vander Heyden. BACK ROW — Roger D. Cunningham, John Tayman, Gary Briggs, Bobby Roe.

Colophon

Volume 61 of the Western Kentucky University Talisman was printed by Taylor Publishing Company, Dallas, Texas, in agreement from an open-bid contract with the Office of Purchasing, Western Kentucky University.

Paper stock is 80 lb. enamel Mead. Endsheets stock is Vivi Tex, Gray No. 14.

The cover base material is gray Lexatone with a red silkscreen applied. The grain is shoe grain. "Talisman" is in 60 pt. Goudy Handtooled. The rest of the type was hand drawn. All type is embossed.

Pages eight and nine were printed in matte black with varnished tool lines.

Spot colors used were Pantone 187C on pages 308-313, and 468C in the opening, closing and division pages.

All candid and feature photographs were shot by student photographers. Sports team pictures were provided by the university's Sports Information office. All color reproductions were individual separated transparencies shot at ASAs ranging from 25 to 6400. Photographers were paid per picture used and supplied their own film and paper. Writers were paid per story. All individual portraits were taken by Graham Studios of Bowling Green, in agreement from an open-bid contract with the Office of Purchasing.

Souvenir was used for all body copy and most headlines. Helvetica was used on pages 20-26. The title page, contents, headlines on endsheets, opening and closing, division pages and index guide letters are Goudy Handtooled. The body copy is 10/10.5. The cutlines are 8/8.5 with a bold lead-in. Page numbers are 14 pt. bold with folios set in 6 pt. italic. Quote boxes were set in 14 pt. with attribution in 12 pt. italic. Initial letters were 60 pt. Souvenir italic with a 20 percent screen shadow.

Hairlines, ½ pt., 1 pt. and 2 pt. tool lines were used throughout the book. Screens were in 10, 20 and 40 percent. The index is set in 7/7.5 and is a record of every person whose photo or name is in the book.

The editor was selected at the end of the 1983 spring semester by the University Publications Committee after a review of student applications. The editor selected the rest of the staff after reviewing applications and holding individual interviews.

Several staff members attended the College Yearbook Workshop at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, and the Associated Collegiate Press convention in Chicago.

The Talisman had a press run of 2,100 and was sold to students for $10.50 in the fall and for $15.75 after October 1, 1983. The Talisman editors supervised the printing of the four-color pages at Taylor's plant in Paoli, Pa., preceding the fall delivery. The book is partially funded by the university and is under the auspices of the Office of University Publications.

This is the thirteenth consecutive volume to be copyrighted.

Staff

Editor Roger D. Cunningham
Academics editor Tonya Berkley
Chief photographer Bobby Roe
Copy editor Melanie Mietz
Greeks editor Kristen Reeder
Layout and design editor John Tayman
People editor Gary Briggs
Editorial assistants Julie Dusseau

Julie Ezell
Mack Humphreys
Becky Leopard
Patti Loizzo
Susan May
Bob Walker

Contributing artists Steve Finlay
Beth Hamilton
Judy Robbins

Staff photographers ... Ron Bell, Todd Burris, Todd Buchanan, Mike Collins, Kevin Eans, T.J. Hamilton, Mike Healy, Tony Kirves, Greg Lovett, Mary Ann Lyons, Rick Musacchio, Bobby Roe, Chris Sharp, John Stewart, Ray Thomas, Alan Warren, Tammie Wilson
Contributing photographers ... Jon Allen, Patty Di Rienzo, Camille Forrester, Gary Harilson, John Howser, Kim Kolarik, Amy Miles, Mike Reff, Linda Sherwood, Bob Skipper, John Tayman, Scott Vick
Staff writers ... Tonya Berkley, Gary Briggs, Mike Elrod, Susan Harmon, Jennifer Hatfield, Lori Medley, Melanie Mietz, Jessica Rapaport, Kristen Reeder, John Tayman

Contributing writers ... Lou Bloss, Jill Brown, Lorri Burchett, Chad Carlton, Roger D. Cunningham, Craig Dezern, Christy Drucker, Julie Dusseau, Matt Emery, Ann Gardner, Carolyn Gay, Steve Givan, Doug Gott, Mack Humphreys, Paige Jones, Julius Key, Steve Koontz, Ewan Leslie, David Major, Mary Meehan, Grace Moore, Jonathon Newton, Tami Peerman, Steve Paul, Candace Roberts, Cathy Rose, Kay Sallee, Linda Sherwood, Angie Struck, Kim Swift, René Vance, Mark Walden, Karen Whitaker, Kim Wilkerson, Brent Woods

Sales staff Julie Dusseau
Suzanne Hawkins
Rod Hutcheson
Shelia Norfleet
Dawn Stone
David Wolff

Adviser Terry Vander Heyden

